Southwestern Ontario Feels Tail of Storm

CHICAGO (AP) — Tornadoes and tornado-force winds plunged viciously into parts of the U.S. midwest, south and southwest Monday, leaving at least seven persons dead, up to 100 injured, and causing millions of dollars of property damage.

Up to 4½ inches of rain accompanied the storm in Texas. Hail stones ranged from one to two inches in diameter. Wind velocity was recorded at 105 miles an hour at Joliet, Mich.

In the path of scattered storms and tornadoes were Illinois, where four persons died; Indiana, one dead; Michigan, one dead; Mississippi, one dead, Kentucky, Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Tennessee, Alabama and Ohio.

The storms spread into southwestern Ontario, causing an hours-long power blackout at Chatham and occasional fires started by lightning. In London two homes in the city were hit by lightning right during a thunderstorm that swept southwards through the district. No one was injured and damage was light.

Lightning and lightning apparently started a fire in northwest London, travelled along a clothes line and set the kitchen window of a nearby house and burned out two mattresses inside.

In the U.S., the chain of destruction started in southern Missouri with a series of tornado alerts. Rain and powerful winds then whipped into St. Louis and adjoining communities, downing utility lines, damaging homes, uprooting trees and injuring dozens of persons.

DARK DURING DAY

The storm moved into southern Illinois, sending 12 small communities before it.

Before it hit Springfield, Ill., where one person was killed, the area was dark as midnight."

Clyde Lewis, principal of Cleveland Grade School, saw the approaching storm and ordered his children into the building.

"When the stations have become fully established, they will be in a position to meet this problem with the new CRTC regulations requiring 55 per cent Canadian content in half-hour-week period throughout the year."

Meanwhile, they would need relief this year.

In effect, the 20-week reduction in the general quota means reverting to the 45-per-cent Canadian content requirement that had been in effect for the period from April 1. Presumably the quota will rise to 55 per cent after Oct. 13.

The BBG announced it has adopted an amendment increasing the maximum permissible commercial time on a half-hour sponsored Canadian program by 60 seconds to five minutes, 15 seconds. Proportionate increases would apply at lower on shorter self lengths.

BBG REVISES CONTENT QUOTA OF CANADIAN TV

Reduced to 45 P.C. During Summer

OTTAWA (CP) — The 55-per - cent Canadian content quota for television would be reduced to 45 per cent during the summer months under a proposal announced Monday by the Board of Broadcast Governors.

Originally the governors proposed a 40-per-cent Canadian quota of 45 per cent starting next Oct. 1 and 50 per cent a year later. But they said Monday they were "impressed" with arguments that this would destroy needed program flexibility.

Five months ago, on Dec. 7, the board had issued an unqualified statement saying it had no intention of imposing or putting into effect, any change in the 55-per-cent rule that became effective April 1.

CONVINCED TO CHANGE

Monday, the governors indicated that the change of heart followed study of factual information supplied to them by the private operators of the individual TV stations, which have been on the air about 18 months.

The BBG statement said it is "particularly difficult" for the stations to maintain their Canadian content in the summer months, when the TV audience tends to fall off, advertising revenues decline and provision must be made for staff vacations.

CANADA DELAYS AGREEMENT TO SELL URANIUM

Second Thoughts On British Contract

LONDON (CP)—Canada was reported today to have had second thoughts about signing a contract to sell 12,000 tons of uranium to Britain.

Reliable informants said Canadian and British negotiators had worked out most of the points of the proposed agreement when Canada decided to delay signing.

The draft agreement was the outcome of protracted negotiations over a British letter of intent dated May, 1957, for 12,000 tons of the metal for the United Kingdom atomic energy program.

Canada had hoped originally to get roughly $152,000,000 for the uranium—about $5 a pound.

A British atomic energy authority wanted to state down both the quantity and the price of the metal. Its negotiators also apparently wanted to stretch out the delivery period originally 1963 to 1966—over a greater period of years.

The long, hard negotiations over the British letter of intent got under way more than a year ago. Earlier this year, Canada sent a high - powered delegation of negotiators to Europe to carry on the talks.

HAS 'SECOND THOUGHTS'

Informants said the draft of the sales contract was completed roughly two weeks ago. The two sides were said to be ready to sign then when Canada had, as sources here put it, "second thoughts."

The British atomic energy declined to comment on the report.

Sources here were at a loss to explain the reasons for the holdup in signing. One theory advanced was that the impending Canadian election may have

Narcotics Worth Up to $6 Million Seized Aboard Royal Navy Cruiser

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—U.S. customs agents and British authorities are investigating an international narcotics ring responsible for millions of dollars worth of heroin seized aboard the British cruiser Belfast.

The value of the seizure was estimated to be somewhere between $2,000,000 and $6,000,000, Chief U.S. customs agent Frank Long announced the seizure Monday.

The attempt to smuggle some 13¾ pounds of heroin and 26 pounds of marijuana into San Francisco was part "of a huge coup" by an international smuggling ring," Long said.

The British consulate and Royal Navy spokesman announced the arrest of two of nine crew members in possession of the narcotics. They were identified as PO Ah Lee Wong, 35, and Kan Ping Kwok, 27, a civilian cashier aboard, both of Hong Kong.

Some $10,000 worth of undeclared jade and diamonds was turned up in sugar canisters. The guns were seized and 18 other crew members were restricted to the ship in their condemnation.

Long indicated that prosecution is a matter for the British, since most of the contraband was landed in the United States and it was seized by the ship's officers, not by U.S. agents.

The agent said the Belfast's officers, headed by Capt. Morgan Giles, reported the case to customs and narcotics agents when it arrived at the ship docked here. The ship's officers and British authorities are cooperating fully in shore investigations aimed at cracking the ring, he said.

Consul-General Randle Reid, Britain said the matter of disciplining the crew members could come before an admiralty court when the ship reaches Plymouth, England.

The ship's crew told ship's officers they were supposed to drop the narcotics in Honolulu but missed their contact. They said they brought the dope aboard at Singapore, according to officers.

Long said the heroin has an actual worth of $456,000 but would bring far more on the addict market.

Communist Nations Stage Traditional May 1 Rallies

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Labor's traditional May Day holiday was celebrated with rallies, speeches and parades on both sides of the Iron Curtain today as police stood guard in Berlin, Buenos Aires, Tokyo and other potential trouble spots.

The rockets ranged from tiny, 10-foot ground-to-air missiles to dark green 60 - foot weapons with Rodion Malinovsky - ranged striking power.

The air types of rockets on view included one first seen last November in a parade to mark the 1917 Bolshevik revolution. It was a 50-foot rocket encased in a launching pipe 10-feet wide and drawn by an eight-wheeled truck.

There were four of these in today's parade compared with one last November.

There was one surprise to the Western military observers who watched the display: was the appearance of several self - propelled 85-millimetre guns with caterpillar treads instead of tires. The 30-minute parade, however, seemed to be less of an aura of bellicosity than usual.

The facade of the historical museum, at the end of Red Square, was dominated by a banner calling for "a mighty upsurge in agriculture" instead of the usual "forward to the victory of Communism."

Before the parade began the Soviet defence minister, Marshal Rodion Malinovsky, told the assembled troops that Russia and its allies are always ready to crush any aggressor who dared attack the Soviet or other Communist countries.

He said that Russia, faithful to its Leninist principle of Controversy Over Fallout Leaves Many Puzzled

It finds many intelligent persons confused and puzzled, especially over the disagreements among scientists.

A fair-say fallout doesn't hurt humans at all. Many say there's no problem or probably some effects, but so small they can be ignored. Another group says fallout from the new Soviet series alone might cause 30,000 deaths around the earth.

How quickly adds a vital qualification—that this would happen during the next 2,000 years. This would average to 150 a year, a figure so small as to be lost in the annual shuffle of births and deaths.

Scientists say only make highly educated guesses based on indirect evidence. And the fallout controversy is highly colored with emotional, humanitarian, military and political considerations.

Scientists aren't positive yet whether the radiation from fallout, admittedly small, really harms human heredity and health, or how little radiation it takes to do so.

Here at the Oak Ridge National Laboratory, Dr. William L. Russell and associates have analyzed 1,000,000 mice since 1948. They chee se principles concerning the effects low-level radiation might have on human heredity.

Scientists have some guidepost, but no hard information. For example, they know human bodies have always been vulnerably a bit radioactive, since life began.

This is caused by natural or background radiation. About 1,000 cosmic rays a minute strike the average human at sea level—and 2,000 a minute if you live at mile-high altitude.

All this a natural radiation gives us, on the average, a dose of about three to four rontgens (units of radiation) in 30 years. That's equal to about 12 to 16 highly efficient chest X-rays.

All the radiation from fallout from all tests thus far has increased this exposure by about five per cent, on the average, most experts agree.

So, if fallout is doing anything to human inheritance, it is doing only a little more this way than the radiation which has always existed.

NUCLEAR ARMS RULED OUT BY LIBERAL PARTY

Not Needed at Present Time Claim

OTTAWA (CP) — A flexible defence policy ruling out nuclear weapons for Canada "on the basis of present information" was announced Monday by the Liberal party.

It was the last major election plank chalked down by the Liberals, who through public speeches by Leader Lester B. Pearson and distribution of policy statements in the last several hours identified the party's position in other fields.

While stressing the need for strengthening conventional forces and limiting the spread of the nuclear club, the policy statement leaves several options open for a change of policy in the future.

Much of it is based on the defence policy resolution passed by the national Liberal rally here in January, 1961. It provides for three main points.

It starts:

"Defence policy cannot be fixed for all time. Decisions must be made in the light of changing circumstances as they become known. . . .

"If new policy government will not hesitate to adapt its defence policy to changing conditions. . . ."

TO 'PREVENT WASTE'

Later, in a promise to prevent waste, the policy statement says: "We should constantly re-assess the changing facts of the situation . . . to ensure that strictly what is necessary, on a cost basis, is provided for Canadians, which include those in the United Nations and in NATO."

With say the spread of nuclear weapons, "in Canada or elsewhere, would aid in any way increase, in present circumstances, the ultimate power of deterrence. This is the supreme power of U.S. nuclear weapons as described at the Ottawa Conference, a safeguard against all-out attack.

"On the basis of present information, Canada has the defence policy of a new Liberal government will not require Canada to become a nuclear power by the manufacture, acquisition or the basing of weapons under Canadian or American control."

A condition then is attached:

"A new Liberal government will, however, reserve the right to examine each new development as it arises and the corresponding responsibility for the security of the Canadian people."

The statement also adds a rider to the question of acquisition of weapons for Canada's forces in NATO. This part of the statement says:

"The government of NATO make an agreement for a NATO nuclear force, under political control—rather than national control, then Canadian forces could be assigned to it, or committed from participating in this agreement up to the limit necessary NATO tactical and defensive nuclear weapons."

THE SALVATION ARMY

The statement reiterated that a new Liberal government would limit Canada's role in North American air defence to "patrol and surveillance du-

Research Pilot Puts Rocket Ship 48 Miles Into Space

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Crack pilot Joseph A. Walker rocketed the X-15 a record 48 miles high Monday and returned safely to earth.

"I had a feeling that if I ran the engine much longer I was going to hit 50," he said.

He added: "I could take orbit with no sweat at all. The success of today's flights means there is no question that we can get a man into orbit. We can and must if we I did."

The 2,000-mile-an-hour X-15 hit its steepest climb yet, streaked to about 260,000 feet, 5,000 feet higher than the previous designed maximum altitude, and 38,000 higher than the previous X-15 mark of 217,000.

The 41-year-old national space agency pilot was under the extreme effort to shut off his engine and bring himself down safely.

His 3,443-mile-an-hour speed was 36 - degree climb angle showed him back into his seat with four times the force of gravity.

"I had a little trouble reaching the throttle. I kept missing it by about an inch. Finally, I had to lunge forward to knock

In future flights, with the engine running longer and with more velocity, during a shallower angle, the X-15 is expected to climb 75 miles, perhaps 100 miles.

Walker managed to cut off the 57,000-pound thrust engine after 81 seconds of burning time. Another two or three seconds, and the fuel would run out high as 500,000 feet.

Walker had the possibility of putting a winged craft into orbit. He told a press conference:

"The X-15 could go into orbit itself without major modifications. But, from a complex is practical. All we have to do is build it.

"The X-15 is the most simple-boosted Dynasoar Space Glider. It would be unsinkable."

Air friction on re-entry into the atmosphere is one of the dangers of space flight. So will Walker handle his stubby-winged craft that can temperatures rose only to 1,000 degrees the X-15's black-painted heat resistant steel skin is designed to withstand more than 1,400 degrees.

Fire Marshal's Dept. To Probe Trenton Fire

TRENTON—Shortly after 10 o'clock last night calls began to pour into the Trenton fire hall, from Marmora Street residents.

"The Creosote's on fire!"

They were remembering the spectacular blaze in the Canada Creosoting Company's stock yard last May 8, which did an estimated $275,000 damage, threatened to burn nearly every house on the block and attracted thousands of spectators to the scene.

Last night's damage has been estimated at $100,000.

The fire broke out in one pile of creosoted hydro poles in the north-east section of the yard and an hour later had spread to two other adjacent piles. Before it was through, six piles of poles had literally "gone up in smoke."

An investigation into the cause of the fire has been called by Fire Inspector Del Hope of the Ontario Fire Marshal's Office at Belleville.

Trenton Fire Chief Ross Ketcheson, of the Trenton fire department, said the fire probably started from the scene of the 1961 fire, opened her home to the reporters and photographers present and the Marchese telephone was the busiest in town as radio and television station reports put through calls to their offices.

Today, Chief Ellis expressed thanks to Belleville's fire chief, Gerald Vance, the mayor from other departments, the Ontario Provincial Police, Salvation Army corps, and in fact, everyone who assisted the Trenton department.

Wants to Know Why Low Tender Not Accepted

The question of why the lowest tender wasn't accepted in the purchase of more than 1,000 tons of crushed rock has been asked of city council by a local contractor who submitted the lowest bid.

Council several weeks ago approved the tender of the E. J. McFarland Construction Company for the supply of the crushed limit at a cost of $42,150 whereas the tender of the Jack Huth Construction Company was $300 lower.

Mr. Both in his letter to council noted he had been informed from city hall that the rock which he had tendered on was not up to specification.

Alderman Don Whalen said he could not recall that specifications other than rock size had been called for in the tender.

The matter was referred to the public works committee for investigation.

Two-Year Term for Mayor Approved by City Council

City council will apply to the Ontario Legislature for an amendment to the private bill to allow the city's mayor to be elected for a two-year term instead of the present one year.

The motion for approval of the two-year term for mayor came from the city council finance and management committee.

He said he had no personal interest in the move but noted that an increase of one year or at two different periods he had been struck by the increased committee of the city council each year.

The two-year term for mayor was necessary on several counts, he said. Two years in office was the least a mayor should be expected to serve if he is to give maximum service while the high cost of being elected should also be considered.

He said aldermen were elected for a two-year term and maintained the mayor should be extended the same courtesy.

ALD. DIGBY OBJECTS

He noted that many district municipalities had gone to the two-year term for the mayor and said this was a step forward.

The only councillor to voice objection to the move was Alderman Les Digby, who agreed that even two years might not be long enough for a good mayor.

Alderman Ross Bailey said the matter of the school board and utilities commission had been considered by the finance committee when it brought forward the recommendation.

The urgency of the matter led

Contractor Lost $150,000 On New County Building Members of Council Told

The county of Hastings got a bargain in the construction of its new county administration building when low bid[der] two years ago.

Total cost of the structure, including furnishings amounted to $746,443.94, but the contractor, the H. J. McFarland Construction Company of Picton, had lost $150,000, by construction of the building.

This was stated in county council this morning by Bancroft Reeve J. N. Brown as he presented the report of the county building committee setting out the final allocation of building costs between the county, the city of Belleville and the town of Trenton.

"It is my belief that the contractor lost at least $150,000 on the construction of the building," said Reeve Brown. "The county is unable to re-imburse Mr. McFarland for this loss but he fulfilled his contract and made every attempt to cut down on the quality of materials."

"I think we should be grateful to Mr. McFarland," he said.

MANY CONTRIBUTIONS

Reeve Brown said there were many things which were omitted to the low bid to the contractor.

One of these was the fact that quicksand was discovered on the site on which the building was constructed, necessitating the driving of piles to secure a good foundation.

Other total costs of the building included the county of Hastings paying $3.82 per cent, or $478,279; the city of Belleville will pay 56.75 per cent, $423,973.84, and the town of Trenton will pay 10.43 per cent or $77,844.46.

In addition to the above costs it has been decided by county council to complete the installation of air conditioning in the building at a cost of approximately $30,000.

WILL SHARE COST

Belleville and Trenton would share in the additional cost on the same basis as for the original cost of the building. The main court room and the county council chambers are now air conditioned, while the necessary duct work to complete the installation was included in the original construction.

The city of Belleville yesterday agreed to pay its share of the air conditioning costs, while it is expected that the town of Trenton will follow suit.

Mr. Brown said installation of the air conditioning was "the only sensible thing to do" as due to the large glass areas temperatures were very uncomfortable in the summer.

By-Law to Ban Parking North Side Victoria Avenue Turned Down by Council

Residents of Victoria Ave. are going to retain parking on the north side of their street after all.

Two weeks ago city council voted for no parking on the north side of Victoria Ave. in the residential area, west of Hershiman's Corners, but yesterday when the covering by-law was presented for second and third reading, it was turned down on an 8-5 vote.

Mayor A. E. Haig and Aldermen William Lowe and Robert Temple all spoke against the by-law while ex-Alderman Charles L. Hyde was a one-man delegation also opposing the move.

Ald. Jarvis said it appeared that the members of the council were apparently becoming "slap happy" in barring parking. Ald. Temple said, "it would come to the point where parking lots would have to be provided in the residential areas to provide parking for residents' cars."

Mayor Haig took a like stand declaring that he had a long standing feud with those who feel that no parking was the only solution to the traffic problem.

CLAIMS ROAD WIDE ENOUGH

Mr. Temple said it was his opinion that parking should be allowed to remain on Victoria Ave.

Mr. Hyde said with all respect to the city engineer's department he could not go along with its recommendation to bar parking on Victoria Ave.

He maintained the roadway was sufficiently wide to allow two lanes of traffic with cars parked on both sides of the street.

He said parking on Victoria Ave. was needed to accommodate church goers and those attending functions at the Belleville Collegiate.

At that time they have come when we must not do anything more to curtail business and city in the downtown area", he said.

Memorial Plaque for Late E. Denyes to Be Unveiled

Members of Hastings county council met in their annual spring session at Belleville today and during their three-day session will strike the 1962 county mill rate and decide on other business items.

During the morning session today Warden Harold Varty announced that a memorial plaque to the late Ezlie E. Denyes, former county clerk treasurer, would be unveiled at the Wednesday morning session.

Members of the Denyes family as well as Belleville Mayor A. McLean Haig and Reeve Thomas MacDonald of Trenton, will attend the ceremony. The plaque to Mr. Denyes will be placed on the wall of the council committee room along with pictures already in place of former wardens dating back to 1850.

The report of the agriculture and reforestation committee was read by Reeve Tracey Adams. The report suggested that members of county council call take a bus trip this summer to view the county forest at Bird's Creek in North Hastings.

HEALTH WITH GRANTS

The report also dealt with grants to fall fairs, farm safety campaigns, the drainage and spraying for warble fly.

It was noted that the township of Madoc was the only municipality in the county which had a "Compulsory" program for warble fly control.

Tyendinaga township Deputy Reeve Sidney Fitzgerald commended county council for the grants to fall fairs, noting that in many cases smaller fairs would be unable to operate without the assistance of municipal grants.

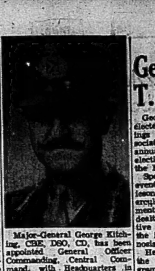
In addition to setting of the county tax rate another item of importance to be discussed by the present session of county council will be the report of the special joint committee of the city and the county on hospital expansion.

OTHER PROBLEMS

Warden Varty said there were two problems in connection with the hospital to deal with. One of these was the proposed new addition, and the other was possible joint ownership of the hospital.

Farmers in the county public schools' speaking contest will attend council on Thurs. day afternoon, Warden Varty said.

Another item to be discussed is the possible setting up of a county library to provide better rural library facilities.



Warden Varty said the province matched the county dollar for dollar in the cost of such a venture.

Labor Minister Is Heckled At Meeting

TORONTO (CP)—Labor Minister Michael Starr was heckled Monday night at a Progressive Conservative nomination meeting here by a group critical of the government's policy on unemployment.

The meeting named Mr. Douglas Morton as candidate for Toronto Davenport.

Mr. Starr at one point proclaimed that the Unemployment Insurance Commission had found more jobs in the first three months of 1962 than were in any other three months since 1945.

A heckler, who identified himself as Donald V. Roach, 25, yelled: "Because there are more unemployed."

The labor minister angrily replied: "Unemployment is down, employment is up, earnings are up. There's no sign that the recession has been licked in this country."

A heckler's comments were met with shouts and whistles from Mr. Starr's supporters and he left the meeting a short time later.

"If the Liberals were in power," Mr. Starr said, "there would be a million Canadians on the streets."

George A. Whitman Elected T.B. Association President

George A. Whitman was elected president of the Hastings County Tuberculosis Association last evening at the annual meeting and the election of officers, held at the Hotel Quinte.

Speaker for this annual event was Dr. W. D. S. Jamieson of the Ontario Department of Health. Dr. Jamieson, Department of Health, Toronto, who dealt primarily with important preventive measures stating that great strides had been made but one important problem remains, which is complacency, and along this line there is still a great goal to be reached.

He remarked that infection is not as prevalent but that there has been an increase in those over 50 constructing the disease. Tuberculosis can be spread through the fork fish and shellfish, he added, as well as with cash. He stressed the importance of tuberculin testing and finding the source of infection, testing in the high schools as well as those suspected that children around the age of 15 years, if infected are more apt to break down.

Industrial surveys also have been conducted, he pointed out, this coming over 50, which is a high potential group. But speaker also stressed that tuberculin testing does not necessarily apply to pandemic testing but is effective to everyone and those having a positive reaction may then be x-rayed, taken within five or six days.

Dr. Jamieson outlined some of the duties of the control of TB and of the reaction of the patients to the anti-TB drugs and also gave an analysis of the man survey which is to be undertaken.

"Prevention work should be done by medication and public influence to see that patients keep on treatment and drugs faithfully," he concluded.

Dr. J. R. McSorry expressed appreciation to the Dr. Jamieson on behalf of all those present.

European Royalty Gathers For Anniversary for Juliana

By EDDY GILMORE

AMSTERDAM (AP) — Five reigning monarchs and a host of lesser titles converged on Amsterdam today to help Queen Juliana of The Netherlands celebrate her silver wedding anniversary.

They assembled on this traditional holiday of the working classes for two days of pomp and ceremony honoring Juliana and her husband, Prince Bernhard.

Heading the guest list were Queen Elizabeth of Britain, the Shah of Iran and Empress Farah, King Olav V of Norway, Grand Duchess Charlotte of Luxembourg and her husband, Prince Felix, and Belgium's King Baudouin and Queen Fabiola.

Elizabeth's husband, Prince Philip, was to arrive separately after performing a ceremonial duty—laying Prince Charles to northern Scotland in his new school, Gordonstoun. Philip's alma mater.

Amsterdam's Amstel Hotel was turned into a guest house for the crowned and another 100 members of royal families and houses invited to the two-day social whirl.

Juliana and Bernhard will be hosts for their guests tonight at a dinner in the hotel. Tuesday royal party will take a boat trip through Amsterdam's canals—illuminated for the occasion—and go to a ball at the Royal Palace.

For the Dutch the festivities began on Juliana's 53rd birthday Monday, putting the city in a holiday mood. Hotels were jammed, flags were flying and the tulips were co-operating.

The queen and her consort rode in an open carriage behind six horses through cheering crowds on Amsterdam's festooned streets. Behind them in another open carriage were their four daughters — Crown Princess Beatrix, 24, Irene, 22, Princess Margriet, 19, and Marijke, 18. Police said 1,000,000 persons witnessed the procession.

As heir-apparent, to the Dutch crown, Juliana fled the war-ravaged Netherlands to Canada in 1940 with Beatrix and Irene. Margaret was born in an Ottawa hospital.

Sealer Sinks, Crew Rescued

HALIFAX (CP) — The 1ine ship Arctic Fisher, her hull punctured by ice, went to the bottom in the Strait of Belle Isle Monday after her 18-man crew was rescued at the last minute.

The 150 - ton sealing vessel, which was a former minesweeper of the three close calls, slipped under the ice-crusted waters of the strait less than three minutes after her crew scrambled aboard the sealer Theron.

"They're all fine," said Capt. Harold Hiscock of the Theron, who rammed his ship into the ice off northern Newfoundland to allow the Arctic Fisher's crew to make their way to safety. The men saved a few personal belongings but lost $6,000 worth of seal pelts.

Russians Preparing Moon-Trip?

Latest space experiments find the U.S. and Russian roles reversed. The U.S. has just launched a rocket to the moon, while the Russians have fired their third shot in a series apparently aimed at the collection of information on radiation. The Russians photographed the other side of the moon a year or so ago, while the U.S. has to its credit an extremely lengthy list of experiments designed to provide information about radiation belts and other possible obstacles to manned flight away from the vicinity of the earth.

Each of these powers thus appears to be undertaking projects which the other earlier carried out successfully. There may, however, prove to be one major difference. The U.S. second suggests that its space scientists are interested in gathering any and all information possible. The Russians seem to set an objective and then carry out only the experiments necessary to achieve this immediate aim. Information on radiation dangers would obviously be desirable before attempting any manned flight to the moon. This, then, may be the next Russian target—nor ought we to be surprised if a manned flight around the moon, at least, is attempted in the not distant future.

One would suppose that the "space sickness" suffered by Major Gherman Titov, when he circled the earth 17 times in Vostok II on August 6 of last year, would have indicated another similar flight, in an effort to determine whether this nausea would be experienced by all astronauts in lengthy flights or whether it was just Titov's personal reaction to weightlessness for a lengthy period. But such a flight could have been attempted at any time in the past nine months. The Russians' failure to stage such a flight may well indicate that it suggests that they feel justified in moving ahead to the next step towards true space travel, the comparatively short hop around the moon. After that will come the much more difficult task of landing a man safely on the moon—and bringing him home again. Not but still until is done will man be able to say with certainty that his life is no longer inextricably tied to his native earth.

A Wise Speech

British newspapers consider Prime Minister Macmillan's speech to the American Newspaper Publishers Association disappointing.

The Daily Mirror finds "not good enough" verdict sums up their dissensions.

Their criticism, in the main, is that Mr. Macmillan said nothing of real importance, nothing to warrant considering the speech a keynote speech, as it had been heralded.

We disagree.

What Prime Minister Macmillan said was important, and while by no means presenting any viewpoint which had not long since been apparent to wise men, badly needed saying because so few, if any, of the world's political leaders have forcibly espoused this viewpoint in the past.

"This, too, shall pass away" was the burden of the Prime Minister's message. The power to endure in patience is today a power, and perhaps the only power, that can save the world. Governments, and peoples, do change, and this is as true of the Soviet Government and its subjects as of any nation in the West. Signs of change are plentiful for those who do not wilfully blind themselves. Given time, today's problems will disappear.

Nothing sensational here—but all the more important for that very reason. Verbal shockpounding is puerile compared with the maturity of outlook here displayed.

According to the latest figures received by the Health League of Canada, there are approximately one million and a half doctors for the world population of 3 billion people.

Ironically enough, one of the smallest countries of the world—Israel—with one doctor in every 420 inhabitants—is the best provided for medically and is followed by the U.S.S.R. with 600 inhabitants per doctor. Czechoslovakia and Austria with a doctor to 590 and 620 persons respectively are next in line.

Women who have the most exquisite houses and faultless taste in furnishing are inclined to dress in what I recall Oscar Wilde called "two colorless suits and skirts in no color; they wear colorless but perfectly made shirts or sweaters; one rope of real pearls, sometimes two, and small pearl earrings and two or three good rings. Their shoes and handbags are in the best quality leather and, having once made for all settled how to look nice, they never change. —Herman Schrijver, a British interior decorator.

Razzle-Dazzle Campaign About to Begin

BY RICHARD JACKSON
(From The Ontario Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau)

OTTAWA — With Prime Minister Diefenbaker and his Cabinet hitting the road, when Parliament rises May 19, it's big business they run here . . . in fact, the nation's largest . . . operating on a budget which this year will top $7 billion.

The Tories are rolling the Prime Minister and the 23 members of his Cabinet take turns in covering the country.

No matter how hot and hard the campaigning, at least one Cabinet Minister must be in the Capital at all times, serving as Acting Prime Minister.

This Acting Prime Minister . . . and it might be External Affairs Minister Green today and Finance Minister Fleming tomorrow . . . is there to see to it that the more or less urgent routine business is promptly and properly handled.

But there are certain decisions at the political summits that can be made only by the Prime Minister himself.

And of the necessity of being the Conservative campaign kingpin, he cannot be out on the road much of the time.

So what amounts to "a hot line" is strung out along the trans-Canada telephone system for the Prime Minister's immediate-at-any-moment use.

OTTAWA CALLING

Newspapermen who have travelled in the press party have often seen him leap from his plane at Regina, to take calls waiting for him from Ottawa.

All problems and issues by no means may be resolved by long distance telephone, and so to handle them himself personally he flies back to the Capital almost as often as he campaigns for a week.

In his jet and turbo-prop age, no point in Canada is more than six hours away from Parliament Hill.

A certain amount of the Prime Minister's correspondence is routine and can be handled by his staff. Matters calling for him from Ottawa.

All problems and issues by no means may be resolved by long distance telephone, and so to handle them himself personally he flies back to the Capital almost as often as he campaigns for a week.

In his jet and turbo-prop age, no point in Canada is more than six hours away from Parliament Hill.

A certain amount of the Prime Minister's correspondence is routine and can be handled by his staff. Matters calling for immediate attention are brought to his attention at the earliest possible moment.

Then there are other matters both of administrative and political importance, which the level of the ordinary routine staff is not competent to handle or requires the use of the "hot line."

So between his East Block offices here on The Hill . . . and the executive campaign train, plane or motorcade, shuttle a steady stream of couriers, carrying files of documents for the Prime Minister's attention.

As a matter of established working routine while out campaigning across the country, he uses the first two or three hours of every day to catch up on the plane, train or in the hotel . . . for the dispatch of this business.

ON THE FLY

This government-by-remote-control through the cross-country travels of prime ministerial messengers may be a bit awkward, but over the years it has proved its worth. Those who observe the same degree of sensitive to do . . . but those who observe more, we call over-polite or cautious.

Those are technical error; you goofed; he made an inexcusable blunder.

The full force of human aggression is borne upon us. It is time we stop to realize that "pacifist" has become a dirty word in every nation on the globe: all governments, no matter how they may disagree among themselves, agree in finding him their common foe.

The phrase "professional gambler" is a derogatory one in terms — for what makes him a professional is exactly his unwillingness to gamble against the odds, as the suckers invariably do; his percentage mark, not Lady Luck, is the household deity of the professional.

'Pacifist' Has Become a Dirty Word

Readers with Freudian leanings call "Acquaintances" are friends who have recently done something with which we don't care to be associated.

You and I appreciate each other's good points; but those two have formed a "mutual admiration society."

I am agreeable; you are easily persuaded; he is just a piece of putty.

I took a lower-of-absence because of "nervous exhaustion" from overwork; you did the same because of an "emotional disturbance"; he did the same because of a "mental breakdown."

I believe in planning social events "with decency"; you say you invest yours with "pomp"; he feels that "conversion" in its matter of dog-eat-dog," you may be sure that he regards his fellow men as at best sitting ducks, dogs don't eat dogs; men are the only animals who feed on their own kind.)

What I call "conversion" in myself, I call "apostasy" in others.

Whenever I hear a fellow citizen proudly that "it's the early bird that gets the worm," I think of Morath's remark: "Glad what about the early worm?"

The purest definition of the provincial person is that he is one who, when abroad, refers to the inhabitants as "natives" or as "foreigners."

When a man begins a sentence with "Honest to goodness" . . . it is a better than even bet that he is going to be made with some profoundly unhistorical generalization.

The semantic differences between "leisure," "loafing," and "humming" can be accurately calibrated on the scale of annual income.

Speaking of calibration, everybody measures manners by his degree of etiquette — or by "well-mannered" those who observe the same degree of sensitive to do . . . but those who observe more, we call over-polite or cautious.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

FACTORS OF CHOICE

By what are you dominated as you make daily decisions in the course of your lives? Are you dominated by fear? Are you dominated by desire to follow the best policy? Are you dominated by jealousy?

Well, most people are probably dominated by sincere and honest motives for most people are sincere and honest. But the question is not always between right and wrong — the question is often between pleasant and unpleasant, difficult and easy. We make most of our decisions on the basis of fancy. We fancy this and do not fancy that. If we were to go back and examine our decisions at the end of each day we would find that many were made without much reflection, more even were made with the desire to avoid responsibility and work. We were led by our fancy or our uneasiness. We did what we wanted to do — or what we thought we wanted to do.

The truly happy people are those who have themselves well in hand. They accept the fact that there is considerable frustration in every life that must all be successful — at least not all the time — and that a decision is not to be the basis of sacrifice and rightness usually is better than a decision which brings us a million dollars.

Watch out for the allurement of fancy. We can be a fanciful lot if we let ourselves go. We can be too indolent for words if comfort comes to have a big place in our lives.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

DUTY

I have never become reconciled to duty, and hardly think I ever shall.

Why should anyone do things because of a sense of duty? Can you make a boy or girl love his or her parents through a sense of duty? I am very sure I never wanted to be loved that way.

It is not the duty of a child to love its father or mother but a privilege.

Doing should be a privilege also, not a duty. Else all the sincerity and love become but a vapory lie. And warmth cools.

I wonder if we do many things that we do not want to but feel we must do for the happiness, but as yet I have never met anyone who could honestly say that his performance of duty brought happiness. Happiness can only come through an act of love and a sense of privilege in doing it.

Then you do a thing because you believe it is right, you cannot fail to derive satisfaction from so doing. Generosity cannot be driven here and there, any more than fortune can be directed to any given spot in the world.

To Your Good Health
Most Blood Cholesterol Comes From Saturated Fats

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Editor's Note: This is the second of a series of two articles.

Cholest rol is one of a number of forms of fat appearing in the blood. Even if we ate no cholesterol in our food, our bodies would manufacture it. Rabbits manufacture it from lettuce, carrots or other cholesterol-free foods. So would we.

Eggs, cheese and milk contain cholesterol, but only a small amount of what we ingest from these foods is retained by the system. The rest is used up as energy.

Most of our blood cholesterol comes from the so-called saturated fats we eat, and that means, essentially, solid fats, as fat meat, lard, or oils or animal fats which are solid at room temperature.

There is evidence that blood fats have some relationship to hardening of the arteries and hence to coronary heart attacks. But they are not the sole cause. Besides, it takes years for the arteries to harden, and many people suddenly develop over cholesterol when a heart attack occurs is too much like locking the barn after the horse has been stolen. The damage has been done.

We have no proof that hardened arteries can be corrected by lowering the blood cholesterol. Therefore I see no prospect of benefit from anyone trying to avoid cholesterol at this stage.

I think it logical to avoid overindulgence in fatty foods, for saturated fats under such circumstances, and to hope that it will help keep our weight down, which is important.

Second, cutting saturated fats, with a corresponding increase in the unsaturated fatty acids," meaning corn, olive, safflower or other vegetable oil fats, tends to lower the blood fats, and particularly the cholesterol in the blood. But what this will do to a damaged coronary artery is not known. Whether it would be of help to whether it prevents further hardening of arteries, we do not know, nor, I assume that it may retard further damage and can do no harm. In short, the polyunsaturated fats are not in any sense "cure-alls."

I question whether fretting about cholesterol is of benefit to the average person. Besides, I suspect that many of us have fallen into the habit of eating more animal fats than we need — and we will do well to cut them down and substitute vegetable fats. We need some fat in the diet.

When we've had a heart attack at the age of 30 or so, I suspect that it is time for some drastic diet, or begin eating foods that are guaranteed to contain a special kind of oil.

But remember that it takes years for arteries to harden, and we all might well begin being moderate (but not fanatical) at the age of 35, taking it a bit easy on the solid animal fats and learning to substitute polyunsaturates.

This should, in particular, be true for those with a history of family history of high blood pressure, coronary attacks or strokes. I wouldn't worry about reasonable amounts of eggs, cheese, etc.

We have to keep our heads and remember that some people do have very high cholesterol amounts of animal fats all their lives are hale and strong. Diet is important it's not everything, though.

Letter To The Editor

Joins in Criticism Of Dusty Roads

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer

Dear "East End Housewife," I'm joining with you and your fellow-comrade-in-arms in our seasonal "battle of the dust!" We, too, live in the east end of the city where roads are not all we should wish, consisting of rough areas and shifting surfaces; the latter, like your road surface, becoming dusty in the dry season.

A solution to the afore mentioned flying surface would indeed be a joy — but beware. No more is heard in the spray truck over the past three years have been offered three doubtful solutions.

(a): A spray which was so tenacious that it would not stay out-of-doors;

(b): A spray which permanently stained children's clothing;

(c): A spray which accomplished so fast that one wonders if the cost of the spray and employees is worth while to the tax-payers.

Those we are, you and I with dusters in hand. No way to spend a Saturday, I'm agree.

Yours sincerely

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Where can the line be drawn between sport and entertainment? In which of these is ice hockey, baseball, football, horse racing belong?

Obviously, they are in the same area as Hollywood, the theatre, the night club, the amusement park. Originally, sport was conceived to be something in which one participated. But even as long ago as ancient Rome, as thousands of thousand years ago, people interested in the fast buck conceived the idea that the gentlest of nudges, you could shift any fight into the entertainment field, with a gate. And it would be interesting to know the comparative figures as regards the millions of fast bucks made by the professionals in hockey, baseball, football and horse racing, as against those made in the movies, the theatre, the amusement parks and the night clubs.

Professional sport, which is in the amusement bracket, has a great advantage over the movie and the hot dog stand. You can't bet on a hot dog. In that respect, countless millions are involved in the gentlemen's art of sport. On the other hand, for one youngster dreaming of being a night club entertainer, there are a hundred plus playing hockey, baseball and football with their heads full of dreams.

Deloro Stellite Enters Into Joint Venture

It was announced yesterday afternoon that the Deloro Stellite firm was entering into a joint venture with the Misco Precision Casting Company Ltd. of Waukegan, N.Y. to produce investment castings, a type for use in airplanes, in Belleville. The announcement was made by J. C. Houston of Deloro Stellite. The new firm, which commenced business this morning, is known as International Precision Casting Company Ltd.

It will be utilizing approximately 25,000 square feet of the present Deloro Stellite plant and will feature the latest techniques and the newest equipment in the investment casting industry. This move makes the new firm the only Canadian company capable of producing a number of specialized parts which previously were available only from the United States.

Deloro Stellite will continue on its regular production, with the exception of investment castings, under its own name at the present location. Mr. Houston advised that a few small additions to the present plant would be required to accommodate the expansion and changes involved.

Council Gives Approval to Com. Report

City council yesterday formally approved the report of the city-county liaison committee with respect to proposed expansion at Belleville General Hospital.

Among other recommendations the committee suggested that operation of the hospital should be a partnership relationship between the city and County of Hastings.

Alderman George Wishart noted that the report covered certain matters over which city council should not have any control and suggested that any formal resolution from the city should be confined solely to the matter of financing.

Alderman Ben Corke said he did not entirely agree claiming he could not "buy" Ald. Wishart's concern.

The motion for adoption, of the committee report came from Mayor A. M. Haig, who said that while he is not urging its passing he felt city council should give some leadership in the matter.

57 Properties For Tax Sale Says Manager

Whether or not it reflects the relative economy of the municipality, the 1962 city of Belleville tax sale has less than half the number of properties up for sale that was the case a year ago.

The quarterly administration report of City Manager J. H. Reynolds which has been presented to council shows that the tax sale list prepared in January contained 102 properties as compared with 231 a year ago.

The mayor's warrant to have been signed April 30th had 57 properties listed as compared with 150 properties in 1961. The date of the tax sale has not been determined.

Tax arrears for 1961 at the end of the year were listed at $242,112, although by March 31 this had been reduced to $183,566.

SAID GOOD RECORD

The reduction of tax arrears by $82,000 since the end of the year was stated by the city manager to be a good one.

It was noted that the tax arrears for 1959 and prior were substantially beaten last year and a vigorous campaign, was said to be underway to reduce this amount.

The report noted also that the 1962 tax bills were now being prepared for mailing with the tentative date for mailing of all tax notices being May 15th.

WORK LONGER

SEOUL (AP)—South Korea's military junta, announcing its determination to get more work out of government agencies, decreed a 50-hour work week in place of the present 44 hours.

The Bay of Quinte Power Squadron "bettened down the hatches" on a highly successful 1961 season and headed for the open water" of an even better one in 1962 here last night.

The young eight - year - old squadron which already holds two Canadian records, honored junior piloting graduates and elected new executive at the annual dinner meeting held in the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club.

Nineteen new junior pilots were presented with certificates and they in turn presented instructors with special gifts of appreciation.

Chief Commander Neville presented certificates to the lady and junior associates and gave the power squadron pledge to several junior members.

Addressing the piloting graduates Chief Commander Neville outlined the history of power squadrons in the United States and Canada. He said the power squadron objective is to promote good seamanship, competition, navigation and good maritime behavior afloat.

"Some" he said "are not living up to their pledge by committing acts of carelessness. You have become one of the keenest, most knowledgeable squadrons in the district. Enjoy it.

He said the junior piloting course was a tough one with a smattering of everything. He urged them to take other courses. "You will get more enjoyment and more comradeship."

He spoke of new squadrons in the district. "It is better to have a few active new squadrons with lots of people active than one large one with but a few taking interest."

Addresses of appreciation were heard from commanders and gifts presented to their various associates.

Squadronette Commander McCulloch in welcoming the new lady associates aboard said "we join with you in your achievement in passing the piloting examination. The course is an excellent mental exercise to boost your own feeling of individual accomp-

REVIEWED ACTIVITIES

Commander Dr. Elliot in his address reviewed the season's activities pointing out the highlights of the squadron's summer programme.

He said the Quinte Power Squadron held the unique distinction of having four of its members qualified in all grades. These are Robert McCulloch, Jack Tatham, John Grant and Bill Stephenson.

Later Chief Commander Neville said that there were only two other Canadian members in Canada who had the distinction. It was a record for the squadron here.

It was learned that another record held by the Quinte Power Squadron is that one of its members, Mrs. Kaye Smith, is the only woman navigator in Canada who has taken all courses with the exception of electronics.

Dr. Elliott paid tribute to the squadronettes for their fine showing in the summer rendezvous and welcomed new member Rear Commander Dean Churchill to the squadron.

Chief Commander Neville awarded merit marks to Carl Reid, Bill Tatham, Bill Willis, John Clarke, Harold Transue, Reg Morry, Art Elliot, Ed Smith (4), John Grant (6), Robert McCulloch (6), Wil Stephenson (6), Lennox Smith (8) and Jack Tatham (9).

Commander Smith said he was looking forward to another good season. He had planned a rendezvous, and a new trophy will be available this summer. His objective, he said, was getting the new recruits on the water and he was out to get a big and better class next winter.

Yacht Club Commodore Colebourne congratulated the successful students. He said a club like the Bay of Quinte yacht club should have a project and the club will go on to promote better boating. He was sure all would benefit. He said in five years the Quinte Power Squadron and the Yacht Club will be tops in their fields.

Small Industry Needs Research Says Speaker

Research is necessary investment in the future of small manufacturing firms and industries as well as the giant corporations, R. G. Holmes of the Ontario Research Foundation told local Rotarians at their weekly dinner meeting in the Quinte Hotel yesterday afternoon.

The speaker urged that small firms use their own initiative in the development of new products and not be a slave to the latest fires and conclusions and developments. Such action would ensure the economic freedom of the small Canadian firm and industry, he advised.

It is up to people directing such businesses to investigate the impact which research can have on their operation as well as on their community and the Canadian way of life in general.

Mr. Holmes gave several examples of where research could be of benefit to both large and small firms. He advised that the Ontario Research Foundation, which is a private enterprise, would attempt to undertake any worthwhile projects for any industry at reasonable costs. Some projects, he mentioned, are eligible for assistance from the public funds.

His firm also provides free technical information and field engineering service, Mr. Holmes said.

The speaker was introduced and thanked by Rotarians, Ben Corke and Enos David respectively. President Virgil James presented him with an initialled leather sandwich container as a token of the club's thanks.

Present as the special guests of the club at the meeting were members of the Belleville Industrial Commission who were introduced by commission secretary Earl Dicknoscheer.

It was announced that the annual Easter Seal campaign for the Cripples, Children's reached almost $4,500 and was expected to reach last year's starts of over $5,000.

Dennis Rowbottom, president of the Quinte Secondary School's Commercial Club, was the special student guest of the club and was introduced by Rotarian Bill Gault.

tion." Canada's interest stems in NORAD also provides for squadrons of interceptor aircraft.

It says the Bomarc anti-aircraft missiles "are useless without nuclear warheads and their usefulness in any event is so doubtful that the present government is refusing to install warheads."

Bomarc missiles now are in place at the North Bay, Ont., base and similar missiles are under construction in the Mont Laurier area of Quebec north of Ottawa. The government has not said whether they will be armed with nuclear warheads.

The statement does not say what would be done if the Liberal government about Bomarc missiles already installed and Bomarc bases already built except to say it "will prevent such costly hesitation and waste."

The statement also makes no reference to a defence minister raised by Mr. Pearson in a Quebec City speech Nov. 4 which has been criticized by Prime Minister Diefenbaker and T. C. Douglas, New Democratic Party leader.

In that speech Mr. Pearson said a Liberal government would give consideration to allowing American troops to have control over nuclear weapons in Canada if the U.S. government proved unable to defend its bases in Canada was "absolutely essential." He said he would recommend that as an extension of the nuclear club so long as the weapons remained under Canadian control.

The latest statement said that under a Liberal government Canada would not manufacture, acquire or use nuclear weapons "under Canadian or American control." The 1958 election issue must used the term "either under separate Canadian control or under joint U.S.-Canadian control."

Martin Sure Liberals Will Win Election

BRANTFORD (CP) — Paul Martin, Liberal member of Parliament for Essex East and former cabinet minister, Monday night predicted Canada will get rid of the most incompetent government Canada has ever had next June 18.

"There is not one seat held by a cabinet minister in the present administration that can be considered a safe seat for the government," Mr. Martin said.

Mr. Martin was the guest speaker at a nomination meeting which named James F. Brown, a lawyer, as Liberal candidate for Brantford riding.

Expropriation Proceedings Will Include One-Foot Reserve on Victoria Ave.

The city's expropriation proceedings to acquire a one-foot reserve on East Bridge Street between the Stanley Park Subdividers, will be expanded to also include a similar one-foot reserve on Victoria Ave.

This was agreed yesterday when the by-law authorizing expropriation proceedings for the one-foot reserve on Bridge Street, came up for handling.

Alderman Les Digby objected to the city taking any action to acquire the one-foot reserve claiming that this "gold-en foot" property was of value only to sub-dividers wishing to develop property to the east. "I say let these sub-dividers make their own dicker with Stanley Park for the one-foot reserve", he said. "There is no reason for the city to get involved".

But Alderman Jack Ellis claimed Ald. Digby was speaking without sufficient care for residents of the Holy Sidereod who, he said, were without water.

COULD SAVE MONEY

Ald. Ellis also suggested that all three one-foot reserves in the area (on Bridge Street, Victoria Ave., and Eggleston Road) be included in the proceedings, noting the city could then expect to save money in court costs.

Here, however, it was pointed out that the one-foot reserve on Edgehill Road should not be included in the proceedings.

Alderman Jarvis had previously moved that all three one-foot reserves be covered in the by-law, but this was amended to read only those on Bridge Street and Victoria Ave.

The question of the one-foot reserve came up in council several weeks ago when on the suggestion of Alderman Don Whalen, the city voted against taking over certain streets in the area until the reserves were deeded to the city outout charge.

Since then council has voted to assume the roadways and two weeks ago recommended expropriation proceedings to acquire the one foot reserve on Bridge Street.

HEARING SET BACK

And still on expropriation proceedings is a report from the city:

Council recommended that the city solicitor take the necessary court action for expropriation proceedings against the nine property owners on College Street with whom the assessment commissioner has been unable to complete negotiations for the College Street widening.

And the arbitration hearing before His Honor Judge J. C. Anderson with respect to the Don-Bar Corporation property on Front Street which the Parking Authority is seeking to expropriate, has been set back to June 18th. The reason: time was done to allow the owner to obtain his own appraisals on the property.

Mayor A. M. Haig noted the parking authority chairman was conceiving over the date now set for the hearing and quoted him as saying it was urgent that the date be set forward if at all possible.

He said Judge Anderson had agreed to this if it was mutually agreeable to the two parties concerned.

Traffic Lights To Be Installed At Intersection

Following continued requests city council has moved to install traffic lights at the intersection of Herchimer Ave. and Bridge Street.

Council yesterday voted to call tenders for the purchase of the necessary equipment and also for the installation of the lights. Cost of the installation was provided for in the year's budget.

Traffic actuating lights are the type decided on for installation. This is the type controlled by the volume of traffic, rather than the lights being on specific time cycle.

On the recommendation of the public works committee council yesterday voted to improve the intersection of Dundas Street, West, and Bay Bridge Road by removal of a large tree and the erection of a small traffic control island.

Fencing of the whole length of city owned property below the CPR tracks, was also recommended.

The move will tend to improve traffic flow at the intersection and route will be clearly set in the roads section of the public works budget.

Tabernacle Church Club Visits Bata Co.

Tabernacle Tri-M Club enjoyed the educational and interesting tour through the Bata Shoe Company of Canada, on April 24th.

On entering the building, one is first impressed with the beautiful color scheme with white, tan and red shades, but pizza section as well, enjoys. It is a delight to enter such cheerful surroundings.

The group was warmly welcomed by Mr. Art Dumas on behalf of the management and was told briefly, by Jim Williams who conducted the group through the plant. First we were given a brief history of the Bata Shoe Company and told, too, that during the Second World War, they were chosen as a factory authorized for the manufacture of military equipment and at turned over in great deal of their space to this project, which is still carried on at the present to a much lesser degree.

Besides shoes, they also manufacture special machines of various kinds which add to the Canadian machinery trade. This is all possible due to the fact that they have research, engineering and designing divisions.

RAW RUBBER IMPORTED

Raw rubber is imported into the plant and there treated and moulded according to requirements. There are no waste as vulcanizing is done after the cutting. A herd of 40,000 cattle strong is needed for the company's yearly buying of leather.

After the plant tour the club was taken to the cafeteria where a business meeting was conducted while enjoying delicious coffee and cookies.

Before leaving, Mr. Duncan desired that the club see the completed efforts of the Tabernacle Church members of the community. Because of wartime restrictions it seemed impossible after the members to build a church until an unused Presbyterian church in Stevenburg was discovered and purchased just as it stood. With admirable determination, the church was dismantled brick by brick, brought to Batawa and there reconstructed by its members where it stands in dignity as a memorial to those who willingly labored that they might have a place in which to worship.

The beautiful circular window over the altar is so fragile, that, to protect it from the elements a plate glass window has been placed on the outside. In this land, where the right to worship is taken for granted, one can see how great is the desire and determination of a people to keep this integral part of life a live and meaningful reality.

Tri-M members greatly appreciate the efforts of those members of Batawa who so kindly gave of their knowledge and time.

Community Concert Workers Outline Coming Attractions

An enthusiastic group of Community Concert workers met at Eastminster Uniting Church for the annual campaign dinner. This delightful dinner was convened by Miss Helen Sulman whose original decorations were highly praised.

These were Miss Leona Riggs, past president; Mr. and Mrs. Don Leaf rance; Mr. and Mrs. G. Robertson; Miss Ruth Cook; Tom M. J. H. Forrester and Mr. Frank Morris.

The president commented on the lively and unrehearsed panel conducted by Mr. Eugene Lang on his Sunday music program on CJBQ. It proved its value, and it was his hope that this effective way of meeting the public could be continued in 20ure campaign drives. The slogan for this year could be "Make It Another Sell-out Year".

New Butter Tarts

by Mary Moore

"I can sum it up in one word: Beautiful!" Bruce had just eaten one of our new butter tarts and Eleanor was watching for his reaction and that was his welcome comment.

Since the girls who read this column seem to have an insatiable appetite for butter tarts I worked on a new filling for you and put them into shells made from my non-roll puff pastry. But as you know very well you can use rich plain pastry for these.

COFFEE ALMOND BUTTER TARTS:

Filling: (This amount fills 16 3" tarts). 2 eggs, 1½ cups dark brown sugar, 2 teaspoons instant coffee, 1 cup finely chopped almonds, ¼ teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons melted butter or margarine, 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Beat eggs with fork just enough to blend yolks and whites. Add sugar, instant coffee and salt, beating well. Add melted butter and vanilla and finely chopped almonds. Spoon filling into pastry-lined tart shells and quite to top. Bake at 425 deg. Fahr. for 12-15 minutes or until set.

We made our tarts with

TUESDAY - (Guests)

Dinner Menu

Shrimp Cocktail; Main Course Lentil Soup (see Monday); Hot Cornbread (see Monday); Refrigerator Slaw (see Monday); Boston Cream Pie; Tea.

4 cups sifted all-purpose flour, 1 pound cold, hard butter (do not substitute), ½ pint (10-oz.) commercial sour cream.

Measure flour and cut the butter into it as you would for pie pastry. It should be thoroughly blended with the flour — little flat pieces about ¼" are ideal. Now stir in the sour cream. Roll into a ball, wrap in chunk roll, wrap in foil or wax paper and chill thoroughly. Roll out half to 3-16" thickness and cut out to fit tart tins and line tart tins, fill and bake at 425 deg. (see above). Chill remainder enclosed in a plastic bag and use for patty shells or Super Sausage Rolls (see tomorrow).

By a series of coincidences, this week has turned out to be a pastry-making week. Tomorrow I am giving you three ways to make sausage rolls and on Thursday a prize-winning apple pie.

Manly Macdonald Paintings Feature at U.W.C. Spring Fair

On May 5th at the Kiwanis Centre in Belleville there will be an exhibition of paintings by Manly Macdonald, sponsored by the U.W.C. of Belleville and district at their annual "Spring Fair".

Each year, Mr. Macdonald generously donates one of his paintings to be used in a draw made at the conclusion of the Fair. Two $300 scholarships called the U.W. Club and Manly Macdonald Scholarships are provided from the proceeds. These are awarded to two girls of Belleville and district planning to attend University.

Mr. Macdonald, who studied art in Canada, Europe and the United States, is especially well-loved in the Quinte district being a native of Point Anne, and has portrayed many local scenes on his canvases. One of Mr. Macdonald's paintings was presented to Queen Elizabeth by the Canadian Government and four of his works hang in the National Gallery in Ottawa.

Mr. Macdonald, accompanied by Mrs. Macdonald, an artist of note herself, will be present at the Fair to discuss his paintings with the visitors.

In conjunction with the exhibition there will also be a tea and bake sale to which the public is cordially invited.

MAIL CALL

Question: Friends of ours who were married a few months ago have just finished decorating their apartment and are having a housewarming in the near future. We gave them an expensive wedding present. When we go to the house warming, must we bring another present? I don't want to go empty-handed if it will make us feel uneasy, but I'm afraid our budget won't stand another gift. — Mrs. A.E., Baltimore, Md.

Answer: The intent of a house warming is to show off the premises, not to invite gifts. Guests may bring a token if they want. When a newly married couple gives a party of this type, it's usually to show donors of wedding gifts how their presents fit into the home's decor. An additional gift is not expected, so you need not feel uneasy about arriving without one.

Question: I've taken a leave of absence from my office to be married, I work in a department of 16 people. Before leaving, I was given a lovely gift from the group. The card, however, was signed with only 13 names, so I assume the other three did not contribute. I'd like to send one note of thanks that could be posted on the department bulletin board, but a general note would include the three who did not take part in giving the present. In this case, would it be more appropriate to send individual notes to the 13 who did? — I.A., New York City.

Answer: Since an overwhelming majority signed the card, the gift should be considered a departmental offering, so even though three names did not appear on the card a general note can be sent and posted on the board. There's always a possibility, too, that the names were omitted in error. If this were the case, a general thank-you note would help gloss it over.

Atmospheric Effects Can Be Expected From Blasts

By FRANK CASEY

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists thought in the early atmospheric effects can be expected from the U.S. high-altitude nuclear test blasts in the Pacific. These could include spectacular auroral displays and interference with radio communications.

The United States is expected to touch off such high-altitude explosions in the megaton range. And scientists have called attention to atmospheric results in 1958 after such tests.

They said such blasts in the current series could be expected to produce similar—and perhaps intensified — results, assuming the force is in the megaton range. A megaton is the explosive equivalent of 1,000,000 tons of TNT.

One of the two 1958 shots was set off at about 50 miles altitude and was estimated unofficially to have had a yield of about 10 megatons. It produced an auroral display above Samoa, about 2,000 miles from the Johnston Island test area.

Tanks, heavy guns, armored cars and troops — stepping with diers paraded across East Berlin's Marx-Engels Platz for half an hour.

The East German army parade in East Berlin for the first time included rockets. The Communist announcer said they were the same type that shot down Francis Gary Powers' U-2 plane and that they were now regular equipment of the East German army.

explosion distorting the earth's magnetic field.

The blast also interfered temporarily with high-frequency radio communications in a radius of more than 2,000 miles in all directions from the detonation site.

GIVE GENERAL RULE

Scientists said that in general, the greater the yield of a nuclear device, and the higher the altitude of the explosion, the more widespread the effects.

One unconfirmed report said that the United States might touch off a megaton-type device at an altitude of about 300 miles.

There is speculation that this might disturb the magnetic field strongly enough to cause dumping of nature's own nuclear particles from the lower Van Allen radiation belts.

But scientific opinion varies on such a latter effect, even presuming that the United States actually can set off a megaton bomb at such an altitude.

Some scientists said it is possible that such a dumping of particles—protons and electrons —might occur. On the other hand, he said, the converse might be true. Any such explosion might tend to intensify the lower Van Allen belt, with subatomic particles from the outer nuclear blast being added to those already put there by nature.

The lower of the Van Allen belts begins at about 400 miles above the earth and extends to about 4,000 miles. Then there is a "gap," of several thousand miles, after which the outer Van Allen radiation belt begins.

Can Play Role Without A-Arms Says Pearson

By ARCH McKENZIE

TORONTO (CP) — Canada can play "a big role in continental defence" even if it does not accept and assistance to our friends without solid participation, "a nuclear power," Liberal leader Pearson suggested Monday.

Canada must play a useful role in continental defence "at this age," he said in repeating the line set out in the party's election program issued in October concurrently with his arrival here.

Details of that policy will come later in the campaign for the June 18 election, he told the party's prospective audience as he has met since launching last week his bid to become prime minister.

The occasion was the monthly luncheon convention which was expected—unanimously chose National Hockey League player Edward Litzenberger to contest York West, held in the last Parliament by Progressive Conservative John Hamilton, who seeks re-election.

The Toronto CF-104 Voodoo jet interceptor and the late Canadian-designed Arrow aircraft were features of the Pearson address to an overflow meeting of about 1,000 in the school auditorium. They were mentioned by Pearson, because, so many area residents were involved when the government decided in 1959 to scrap the arrow.

CITES OTHER POINTS

He had two other main points in his general campaign theme that the electorate have not had their chances in the last four years and failed to govern wisely or well.

One was another reference to his challenge to Prime Minister Diefenbaker for a face - to - face radio and television debate on the issues.

Mr. Diefenbaker had given two reasons for refusing—"not one day" and one the next day." The first answer, that such a debate would mean using Mr. Diefenbaker to gain audiences for Mr. Pearson, smacked of conceit and arrogance, said the Liberal leader repeated.

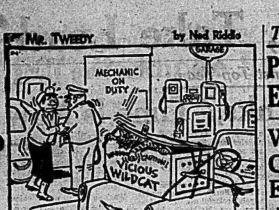
Plausible, said was the contention that the Commons gave ample scope for such debates.

Well, the Commons isn't sitting, he said. And TV offered a medium for a resumption of the debate to the people more effectively than ever before."

His reference to his stand against nuclear arms for Canada was an addition to his speech after an audience query on where he stood.

"I don't know how a government can be much more confused, wastefully confused, than that," he said after criticizing the decisions surrounding the Arrow, Voodoo and the Bomarc missile.

FIND AMMUNITION



CHAMBERSBURG, Pa. (AP) — Three men, using a mine detector, uncovered 36 cannon shells Monday night, believed abandoned by the retreating Confederate army after the Battle of Gettysburg in 1863. The ammunition was found buried two feet underground at School House Hill near the community of Duffield.

Douglas Seeks Farmer Vote In Alberta

CALMAR, Alta. (CP) — Premier Douglas Fisher said Thursday they compete 13 per cent and if they are to get sound agriculture policies or programs they need an ally.

In the last five years labor had seen the formation in the province of Alberta.

Around 1800, farmers represented half Canada's population and their votes was headed by governments, the New Democratic Party leader said. Today

Ousts Kingston 3-2

Hull Wins EPL Title

KINGSTON (CP) — Hull-Ottawa Canadiens with a helping hand from Chuck Hamilton, won their second Eastern professional Hockey League title in succession here Monday night.

Hamilton's dramatic goal in the second overtime period gave Hull a 3-2 win over Kingston Frontenacs in the sixth game of their best-of-seven series for the Nesbitt Memorial Trophy.

Frontenacs, who lost 8-2 at home Sunday, built up a 3-0 lead but lost it in the third period because of penalties, a skirmish which started with a fight between Kingston's Harry Linden and Hull's Barclay Plager cost Kingston the game.

Linden was given a major penalty and Plager a double minor. With Plager in the penalty box, Kingston's Tom McCarthy received a match penalty after an ensuing argument. Plager took a punch at McCarthy and McCarthy struck the rookie Hull defenceman over the head with his stick. PLAY SHORTHANDED

Seconds later, after play had resumed, Pete Panagakos and Kingston received a roughing penalty and Frontenacs had to play shorthanded for one minutes, and two men short for three of them. . . .

The rhubarb came at the 13:46 mark of the third period time and Kingston's penalties carried into the first overtime period.

During their manpower advantage, Hull scored the tying goals.

Hull successfully weathered the storm in the first overtime period, when they were short two men for 46 seconds and one for three minutes, but in the second overtime period Hamilton shot a low backhander past Kingston goalie Ed Chadwick to end the longest game in EPL history.

Kingston took a 1-0 lead in the first period when Bobby Attersley scored on a pretty passing play with Panagakos and McCarthy. In the third period, Bobby Latter, a rookie recruit from Winnipeg, gave Kingston a 2-0 lead with a backhand shot from a difficult angle.

Fred Hills scored the first power-play goal for Canadiens as the Kingston was short one man, and Billy Carter scored to even the equalizer at the 17:35 mark when Hull had a two-man advantage.

The game was played before a full and rowdy house. Twenty policemen were on duty and many Hull fans had to be ejected. Fights broke out among spectators frequently throughout regulation time but the ice was cooled considerably during the two sudden-death overtime periods.

Chiefs Win First

Leafs Beat Richmond

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Syracuse Chiefs finally have their first victory of the International League season in the bank—but it took 10 innings and a batting spree by Tony Asaro to put it away.

The Chiefs ended their six-game losing string with an 8-6 squeaker against Atlanta Crackers as Asaro ripped out five hits, including a decisive two-run double in the 10th. In other games, Rochester Red Wings nipped Jacksonville Suns 4-3, and Toronto Maple Leafs beat Richmond Virginians 7-4, Buffalo at Columbus was rained out.

Asaro, whose 5-for-6 night boosted his average from .300 to .333, climaxed Syracuse's rally of four straight hits off veteran right-hander Willard Schmidt in the 10th. Schmidt, the fifth of six Atlanta pitchers, was rocked for singles by Fred Hopke, Frank Obregon and Solly Drake before Asaro delivered.

HOMERS TIE IT

The Crackers jumped off to a 2-0 lead in the first and later led 6-2, but the Crackers forced it into overtime on homers by Tim McCarver, Jim Beauchamp and Mike Shannon. Charley Rabe was the winner for Syracuse in relief.

Les Narum had Jacksonville to three hits over eight innings but was rapped for a homer by Buddy Barker leading off the ninth and needed help from Dick Radatz to complete Rochester's narrow victory. Ron Kebbes, Sam Bowens and Joe Durham led the Red Wings' 10-hit offence with two each, while Jim Woods collected three of the Suns' five hits, Lefty Ken Lehman was the losing pitcher.

Toronto wrapped up its decision over Richmond with a four-run uprising in the seventh, highlighted by Pete Daley's bases-filled double. Winning pitcher Jim Constable and reliever Russ Heman combined to shackle the Virginians.

The defeat went to Vees' southpaw Al Downing.

TV—Radio Column

Plugs Boring, Distracting Enough to Hurt Show

NEW YORK (AP)—Under the television "code" and general practice, the sponsors' commercials are strictly limited in time and quantity. Apparently, however, no one controls those other, incidental commercials—the ones called plugs—that are mixed into game shows, panel shows, variety shows and most of all, interview shows with a lavish hand.

California - originated editions of NBC's Tonight show were prime examples of the weary practice. Almost all of those big - name guests who dropped into the program were given all the time they wanted to sell their latest movie, advertise upcoming night club engagements, or hold up the covers of their latest record albums.

On the panel shows, it has become almost routine to introduce the "celebrity guests" by reeling off their recent activities which usually are implicit new deadlines to be passed, to buy something — tickets, books or records. The built-in plugs of the audience participation programs are those of the manufacturers who supply the gift-merchandise — the cameras, perfumes, washing machines.

None of these interludes constitute "entertainment" by any stretch of the imagination. And while, as somebody once remarked, "the built-in penalty" commercials is the grim penalty one must pay for the free amusement, the entertainment that surrounds them, it would seem to be time that these extra plugs in the commercial time allowance.

It may be that the plugs are boring and distracting enough to hurt the whole program.

NBC has lined up an hour-long discussion show involving—between astronaut John Glenn and cosmonaut Gherman Titov, plus interpreters, for Sunday May 6.

Will Study Curling Ethics

MONTREAL (CP)—The Canadian branch of the Royal Caledonian Curling Club has set up a committee to make an item-by-item study of a code of ethics for the game drafted by the Dominion Curling Association.

The code was designed to clamp down on professionalism. For rinks representing a province in the national championship it establishes an Aug. 1 deadline for residence in that province.

Many of the top-flight western players are farm men and the month's advancement would effectively prevent them from moving east to play because the season's first big bonspiel, the harvest season.

The Canadian branch approved the code in principle earlier. But at the annual meeting Saturday it was decided to establish a special committee to study it closely and make recommendations.

After its meeting in Kitchener last March, the DCA asked each provincial governing body to adopt the new code.

Delegates rejected a proposal by Scotland to revise the sliding-weight proposal, sought to make it compulsory for curlers to release their stones between the tee line and the hog line. At present the hog line is the release point line.

Home Field For the Guineas

By ALAN HARVEY

LONDON (CP) — The time has arrived for the first of Britain's classic races—and for onlookers to start getting a look-in.

The Two Thousand Guineas, for three-year-old colts and fillies, will be run over a mile course at Newmarket, and the fancied horses are all from stables in England, Ireland and Scotland.

There isn't a single entry from France, which has picked up about one-third of the class races and horses will be coming from Ireland to challenge for the Guineas. They are Great Sound, Atlantis, By Proxy and Prince Poppa.

SECRET RATES HIGH

Probably favorite will be the English horse Pardao, who won the Two Thousand in 1948.

The winners of the classic races, the One Thousand Guineas, restricted to fillies, will be three-year-old fillies, will be run over the same one-mile course Thursday.

Brunette Displacing Blonde As World's Sex Symbol

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Due in large part to Gina Lollobrigida, Sophia Loren and husband-boxer Jack Palance, the brunette is displacing the blonde as the world's sex symbol.

So says a Hollywood hairstyle expert, who also credits Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy with aiding the rise of the brunette as the epitome of beauty.

"This brunette trend . . . Liz and Mrs. Kennedy — has had such an impact on the world's press that blondes cannot compete," commented Mr. Albert Hall, the upright man on Marilyn Monroe and Brigitte Bardot. Now the brunettes have taken over.

What does this momentous trend portend for women?

TRUMPS HIS WORD

Tex Ritter, Autry Albert's word for this, and that's a lot of trust to put in a man with only one name. His clients have included Connie Francis, Eva Marie Saint, Jacqueline Kennedy Adams and Piper Laurie. He'd even sprinkle a little magic on the hair trade; out of the salon he also goes by Levin.

"Fashion trends go in cycles, and the blonde has had the best of it for more than 10 years," he pounded. "Notice that Marilyn Monroe's last two pictures did not make it.

"Notice also that most of the Oscar contenders this year — Sophia Loren, Natalie Wood, Audrey Hepburn, Rita Moreno, etc. — were brunettes.

Because of the dark - haired trend in the air, Albert argued, men are thinking in terms of brunettes. And if men are doing, you can bet that women will do so as well.

"Dark hair is more fluid for styling purposes," he said. "It is hard to wear blonde hair looking natural. It looks tawdry and cheap. It tends to have a fuzzy look. Long hair isn't a problem with brunettes and so you can wear it into many different forms."

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By CEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Dick Beddoes, the sardonic sports columnist of the Vancouver Sun, pens a delightful column on an old warrior of the National Hockey League wars, one Bickey Ian, an old whistle-bottle, bell-ringing buddy of my old footling friend, Mike Madden.

Beddoes interviewed Mickey in a rest home at Redmond, Washington. Both his legs are cut off below the groin. Beddoes says he is a "pale remnant of the hockey referee who once buckled a swash with any man alive. He gained the conviction as a hazardous player in Vancouver some 50 years ago that the best and most natural relief to make to an adversary was a punch in the snoot."

"What happened to my legs?" he said to Beddoes' question, "I guess I skated on them things off."

What really happened was that his left leg was amputated five years ago after a phlebitis attack inflamed the walls of the leg veins. His right leg was removed two years ago as another concession to the same ailment.

Beddoes said Frederick James Ion is 76. He came out of Brantford, Ont., to play lacrosse on the west coast and remained to referee hockey in the Western Canada League run by the Patricks. He transferred later to the N.H.L. and after 20 years, ended his career in 1942 as referee-in-chief. Last year he was elected to the Hall of Fame.

"Now," says Beddoes, "Mr. Ion is a lively oldster, as sharp as aged checkler. Sarcasms dripped from his lips as he compiled offidavits in his time against referencing of hockey. Today Ion:

"We used to run a game with one or two referees," Mickey said. "Now they have a referee and two linesmen cluttering up the ice. The linesmen skate like they're on stilts. And in those striped jerseys they look like jailbirds. Oh, awful!"

Beddoes read a clipping from Ion's scrapbook. "It says here, Mickey, that 'nothing but ice water ran through your veins'."

Ion grinned. "Tough is the only way to referee," he said. "I used to tell young referees breaking in with me to remember one thing. Remember, I told 'em from the time the game starts until it ends, you and I are the only ones men in the rink."

Another scrapbook story told of a bout between Ion and Ted Kitchen Blake was a young player with the Montreal Canadiens.

Ion had rallied Blake with a two-minute minor penalty and Blake skated to purgatory, not gracefully. "I can't tell you what I want to tell you," he muttered. "Because you rake the penalty. But you can guess what I'm thinking."

Ion pounced. "I have guessed," he told Blake, "and for that you get five minutes. Nobody's going to think thinks like that about me."

Forty years ago referees wore a large letter "R" on the front of their jerseys. One night, another clipping said, Ion was in charge of a game between Toronto and an Ottawa team managed by the volatile Tommy Gorman. Mr. Gorman grew excited at the penalties issued by Ion to Ottawa players.

"You know what the 'R' stands for?" Gorman yelled at one frustrated juncture, "It stands for 'referee'."

Ion chuckled at the recollection. "I ran Gorman out of the rink for that crack," he said. "And oh, how I ran him out."

Ion rambled on, Beddoes says, like that for a cheerful hour, delighted with memories long dead in the cellars of the past. He seemed to ride a high tide of humane spirit without legs. He tucked a blanket about his stumps. "You've got to keep them warm," he smiled, "or you feel fire flying out of your toes."

Ion, Beddoes says, has his national anthem, an anonymous poem pasted on the inside cover of his scrapbook, which puts his case in lyrics:

"Whose eagle eye can follow the puck,
Through all its dizzy flight?
Who has to know? Not trust to luck . . .
But must be always right.
It's Mickey!"

Mays, Cepeda Set Pace

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

Stump-ridden Willie Mays has kicked the habit and is rearing up the National League's No. 1 home run threat. Orlando Cepeda for the streaking San Francisco Giants, back on top in the league standings after their sixth consecutive victory.

Both Mays and Cepeda continued their slugging Monday, each tagging a homer to support Jack Sanford, pitching his way out of trouble Gaylord Perry as the Giants knocked off Pittsburgh Pirates 6-4 and toppled them from first place.

Over the span Mays and Cepeda have reactivated the potent 1-2 punch that gave the Giants 36 homers and 105 runs batted in during the 1961 campaign. Mays now has seven homers, tops in the majors, plus 21 RBI while Cepeda, with six homers and knocked in 22 runs.

Mays was hitting a woeful .200 until he began to unlimber the big bat that accounted for 49 homers and 128 RBI last year. A 6-for-19 performance, including three homers and six RBI last four games, has pulled him up to .356.

Cepeda, 24, slugging king last season with 46 homers and 142 RBI, stepped up the pace when Mays started to connect and has hit at a .444 clip over the last six games, hoisting his mark up to .338.

PERIL RIDS PENNANT

While the Giants were extending their streak, Philadelphia Phillies snapped one, beating Milwaukee's Warren Spahn 6-4 for their first victory over the Braves since Opening Day May 23, 1959. n the only other game scheduled, Curt Williams' five-hitter gave Los Angeles Dodgers a 3-1 triumph over Chicago Cubs.

On Road Against Top Teams

Stop Yanks,? Time Is Now

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer

If anybody is going to stop New York Yankees, the time is now.

In the next two weeks the world champions will be playing 16 of 28 games on the road including series with the outstanding Chicago White Sox and Cleveland Indians. Detroit and Baltimore will be mingling strictly with second - division clube. So will the White Sox and Indians. Except for the Yankee series.

In sharp contrast with 1961 when Roy Hamey, the Yanks' general manager, spent hours on the telephone trying to shore up his pitching staff, Hamey is standing pat this season.

"We're not interested in any trades," said Hamey in New York before leaving for the Chicago series. "I'm not bothering to phone and nobody is calling me."

The collapse of Art Ditmar and the ineffective work of Bob Turley threw such a heavy load on Whitey Ford that Manager Ralph Houk has removed Bill Stafford and Roland Sheldon from the starting rotation. This year the rotation of Ford, Terry and Stafford has been enough to handle most of the clubs.

All clubs were idle yesterday.

STAFFORD STARTS

The Yanks send Stafford against John Pizzaro tonight in the opener of a three-game series at Comiskey Park with the White Sox and Art Ditmar against Ned New York. Pizzaro worked the series finale at Yankee Stadium last week when the Yanks shocked the White Sox with a winning four-run rally in the ninth inning.

Cleveland, one game back of New York after being knocked out of first place by Minnesota Twins during the weekend, is on a row, will start for the Athletics. It will be Baltimore's turn to try to cool off Minnesota Twins. Chuck Estrada gets the call against Camilo Pascual, a three-time winner.

Washington, breaking along in reverse with a 2-13 record, hopes to snap its 13-game losing streak at home against the Boston Red Sox's Gene Conley. Pete Burnside, who has won half of Washington's games (one), will pitch for the Senators.

Floyd Patterson Says

Will Fight Liston-Or Never Again

NEW YORK (AP) — Heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson declared he will fight Sonny Liston for the title, or never fight again. He said Chicago is the likely site for the multi-million dollar fight.

The statement, from Patterson at his hideaway training camp at Greenwood Mills, N.Y., squelched reports that the fight would not come off and was circulated since the New York State Athletic Commission refused to give Liston a license.

Patterson said that Liston's home town of Philadelphia is out for the fight. "They'd do anything in that town," he said.

He indicated the fight must take place in September and Liston's the one I'll fight no matter where it's held."

In Philadelphia, Liston's adviser, Jack Nilon, said he was happy to hear of Patterson's stand.

"Sonny will fight him anywhere. He is going into training Wednesday," Nilon said.

Junior Coaches Clash

'Converted Chimney,' 'Scruffiest Team Ever'

GUELPH (CP) — Edmonton Oil Kings and Hamilton Red Wings both went through spirited workouts at Guelph Memorial Gardens Monday night the tonight's second encounter of the Memorial Cup hockey finals.

Oil King's coach, Buster Brayshaw, was happy about the arena, where tonight's contest, as well as the third and fourth games, will be played.

"Bigger and better than ours Hamilton—and we'll have room to utilize our speed," said Brayshaw.

"We won't have any excuses playing on this ice. We'll be well-rested too. We were tired on Sunday—we can play much better than that."

Edmonton, after a gruelling seven-game series against the Brandon Wheat Kings, came east and dropped the opener 5-3 in Hamilton.

HAS TROUBLE PRETAMING

Kings veteran centre Phil Dutton is a doubtful starter. His nose was broken when clipped by Ron Harris' high stick in the Sunday encounter. He's having trouble breathing and it won't be known until later today whether he will dress.

Norm Beaudin, star winger picked up from the Regina Pats, will be in the Edmonton lineup.

Wings coach Eddie Bush is sticking with the same lineup.

"I'd like to get all my players into the series," said the Hamilton coach. "Too bad the CAHA won't let us dress more."

Bush said Wings centre Bob Dean was in the doctor's office getting some stitches out at the same time as Dutton was getting his nose checked and he overheard Edmonton manager Leo Leclerc tell the doctor: "We'll take this Hamilton club easily."

The Bush-Leclerc verbal exchanges have been sizzling since the series got under way. THEY'RE NOT FRIENDS.

Bush welcomed the visitors as "the scruffiest-looking team I've ever seen in a Memorial Cup final."

"We are not big time enough to have a mobile tailor shop with us," replied Leclerc. "We had to pack our equipment west after travelling 4,500 miles in five days for the western playoffs."

Then the Kings manager got a few licks himself about the architecture of the 1,800-seat Hamilton Forum, scene of the opener.

"This place looks like a converted factory chimney," he said.

Only partly placated by the larger ice surface here, Leclerc announced he will ask the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association to shift the series to Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto only.

"You don't play the Grey Cup in a cow pasture," he added.

Siskins Defeat St. Thomas

KITCHENER (CP) — Waterloo Siskins downed St. Thomas Barons 8-4 Monday night in overtime to take a 3-1 lead in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior 'B' best-of-seven final.

Fifth game will be played Friday in Guelph.

George Vail scored the winning goal for the Siskins at 7:43 of the 10-minute overtime period and Bill McGonigal scored twice for Waterloo. Jerry Rickey Eckert scored twice for the losers with Wally Cook picking up a single.

Jim Brown Shoots a 72

CLEVELAND (AP)—Jim Brown, Cleveland Browns' fullback and National Football League rushing champion for the straight years, started playing golf two years ago.

He went around the Highland golf course Monday for 18 holes and wound up with a par 72.

Suspended For Horse Doping

TORONTO (CP) — Trainer Harold James, 58, of Cobourg, Ont., was suspended Monday for 60 days by the Ontario Racing Commission after a hearing on the doping of a harness horse.

The commission and the Canadian Trotting Association ruled James had failed to guard horse John R. Direct, and because it to be guarded, before it raced in the second event at Old Woodbine last April 18.

The horse, owned by Alex Parsons Investment Company Limited of London and driven by Harvey Fleet of London, won the race. The hearing was moved caused after routine saliva and urine tests showed a positive reaction.

It was not known how, when or by whom the caffeine-type drug was administered. The commission ordered the purse money to be redistributed as if John R. Direct had not raced.

James, informed of his suspension, said he would never race a horse again.

"Surely a man can be expected to live up with his horses," he said.

"What has happened to me can happen to anyone. Including lawyer's face and lost purses this matter has cost me at least $1,500."

Crawfords Top Trenton to Even Finals

Crawford Medals, sparked by high-scoring Teddy Batchelor, dumped Trenton Wilsons 68-53 at Moira Secondary School last night to even the Bay of Quinte Basketball League three-year series at one game apiece.

The third and deciding game will be played in Trenton tomorrow (Wednesday) night at eight o'clock.

Batchelor moved back on guard from his usual forward position last night but the move failed to cut into his scoring output. He collected 23 points, despite close shadowing by Trenton's Burleigh, to keep the Crawfords in contention for the league championship.

Trenton took a slim lead early in the game but Belleville moved ahead and never looked back. The Wilsons pulled to within at one point in the second half, after trailing 31-23 at half time, but the winners again opened up a comfortable lead and maintained it until the final whistle.

Both clubs were missing one of their top players. Wilf Borden of Trenton and Bert Faulkner of the Crawfords left the lineups.

Trenton Wilsons (53) — B. Burleigh 14, G. Bambers 12, W. Whitley 8, D. Burke 7, C. Trewer 5, R. Clarke 5, J. Thomsault 4, M. Jeffery.

Belleville Crawfords (68)— T. Batchelor 23, T. McCabe 14, W. Swan 7, L. Campbell 10, R. Trewer 10, L. McDonald, T. Hookings.

Ryan Signs With Lotus Team

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian driver Peter Ryan has signed a three-year contract with the Lotus racing team of England, it was learned Monday.

Ryan, 22, of Mont Tremblant, Que., will be assigned to drive a formula Junior car under sponsorship of Ian Walker for his first year. Walker operates a racing team of factory-supported Lotus cars.

Ryan will start at the Silverstone track in England May 12 and then drive in the formula Junior race preceding the Monaco Grand Prix at Monte Carlo June 3.

Defeat Montreal 4-2

Smoke Eaters Grab 2-1 Cup Lead

TRAIL, B.C. (CP)—It's becoming up to today, down to morrow series for the 1962 Allan Cup championship.

Trail Smoke Eaters were up Monday night as they defeated Montreal Olympics 4-2 to take a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven series for the Canadian senior hockey crown.

It was the Olympics' turn last Saturday after an 8-6 licking in Thursday's first game. Montreal won the second battle 5-3.

If Trail manages to disrupt the pattern, it could take the cup with victories in this fourth game here Wednesday night and the fifth Friday. One or more Montreal wins would push the series to Saturday night, or as far as next Monday.

COUNTS FIRST

Montreal's Roger Picard scored the game's first goal at 14:30 of the first period. Hal Jones evened the count for Smokies at 4.42 of the second and Connie Mendala put the Olympics ahead 2-1 midway later.

They beat Binette three times in the last 10 minutes and 36 seconds on goals by veterans Cal Mockler, Russ Kowalchuk and Gerry Toner. Mockler's goal came with Binette on the bench shorthanded because of a penalty.

The game was staged before 2,222 fans—lowest attendance of the series. Trail has took five minor penalties and fired 37 shots at Binette. Jim Martin in the Trail nets stopped 33 shots.

Kowalchuk's goal at 16:31 of the third period turned out to be the winner.

SITS OUT PENALTY

Kowalchuk was picked by coach Hooker Kromm to sit out a bench penalty, handed to the Smoke Eaters when referee Matt Leyshon said they had seven men on the ice.

The penalty over, Kowalchuk hopped back on the ice and straight into a rush with Jones and Flocko McIntyre. He went down the boards, took McIntyre's pass as he cut in front of the net and jammed the puck past Binette.

Montreal coach Maurice Filion closed the dressing room door to reporters after the game, then emerged to offer a brief comment:

"We win one, we lose one. We were beat because we couldn't get the puck in the net. We couldn't get the puck near the net."

Kromm said the Smokies put on a "terrif team effort" in the game. He quarded and didn't get any breaks. We had to make our own.

Stewart, Schreider Stay Put

No Deals, Say Clair

OTTAWA (CP) — Hathack Ron Stewart, undoubtedly one of the most tempting pieces of trade bait ever dangled before other Canadian football clubs, apparently is going to pull on an Ottawa Rough Riders sweater again this fall.

Nobody came up with a big enough bite and Rough Riders coach Frank Clair says the speedy player probably will remain with the team, but not on a commuting basis. The same goes for Gary Schreider.

Stewart played last season while going back and forth to Toronto's Osgoode Hall for his law studies. He failed his exams, Schreider plans to go to the same law school this year.

Both the Ottawa Citizen and the Ottawa Journal had weekend telephone interviews with Clair at his Rensselaer, Ind., home. He told them he couldn't get the players he wanted in return for the two aspiring lawyers.

ARGOS ORKEE FAIR

Toronto Argonauts had offered the Riders a choice of two imports. He didn't identify them, but The Journal says "one of them is known to be Dick Shatto, who becomes a Canadian citizen next year."

"Other possibilities are Boyd Carter who has been five years with Argos, Jim Rountree four, and Dave Mann four."

Clair says he had advised Stewart to "concentrate on seven or eight big games with us this year, forget football while he attends Osgoode Hall, and then be ready to resume his football career in 1963."

Clair said: "I have spoken to both Schreider and Stewart in the last couple of days and have explained the situation to them. We simply cannot get the players we want from either boy and have advised both players to count on making this the big season until they have to move to Toronto to complete their law studies."

In Toronto Ken Brown, the Argonauts promotion director, scoffed at the suggestion that Shatto, Rountree or Mann had been mentioned as trade bait.

Brown said Nobby Wirkowski, Toronto assistant coach, was discussing a trade a while back with Riders manager George Terlep is an Ottawa restaurant.

"Terlep started bidding a waiter about swapping Stewart for Shatto, and I guess the guy called one of the papers."

ENTRY REJECTED

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)— A. J. Shepherd of Gardena, Calif., who was involved in two spectacular auto racing wrecks last year, has been turned down as an entrant in the 500-mile race here May 30, Dr. Tom Hanna, chief of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway medical staff, said he didn't consider Shepherd physically ready to resume driving.

Premier Denies Any Pressure By United States

LONDON (Reuters) — Prime Minister Macmillan denied in a television interview shown here Monday night that the United States is trying to block Britain's bid into the European Common Market.

"For some reason I don't know, people believe the United States is trying to force us into the Common Market," he said.

The U.S. Macmillan insisted, was only trying to make certain that concessions obtained for the British Commonwealth did not adversely affect America.

In the TV interview, recorded in Washington during his visit there last week, Macmillan also said he, President Kennedy and Soviet Premier Khrushchev seemed to agree that it would be a good thing to meet, "but not if nothing comes out of it." The groundwork must have first be laid before any summit meeting could take place.

New Policy Will Reduce Rentals

TORONTO (CP)—Family allowances collected by people in Ontario public housing projects will no longer be considered income when rents are computed, it was announced Monday night by a joint agreement of the federal Works Minister Walker and Ontario's Economics Minister Macaulay said the change will apply to federal-provincial housing projects where rents are based on the family income.

The new policy becomes effective today and should mean lower rents for more than 3,000 tenants in public housing projects in Ontario.

Mr. Macaulay said Ontario has supported requests for the change in recent years by the Ontario Association of Housing Authorities. He said the province "will cheerfully assume its share of the additional subsidy."

PROCLAIMS UN DAY

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy has proclaimed Wednesday, October 24, as United Nations Day. The world organization's "vigor and effectiveness have increased over the years," the president said Monday. United Nations Day is observed annually in the U.S. on the anniversary of the coming into force of the UN Charter.

Two Escape From Joyceville

KINGSTON (CP) — Two men escaped Monday from the Joyceville medium security institution just north of here. They are Thomas Joseph Brown, 30, Toronto, and Lloyd A. Gallagher, 33, Guelph.

Jillings was sentenced in September, 1956, at Hackley to 11 years for breaking and entering and theft, plus auto theft. Gallagher was sentenced in London, Ont., in February, 1960, to three years, six months for breaking and entering with intent.

Butter Prices To Be Slashed In Stores Today

OTTAWA (CP)—A $46,000,000 butter-sales campaign will be subjected to the sharp - eyed scrutiny of the Canadian housewife starting May 1.

She's the girl who can make or break the attempt to expand butter sales by slicing 12 cents a pound from May 1 prices. It means that butter should retail between 36 and 39 cents a pound across Canada for top grades. No loss is involved for farmers who get a 36-cent subsidy.

Retailers have had ample warning of the plan to clear shelves of higher-priced stocks, government officials say. Wholesalers will be controlled by the government so that none are caught with a loss.

The target is a substantial depletion of the butter surplus totalling about 180,000,000 pounds in government hands at last report—down seasonally from a Dec. 31 level of 197,000,000 pounds.

Accused Facing Murder Charge In London

LONDON Ont. (CP)—Herbert Worthid, Jr., Monday was formally charged with capital murder of Mrs. Pearl Elizabeth Blishborn, the widow whose body was found Sunday in the cellar of his boarding home. He was remanded in court to May 7.

The second woman, Mrs. Lillian Gillingham, 52, was found bleeding but conscious on a court upstairs prior to the discovery. She was taken to hospital with injuries to the head, neck and mouth. Her condition is fair.

Police said Worthid has been in London for the last three or four years, and is from Burks Falls, Ont.

No Possible Strike Date Is Announced

MONTREAL (CP)—The CNR and representatives of 10,000 trainmen met for more than three hours Monday as negotiations aimed at heading off still another threatened rail strike resumed.

Another session was scheduled for today.

No statement on possible progress was issued after Monday's meeting, reported to have been devoted primarily to a post - by - point review of the stands taken by the publicly owned railway and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen (CLC).

The meeting, the first since a federal conciliation board headed down a report on the long-standing dispute April 18, started only 30 minutes after the union publicly announced it had rejected the board's majority report and was planning a strike vote among its membership.

No possible strike date was mentioned. The strike vote, if expected to take at least two weeks.

Fine Edifice on Plains Has More Bars Than Hotel It Is Provincial Jail

By GERRY McNEIL

QUEBEC (CP) — There's a fine edifice on the Plains of Abraham with plenty of bars and a superb view of the St. Lawrence River.

It isn't a tourist trap. It's patronized mainly by an exclusive group of the provincial population.

You have to operate through a judge to get a reservation, and a lawyer to break it.

A few hundred yards away are the cliffs Wolfe's men scaled in 1759 to win Canada. Next door is the staid provincial museum and across the plain are 8200-a-month luxury apartments.

Gene Letourneau, 62-year-old governor of the provincial jail, notes that the Chateau Frontenac, which hasn't a choice Plains location, has fewer bars.

NO CHARGE

"You go to the Chateau and they charge $5 extra for a river-side view," he tells restless guests. "We don't charge anything."

Like Quebec's other major jails, the one on the Plains has an idyllic location.

At Montreal's Bordeaux, complaints about the food periodically echo through a residential neighborhood and across the peaceful Riviere des Prairies.

Even the Provincial Jail was built in 1854 it was a good distance from the present area. And they don't want a jail smack in the middle of it.

Junior Always Says 'No'

DEAR DORIS:—Our boy of four was always well advanced and a very pleasant child at home. Now the only thing you can call him is a smart aleck.

DORIS CLARK

No matter what my husband or I ask him to do, it is always "no." Whether it's picking up toys, getting dressed, eating his meals, going to bed, or just plain being quiet. We have tried taking his toys away, making him go to his room, even a good spanking, and none of them have the slightest effect.

He is forever hurting his little brother. He sits on him or twists his arm, or takes toys away from him. The poor child has blue marks over his body.

This isn't because we favor our youngest son, because as a baby he had stomach trouble and vomited most of the time. For this reason he was never picked up and played with until he was a year old, and even now he prefers to be left alone and will play for hours by himself.

Is there any solution for a child that has no respect for his parents? If so, please tell me what it is. —STUMPED.

DEAR STUMPED:—Your Little Monster was a Little Model once. He wasn't born bad. As fear is normally begins to assert independence with objections, but there are other things.

He does have he has lost your love. He has sensed your concern over Son Number Two (more than you give him credit for). As far as he can see, this depletes the supply of love, and he lacks his share. He takes it out on little brother, who is the culprit!

When you punish him, he's sure his fears were well founded.

How much time can you spare for him? Does his father play games with him, or go for walks and find him frogs? You must give him love, not lip service, and impress him with the fact that he has a big place in your heart.

Then fair discipline, given with kindness but plenty firm, will be taken by him as part of loving care. The way you handle him now can influence his whole life.

Government pamphlets and books are invaluable helps in dilemmas like yours. I recommend "Discipline," "Jealousy," "Obedience" in the Child Training Series, Mental Health Division, Director of Mental Health and Welfare, Ottawa. Also the 300-page book, "Up the Years From Six to Six." Your local or provincial Health Department keeps them on hand for you.

DEAR DORIS:—Could you please be of assistance to me in joyfully surprising a friend of mine. He is 28 years old and he's been confined to a wheelchair all his life. The Bible and world events are his main interests.

If some of your kind readers would write to him, they can contact him at this address: 881 Tingley, 3735 Victoria Ave., Regina, Sask.—A. F.

How about it, Pen Pals?.

By SYDNEY OMARR

Aries (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19)—If question of friendship coming up or is "tested" due to financial consideration choose Friendship. You cannot go wrong today by taking course closest to your heart.

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20) Your cycle moving up. You can "afford" to be generous with time, ideas. Your enthusiasm could win the day for you. Stick to convictions. They will pay off.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21)—Best course is one of independence. Allowing others to dictate to you could cause unhappiness and financial loss. You are versatile with many good ideas. Use those assets today.

Cancer (June 22 to July 21)—Diplomacy should be key. There are two sides today, both with merit. If you lean to one side, you may offend loved one. Be truthful. State frankly that you feel a compromise is due.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21) — You may demand the practical. But the more you push, the less you gain today. Planetary aspects reveal that what you desire may be so close that you can't see it.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22)—Sky yes when opportunity presents itself. The affirmative approach today. There may be much work involved. But all appears make-to-order for you.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)—See romance which exists around you. You'll feel excitement of accomplishment if you stop brooding. Cycle has been higher but you gain by appreciating what you possess.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) — You may be "urged on" by one who appears to have your best interests at heart. Better take second, skeptical look. Analyze situation and decide for yourself.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) — Moon in section of chart relating to adventure, love, expression of creative forces. You "wake up" to many opportunities today, and make vital decisions.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) — Pushing toward objective could cause you to "slide" by it. Beef to take long-range v...w. Do not be in too much of a hurry. You gain more by waiting than pushing.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) —Go after what you want. You may find wishes closer at hand than you at first presumed. Key is optimism and basic sense of humor. Enjoy the day.

Pisces (Feb. 20. to March 20) —Be willing to invest in yourself . . . your own ideas and abilities surpass anything the outside can offer. This not easy advice to follow. But it can bring you great rewards.

If today is your birthday . . . you can be a determined individual, which, by itself, is commendable. But, carried to extremes, you become down-right obstinate. Be willing to change course of action or ideas when necessary. Year improves by October. Tremendous financial opportunity may open up.

General Tendencies: Aries person apt to be in news spotlight. Libra individuals should not act on impulse. Reason is key word for that sign. Cycle remains up for places. Aries and Taurus.

Second Vatican Council To Be Covered by Priest

By Pauline Vallancourt
Canadian Press Correspondent

ROME (CP)—One of the busiest newspaper men in Rome during the forthcoming Ecumenical Council of the Roman Catholic Church will be a Canadian priest, Rev. Emile Legault of Montreal.

Father Legault, a priest of the Holy Cross order attached to St. Joseph's oratory in Montreal, has been sent to Rome to cover the council for the Canadian Catholic Conference—the national organization of all Catholic bishops in Canada.

In addition, he will be doing broadcasts for the CBC and Radio Luxemburg and writing articles for the Montreal daily newspaper La Presse, the Swiss news agency KIPA and the Canadian Catholic periodical L'Oratoire.

"Where will you be getting all your news?" Father Legault was asked in a recent interview.

PREPARATIONS SECRET

"Here," he replied with a smile that nevertheless seemed to say it's no easy matter for a journalist to get news in the Vatican, even if the journalist happens to be a priest.

"What I'll be doing above all," he said, "is sounding out various personalities whenever I get hold of them, bishops, theologians, laymen.

"You can't get anything really big out of the theologians working on the commissions preparing for the council, however, because they are bound by an oath of secrecy."

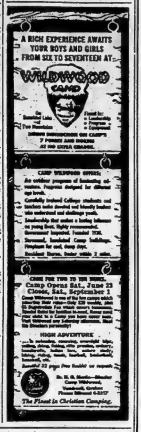
The council, to be known as the Second Vatican Council, is scheduled to begin in October. The First Vatican Council—and last ecumenical council to date—was held in 1869-71.

Father Legault said the council now in preparation will be distinguished "by its dynamism . . . and the witness that it will bear to the extraordinary vitality of the church.

"This council will strive, I think, to define the positive role of the layman."

Father Legault is staying at the Holy Cross monastery on the famous Via Aurelia Antica, in beautiful countryside just outside Rome, and will be here until the end of the council.

What will he be doing afterward?



"That's the secret of the gods . . . and my superiors. Putting my Roman experiences to good use, I hope."

PLANS TO STAY

GEORGETOWN (CP) — Premier Cheddi Jagan of British Guiana said Saturday he plans to stay in office despite his government's defeat in the legislative assembly earlier this week. The Jagan government was defeated Thursday night on third reading of the 1962 budget when the acting speaker voted to break a 13-13 deadlock.

TO REPORT ON COUNCIL — Rev. Emile Legault of Montreal is in Rome to write and broadcast about the Ecumenical Council of the Roman Catholic Church, scheduled to start in October. He will write articles for the Canadian Catholic Conference, a Swiss news agency, Montreal La Presse and a Canadian Catholic periodical L'Oratoire. He will also do broadcasts for CBC and Radio Luxemburg. — (CP Photo).

What Is Red And White Plan?

The Red and White plan calls for the co-operation of the independent food merchant and the wholesale food distributor. In good faith these two important factions in the food industry pool their resources with a single purpose to provide the shopper in Canada, the United States, or Europe with foods of quality, in wide variety, at a price that is competitive with other major retail outlets.

Thousands of Red and White Stores in the United States and Canada are prospering under the Red and White sign — and this same plan has enabled progressive food wholesalers to thrive and expand.

Teamwork is the answer. The food merchant joins Red and White so that he may have a merchandising program so that he may have the necessary knowledge at his disposal to meet the competition in his area.

Long Battle Against Sea Lamprey Is Being Won

TORONTO (CP) — Success may be in sight in the long battle against the sea lamprey, says J. W. Spooner, Ontario minister of lands and forests.

"If our biologists have not misinterpreted the evidence of the poisoning program to date, the spring run of 1962 will be the last heavy sea lamprey run from Lake Superior.

"In spite of our best efforts, however, it is extremely doubtful if sea lamprey can be completely eliminated from the Great Lakes."

The lamprey, an eel-like fish that grows to a length of 12 to 24 inches, kills by fastening itself to a fish and sucking the blood out.

It has been in the St. Lawrence River and Lake Ontario for centuries but not until the Welland Canal opened in 1829 could it bypass Niagara Falls. Even then it took the lamprey nearly 100 years to pass through Lake Erie.

It practically eliminated the lake trout populations of Lake Ontario, Lake Huron and Lake Michigan. Only Lake Superior has any of the original trout population and control efforts have been centred there.

PLANT TROUT

In a continuing program to rehabilitate the Lake Superior fishery, the Ontario government will plant half a million mackinaw lake trout yearlings this spring.

This is part of a multi-million-dollar campaign of lamprey control and restocking started in 1958 by the Great Lakes Fisheries Commission in which the Canadian and U.S. governments and provincial and state agencies are represented.

The attack on the sea lamprey is based on the fact that the mature adults spawn only once and die, and that spawning occurs in gravel - bottom streams. Young lamprey hatch and work their way downstream during a period of four or five years to the open lake.

The present method of fighting the lamprey is to poison the spawning streams. Poison developed for this purpose is highly selective and is used in concentrations that have only slight effect on other fish.

May Day Riots In Portugal Called Red Plot

Battle Rages 3 Hours In Streets of Lisbon

CP from Reuters-AP

LISBON — Portugal today counted dead and more than 30 persons injured while scores were arrested in turbulent May Day clashes between security forces and anti-government demonstrators in the country's two largest cities.

Club - swinging police and troops battled the outbursts, but scattered violence continued through the night.

Premier Antonio de Oliveira Salazar's dictatorship claimed the demonstrations — the most violent in years—were part of a Communist plan for a general uprising through the country. The government asserted the Communist failure to muster support except in Lisbon, Portugal's capital, and Oporto, Portugal's second city 175 miles to the northeast.

The premier had banned May Day demonstrations after the Communist underground leaflets signed "Duarte," the pseudonym of Alvaro Cunhal, general secretary of the outlawed Portuguese Communist Party, clandestine reports said Cunhal recently slipped back into Portugal after two years in Moscow.

In Lisbon, large numbers of ferry boats were tied up early when the first group of workers crossed the Tagus River on their way to Premier Salazar's 32-year rule.

THIRTY SAGES

The demonstrators surged into the waterfront streets and an estimated 2,000 of them massed in Black Horse Square, the centre of government ministries. Hundreds of police and troops moved in to disperse them. The fighting raged for three hours.

Police and stone-hurling demonstrators exchanged blows as well as the officers broke up the demonstrations.

"In Lisbon," a government statement asserted, "Communist agents, in the pay of foreign regions of the country, formed groups totalling several hundreds of people who attacked the police with stones and, in some cases, with firearms."

Two policemen and three civilians were reported hit by gunfire in Lisbon, where 32 in all were treated at hospital.

Thirty-seven were treated at a hospital in Oporto.

Witnesses said hundreds of demonstrators were arrested in Lisbon, Setubal, Barreiro and Oporto.

Govt's Record On Jobless Is Defended

BRANTFORD (CP) — Postmaster-General William Hamilton, waving a Toronto newspaper, Tuesday night criticized the Liberal party's complaints of the unemployment situation in Canada.

Since the present government took office "there has been the most spectacular industrial development this country has ever seen," he told the Progressive Conservative nomination convention for Brantford.

Mr. Hamilton said the newspaper contained 18 columns of help - wanted advertisements. One reason these jobs are listed is that many Canadian people lack the technical training needed to fill these positions, he said.

He said the government has built and enlarged technical and vocational training schools, paying three-quarters of the capital cost, half of the operating costs and half the training required for teachers.

"We have not sat on our benches in Parliament and bemoaned the unemployment," he said. "We have got off those benches and done something about it."

Jack Wratten, Sr., 56, was nominated candidate for Brantford in the June 18 election. He has held the riding for the last five years.

Alberta Gets $6 Million More For Oil Rights

It has become a common occurrence since the big Leduc oil discovery in 1947. Forty-eight companies paid the province's Credit government $6,223,796 Tuesday for reservations and leases. It boosted to more than $17,500,000, the amount received from 1962 sales.

Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas Company was the big buyer, paying $1,521,627 for four tracts, including $1,003,161 for a 46,080-acre reservation in Lake Gynthia. provincial reserve about 150 miles southwest of Edmonton.

Alberta has received more than $1,100,000,000 since 1947 from land rentals, oil production royalties and sale of land leases and drilling and prospecting rights. This has produced between one-third and one-half of the provincial revenue each year. The province owns about 81 per cent of all mineral rights in Alberta.

Nab Fugitives At Kingston

KINGSTON (CP)—City police today apprehended two convicts who escaped Monday from nearby Joyceville medium security institution.

Taken into custody were Thomas C. Jillings, 30, Toronto, and Lloyd A. Gallagher, 23, Guelph.

Jillings was sentenced in September, 1956, at Lindsay to 11 years for breaking, entering and theft, plus auto theft. Gallagher was sentenced in London, Ont., in February, 1960, to three years, six months for breaking entering and theft.

CPL. SWITCHES PLEA TO GUILTY OF SMUGGLING

Carries Penalty Of Dismissal

OTTAWA (CP) — A general court martial resumes today to hear evidence leading to the military punishment—if any—of Cp. Gerald Albert West, 26, who admitted charges of smuggling by army personnel in Indochina.

The kilted Black Watch corporal listened to 3½ hours of his trial Tuesday before suddenly switching his plea to one of guilty on two counts of service offences that carry a maximum penalty, or dismissal with disgrace.

Open to the five - member court of officers are lesser penalties—if any—that include forfeiture of pay, reduction in rank, detention, a fine, a severe reprimand or a "reprimand."

Cpl. West, about 33, served as a security guard in Vietnam and Saigon last year and is the first soldier to be arraigned on trial in charges arising from alleged smuggling of gold and opium within Indochina.

Tuesday's evidence included a Feb. 8 statement the corporal gave to provost officers in Fredericton, and in which he implicated a major and a corporal and several other NCOs in activities which he suspected was smuggling.

NO CHARGES ANNOUNCED

The army later identified the two as Maj. W. A. Platt and Cpl. W. J. Wood, who will be tried later. They were not further identified and the army has not yet announced the charges against them.

Cpl. West is charged with breach of military law by carrying a package from Vietnam to Saigon "through suspicious that the content was gold," and with smuggling through customs in Saigon a trunk that he believed contained opium.

The corporal's court said he was given a package by Maj. Platt for delivery to a contact in a Saigon hotel. The corporal said he was told that

Economy and Nuclear Arms Issue Debated in Campaign

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Candidates in Canada's general election today take a lap from British Prime Minister Macmillan's 40 years' experience in politics.

"When you lose, you're apt to lose confidence with democracy," he says. "When you win—and then you always know the people were sound at heart."

Mr. Macmillan's stormy nonpartisan comment was made Tuesday night in Toronto to Conservative politicians and editors at the annual dinner of The Canadian Press.

It is not definitely where the ice is likely to be this," he said in an address winding up his two-day Canadian visit.

But for the candidates, warming up in the campaign trail Tuesday there was no ice—or thin.

The economy and nuclear armaments were among the issues which emerged in a day's electioneering that saw only one national leaders in action—Lester Pearson of the Liberals in British Columbia and T. C. Douglas of the New Democratic Party in Alberta.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker was in Ottawa winding up the second days of talks, focusing on the European Common Market and its ramifications, with Mr. Macmillan.

Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson was getting the finishing touches on party organizational work in Toronto.

Today's schedule has Mr. Diefenbaker flying to St. John's for a quick two-day Newfoundland tour; Mr. Pearson visiting Kelowna and Penticton in interlarded B.C. and Lethbridge and Calgary in Alberta; Mr. Douglas speaking in Schrift, Man., and Mr. Thompson doing party administrative work in Ottawa.

During an election each Canadian political party has its own jargon for telling its voters how it proposes to solve the country's economic ills.

Today is how various party spokesman put it:

Justice Minister Fulton, speaking in New Westminster, B.C., described the Progressive Conservative approach as that of "a government acting in partnership with private enterprise."

The governments policies were directed towards mini-

'Revolution Is Under Way' Asserts Argentine Minister

BUENOS AIRES (Reuters)—Argentina's new interior minister, Dr. Walter Borlenghi, astounded reporters Tuesday night by telling them "a revolution is under way."

Borlenghi said: "When a president-is in prison and elections are scrapped there is a revolution under way."

"It is an illusion to believe we live within the law. This is a revolutionary period and refers a big tragedy. Let us see how we shall get out of it."

Wording of Act Is Disputed By Counsel

WHITBY, Ont. (CP)—A case based on the Lord's Day Act has raised the possibility that the act may be referring in part to Saturday.

Magistrate H. R. Howitt reserved judgment until May 15 on charges against Frank Gilbert and his son Frank, both of Dunbarton, after their defence counsel called some of the wordings in the act confusing.

Crown Attorney Bruce Affleck said the act stipulates that the Lord's Day means that period of time which begins at 12 o'clock Saturday afternoon and ends the following afternoon.

Lawyer Gordon Weteniko maintained the terminology was ambiguous and could mean the Lord's Day was from Saturday noon to Sunday noon. He said that if there were any doubt, the case should be dismissed.

The Crown attorney defended the wording as the correct way of saying from midnight Saturday to midnight Sunday.

The Gilberts were charged with unlawfully providing for their employment at a teen-age twist party at which admission was charged on a Sunday.

CANNOT IGNORE OFFER OF CLOSER TIES TO EUROPE

Macmillan Speaks To Press Gathering

TORONTO (CP)—Prime Minister Macmillan headed into a full day of meetings with Canadian hosts today after expressing to Canadians that Britain cannot ignore the prospects offered by closer ties to continental Europe.

The British leader was winding up a busy week in which he conferred with President Kennedy in Washington and Prime Minister Diefenbaker in Ottawa. He also addressed United States newspaper publishers and conferred in New York and four Canadian counterparts in Canada.

After eating at Canada's biggest tenant-governor, J. Keiller Mackay, Mr. Macmillan was scheduled to attend the freedom of Toronto and a silver cigar box at a city hall ceremony. A luncheon reception by the Ontario government was slated as his last official function before leaving by air for London at 7:30 p.m.

In a televised speech Tuesday night at the annual dinner of the Canadian Press, Mr. Macmillan emphasized the importance and difficulty of Britain's pending decision to join or remain outside the six-nation European Economic Community.

Canadian leaders recently have expressed fears that British membership in the Common Market would seriously disrupt Commonwealth trade.

In his speech Tuesday night, Mr. Macmillan reiterated that Britain is determined to safeguard the lives of Commonwealth while realizing that closer contractual association with continental

Luft Charges Policemen Aided Judy Garland to Take Children

NEW YORK (AP) — Police have launched an investigation into charges by producer Sid Luft that he was beaten by two husky private detectives while his estranged wife, actress-singer Judy Garland, fled with the couple's children.

Also being studied was a hotel spokesman's charge that two uniformed policemen assisted Miss Garland in taking the children from the fashionable Stanhope Hotel last Saturday night.

Miss Garland took the children—Joey, 7, and Lorna, 9—to Los Angeles after the Academy Awards movie. She was not available for comment, but her manager said she knew nothing of Luft's charge.

Frank Bromber, Stanhope manager, said the two uniformed officers told an assistant manager they were "going to assist two private investigators in getting the children out of suite 606 and that they would use force, if necessary, like breaking the door."

Bromber said the uniformed policemen did not take the room lock but carried the two children to the street.

In announcing the investigation, Deputy Police Commissioner Walter Arm said:

"If there were any policemen there at the time, we want to know who they were, what they did and why."

Mrs. Garland, who married Luft 11 years ago, has said she would be should see the children occasionally, but that she is "going to make sure he does not get another parent control of them."

Also with the 30-year-old actress in London is Lisa Minelli, 16, her daughter by a previous marriage.

Luft, 46, said he would fly to London soon to see the children.

But he suggested that Britain cannot afford to "stand sideline" apart from the movement for European unity.

Never since we have tried to escape from the grip of Europe we have been drawn back," he said. "For as long as we live in Europe, we are immediately involved — and so, indeed are you.

"But if things are right, there is in this community an immense power which can be mobilized and marshalled from the point of view of self-sacrifice but from the point of view of fulfilling the rich which advanced communities ought to play in the world."

Mr. Macmillan, who was reported to have told Canadian and U.S. leaders up to summer Britain would join the Common Market under any conditions, said on Tuesday night "nothing could or should be allowed to weaken traditional Commonwealth ties.

He said the six Common Market countries have "as great a responsibility" with Britain in deciding whether European and Commonwealth interests can be complementary rather than opposite.

"If they want to they will have to make it easy for us," he said. "Whatever may be the outcome it must have a great influence for good or ill upon the future."

Mr. Macmillan opened his speech to some 300 newspaper executives and their wives with light remarks on the art of politics, making it clear he would avoid involvement in the current campaign for the Peel by-election, to be held June 18.

At the close of the dinner meeting, after a long standing ovation, Mr. Macmillan rose to say that his reception in Canada had moved him deeply. He had much sympathy helped his government in dealing with important decisions.

Mr. Macmillan predicted that eventually the same individual pressures, desires and aspirations which led to freedom and independence for countries formerly under European influence will begin to operate in the Soviet bloc.

"But that is for the future. For the present we must recognize that the rigidity organized monolithic system of government is backed by great resources."

Imperialism and revolution combined had set Russia on the world since Napoleon. Today, Russia was armed with "these terrible weapons of one."

Many Questions Pertaining To Planning Considered

TRENTON — What kind of problems confront the Trenton and Suburban Planning Board?

Has the board met with opposition from the people of Trenton? Is the population increasing or decreasing? (tentatively 11,611) says board chairman Dr. W. A. L. McDonald.

These is the real problem: public apathy. When some people contrive the zoning by-law, would another town citizens be interested in it? Would it be reported it to the board? If so, what does the board do about it, anyway? In the final analysis, the board is only a planning board that poses another question. The job must be secured of co-operation from whatever council is going to be in power.

These and other questions pertaining to planning were considered at the board meeting held at last night's meeting.

Present at the meeting were the chairman, Dr. McDonald, board members John Burnet, A. A. Mitchell, Richard Burnet, and Bruce Ireland; town engineer W. J. Boswell; assistant secretary to the engineer, Arie Hoorneweg and board secretary F. W. Lloyd.

Board members weren't content with simply complaining about their problems. They were merely trying to crystalize them. A Community Planning Association conference which will be held in the Peel Team Hotel, Toronto, in June, various planning boards throughout Ontario will present problems for discussion.

The Trenton members will ask for guidance on the touchy subject of enforcement of zoning regulations.

Another thing the Trenton group would like to hear discussed is why it takes so long to get a hearing with the Ontario Municipal Board. An owner, who asks for a minor change in the zoning by-law often has to wait three to five months for a hearing.

HAS LOST INTEREST

By the time a hearing comes about and the asked for change is made, the owner has changed the would-be builder has lost interest in his original project. The end result of this is by no day, Russia was armed with these terrible weapons of one."

International Nickel paced base metals with a one-point gain. Consolidated Mining and Smelting was up ¼ while Hudson Bay Mining slipped ⅜. Speculative ast Lake Dufault drop 55 cents to $5.00 and Latin American 16 cents to $1.11.

Northgate rose 16 cents to $6.20. Among western oils, Great Plains Development ast Pacific Petroleum both rose ¼ and Home A ¾.

Levy offered $20 each for up to 419,000 Russell shares, countering an earlier bid of $18 each for 300,000 shares from an anonymous purchaser. Company officials said Levy would return all shares over 419,000.

Told Dept. May Allow Ice Fishing For Trout in County Next Winter

Trout fishermen in Hastings county next year might be given the privilege of ice fishing, Hastings county council members were told yesterday.

Last year council approved of a Madoc Fish and Game Club resolution asking that ice fishing for trout be allowed and yesterday a letter from the department was read which noted the request was being given consideration.

But Reeve Verne McMurrey of Tudor and Cashel, said there was likely to be ice fishing for trout in 1963. If this was granted the bag limit would be the same and the period would in all probability be for three years.

REJECT REQUEST

The request last year of council that nursing homes be considered for patients covered by Ontario Hospital Insurance has been turned down by the department.

The letter reporting the department's decision provoked considerable discussion, with many of the members still feeling the move requested would ease the hospital bed shortage.

Marmora Reeve William Shannon, however, said that such a move would bring nursing homes to the same level as hospitals.

He did not think it would be in the interest of the province as a whole to extend O.H.S. benefits to nursing homes.

"The province has refused and there is nothing we can do but accept its decision," he said.

REQUESTS GRANT

Gerald Boyce, president of the Hastings County Historical Society spoke to council requesting the usual county grant to the county museum on Church Street.

He said that since the museum opened in late August there had been 2,257 visitors which, he felt, was a good showing. He stated that items displayed of historical interest in the Hastings area had more than doubled since the museum was opened. A new display covering the early history of the lumbering industry would, he felt, be of interest to county councillors.

Canada Lacks Enough General Practitioners

Although Canada has the highest qualified medical specialists in the world she has been suffering from a distinct lack of general practitioners, Dr. Reg. Anderson told local Kiwanians yesterday afternoon at the Kiwanis Centre.

The former Belleville practioner, a graduate of McGill University, told his audience what steps the medical profession was taking to cure this ill and to provide more and better qualified general practitioners, through the College of General Practice. This College, he explained, was solely for the purpose of educating the general practitioner, or family doctor of the studeot, intense and practising levels.

Membership requires that the individual doctor put in at least 100 hours in formal post graduate study every two years and the College has effected the establishment of proper post graduate courses so that the general practitioner can study almost any phase of medicine which he desires.

Dr. Anderson emphasized the importance of a family doctor in a society which was founded on the integrity and good health of the individual family. His position is such that he requires every bit as much training as a specialist and must be able to care for the majority of diseases encountered and know where to get care for the remainder.

"If the family doctor cannot handle that bellyache he should know who can," Dr. Anderson exclaimed.

The College, he advised, was also doing what it could to prevent the current trend where there was 50 per cent of medical graduates go into specialized medicine through the introduction of more general practitioners as lecturers and teachers in the medical schools.

An example of the value of the work of the College of General Practice, which has been in existence since 1954, is the case where Dr. F. W. Murphy of Picton discovered a case of a rare disease and was able to take action before it had progressed to the point where no medical treatment would have been of any use. There was another case of this in St. Catherines also, the speaker advised.

Kiwanians Gerry Wishart and Ken Pinder introduced and thanked the speaker respectively.

ticising "a dynamic economic growth which does not contribute to the freedom of the individual which it so fundamentally, to our Canadian heritage."

NDP Leader Douglas told reporters in Calgary the key to Canada's advancement is "economic planning." In such planning labor had an important role but its use of strikes as a negotiating weapon now was obsolete."

MIKE TALKS DEFENCE

Defence was the keynote of statements by Liberal party leader in his first election appearance on the west coast. Mr. Pearson, speaking in the morning, flight to Vancouver from Toronto, visited the RCAF stations at Comox, Courtenay and Victoria on Vancouver Island.

Mr. Pearson said in Victoria a Liberal government would "discuss, with our allies in NATO the exact nature of the commitments that the present government has made for Canada."

Under a Liberal administration, Canada would help limit the number of countries with nuclear weapons by using conventional weapons for the time being.

However, he told reporters earlier in Vancouver that the party's defence platform had to be flexible because it did not know what defensive weapons might be needed by Canada in the next five years. He would not take a stand that would prevent Canada from participating in any future NATO nuclear force.

In Calgary, Mr. Douglas also took up the nuclear theme. The NDP leader said: "Conservatives "have consistently refused to tell the Canadian people whether or not they intend to make Canada a nuclear, na-tion."

Describing the Conservative policy as "misleading," he said the party "constantly rejects nuclear arms either at home or for Canadian forces abroad.

Mrs. Erle Denyes Unveils Plaque to Late Husband Presented by Past Wardens

Past wardens of the county of Hastings today commemorated the late Erle S. Denyes, who for 27 years was clerk-treasurer of the county, as they presented a plaque in his honor to be hung in the new county administration building.

The plaque in memory of the man who was known as "Mr. County of Hastings," was unveiled by Mrs. Denyes at this morning's session of Hastings county council.

"I thank you sincerely for your kindness in making this possible," Mrs. Denyes told the ex-wardens following the ceremony.

"This is a day which I will never forget and I have resolved to remember it as a happy day, because nothing would have given Erle more happiness than to have his picture in the county "hall of fame" along with those of past county wardens."

The plaque will be hung in the county committee room along with pictures of former wardens dating back to 1850.

Ex-Warden W. J. Davis, who presided over the unveiling ceremony, said it was an honor to be present at the unveiling of the plaque to Mr. Denyes.

"In Mr. Denyes we had a man who fought for his county and who worked for his county," Mr. Davis said. "Mr. Denyes was a faithful servant of the county for many years."

"Only former wardens fully appreciated Mr. Denyes' importance to the work of the county," he said.

The plaque to Mr. Denyes' memory bears the names of 25 former county wardens who contributed toward the memorial. Most of the ex-wardens were present for the ceremony.

Junior Chamber of Commerce To Tape Over 3000 Bicycles

"Help tape a bike and save a child's life," is the theme for a major Junior Chamber of Commerce project which commenced at St. Michael's Academy today.

Members of the Junior Chamber, under the direction of Sgt. H. W. Blatchford, of the city police station, will be taping bicycles for public and separate school students throughout the city in grades 5, 6, 7 and 8.

REGISTERING TAPES

The red and white reflecting type tape will be placed on the rear fender of the bicycle. All bicycles are thoroughly inspected by Sergeant Blatchford before the tape is applied.

The project will commence on Wednesday of this week and is expected to be completed by next Friday. It is expected over 3,000 bicycles will be taped during that period.

Permission for the project was granted to the J.C.s by the School Board and the Belleville and District Home and School Association.

Financing of the tape, which will cost somewhere in the neighborhood of $600, will be done through the sale of 25 cent paper pens with an inscription that reads in part, "Help tape a bike—and save a child's life."

The pens will be sold in the near future by J.C. members who will be calling from door to door and in places of industry throughout the city of Belleville.

Beginning today, Sergeant Blatchford will be accompanied each day by three J.C.s until the project has been completed.

Sergeant Blatchford said bicycle owners were required to have their bicycles in section of highway traffic act, to equip their bicycles with 10 inches of red reflecting material on the rear fender and five inches of white reflecting material on each of the two front forks.

He said they were also re-

Wall Tablet Unveiled at County Bldg.

The names of county officials and others who took an active part in the planning and construction of the new Hastings county administration building have been commemorated on a wall tablet in the new building.

Unveiling ceremonies for the wall tablet were held this morning following the presentation earlier by ex-county wardens of a memorial plaque to the late county clerk-treasurer Erle S. Denyes.

County Judge, His Honor Judge J. C. Anderson, presided with Mayor A. McLean Haig of Belleville and Mayor James MacDonald of Trenton officiating at the unveiling.

Other speakers heard included county warden Harold Varty and Ex-Warden Jack Brown of Hancock, chairman of the building committee which looked after details of the building construction.

Checks and Balances

President John F. Kennedy, in an address to the United States Chamber of Commerce on Monday, said he wants to see the U.S. economy kept stable, so that the government will not have to intervene in the price-setting process.

If this declaration should appeal to any person as an admirable example of moderation, it is double proof of the distance we have travelled towards accepting the "managed" economy, of our willingness to regard government intervention, if not desirable, as sometimes necessary.

Kennedy, of course, had in mind the recent dispute regarding the price of steel, when he threw the full weight of his administration into the balance against the steel companies and won from them a reversal of their decision to increase prices.

Right after Kennedy's address, the president of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce defended the steel price increase. He asserted that some of the constitutional checks and balances of the power of the U.S. executive have eroded with the years and warned that further erosion could lead to "dictatorship or personal government."

The checks and balances on the power of the U.S. president, however, are not the only ones which have eroded. Despite the development of a whole new system of checks and balances on industrial firms, including not only those exercised by governments but also those imposed by labor unions, some but not all, industries have been released from the checks and balances which formerly faced them when they wanted to increase prices. Whenever the economics of production result in the growth of a few giants which dominate any particular industry, and the relevance of the traditional price-cutting checks in capitalism. The theory is that if prices are raised to a level where profit is high, new investment will flow into the industry and increased competition will soon reverse the price trend. But in industries like the production of steel, investment required is so heavy, and the time to get into production would be so long, that this is no longer an effective check on prices.

While the traditional check on price increases has thus virtually vanished in some industries where alternative materials are not available, labor unions and their demands provide a check on profiteering, but this check tends to result in further price increases, rather than in price reductions, as would increased competition.

As a result, we find President Kennedy and statesmen like him quietly accepting as a responsibility of government a watching brief over the price level of vital commodities. It is difficult to suggest any alternative—but it is also difficult to see how this acceptance of government right to have the final say about prices can be exercised without producing far-reaching changes in our economic system.

Jobs For All?

President Michael Oliver of the New Democratic Party said at Halifax the other day that, if elected to power, the NDP will provide jobs for all who can and want to work.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker never went anywhere near that far, but he has been criticized for a conditional pledge at the time of the last election that nobody would suffer from unemployment while he was prime minister.

Many a Liberal has made a similar pledge. It is also an article of the Socred faith that Social Credit would automatically eliminate all unemployment.

Jobs can be provided for everybody. Sometimes this requires no action whatever by the government. At other times a few simple fiscal, tariff or taxation changes will do the trick. But providing jobs for everybody all the time no matter what world economic conditions are, can only be accomplished if the government controls all—not just some, or a large part but all—of the economy of the country.

No political party in Canada, aside from the communists, has ever proposed such a policy.

Totalitarianism, communist or fascist, is the unavoidable price for the complete elimination of unemployment. And the price of employment is set by the state—and no back-talk, either.

Twenty-nine more communities in Canada started using fluoridated water supplies during the six months ending April 1, 1962, according to the Health League of Canada. Six of these are in Quebec, seven in Ontario, thirteen in Saskatchewan, one in Alberta, and two in the North.

This brings the number of Canadian communities making use of this public health measure to 112, embracing 1,589,590 people.

Strictly Personal
Freedom Is Just a Form Of Slavery

By SYDNEY J. SAKER

In his new book, "A Search for Civilization," Toynbee, I unreservedly recommend to all serious readers, Professor H. J. Muller, chairman of the Committee on Social Thought at the University of Chicago, makes the pungent observation that "Freedom consists in choosing the right slavery."

Like more genuine paradoxes, this remark contains a deep and subtle truth. It reminds us, as we constantly need reminding, that freedom for itself is not attainable, or even desirable.

"The freedom of the individual is restricted in every moment of his life," writes Prof. Muller, "at least by his physical and psychical constitution, by the size of his income, and even by his freedom, if freedom is offered him without his knowing what to do with it.

"As an ultimate aim," he continues, "the complete realization of the individual is not even a happy dream. It can combine with no one of the worst forms of slavery or tyranny to himself."

He explains further: "When a man is left to choose, without any inner impulse that will inspire his choice, all the values and the needs to strengthen himself are likely to be lost in the multiplicity of choices . . . If he has no desire for any values, such a man is incapable of making a choice that will satisfy even him."

ROAD OF LOVE

The only true road to freedom, he emphasizes, is the road of love. "Love is the only means of loving is to forget oneself. 'Love is the highest form of self-realization.'"

All of us are slaves to one's physical appetites, to one's appetites, our ambitions, our prejudices, our fears and follies. The young person who breaks away from the ties of home and family in search of a greater freedom for its own sake soon learns that he has tied himself to other masters. The individual must have a goal, or it ends in anarchy, destructive dissipation and the premature death of the spirit.

The fundamental quest of the human being — which parallels the search for civilization — is to find a set of values large enough and firm enough for him to develop his freedom in. To be emancipated from political and economic bonds is not enough, for freedom is an activity, and not a state. It consists in working for the realization of goals that are beyond ourselves.

In "A Search for Civilization," Prof. Nef suggests what these goals are. He says that a search can we learn what is worth practising to ensure the survival and growth of our civilization.

Prince Philip Makes Point

Ottawa Journal

Prince Philip, who has his own way of making a point, was the guest of honor at British industrialists after he returned from his tour of South America. He asked what would be the best sales approach to South America. He replied:

"It would be much better to go out there in a bowler hat speaking English than in a sombrero speaking English only".

There is an old maximum that the salesman must put himself in the customer's shoes. He must take time and trouble to do this properly. If he fakes it the customer will soon know he is talking through his hat.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

HEADLINES

Some people would rather make the headlines than achieve anything else in life. It is said of some criminals that they are glad to go to the electric chair or the gallows because of they can just see their pictures often enough in the papers and read about their crime in the headlines.

Yet what good do headlines do us? We can be in the headlines three times a week just as much as through achievement. After we have had a headline — if we fancy headlines — we are hungry and thirsty until we have another. And if we happen to be in that station of life whereby headlines are a common — perhaps daily — occurrence for us, we get so sick of them that we wonder how anyone with any sense in his head could desire them.

Almost every one of us thinks he wants more than anything in the world something he does not have. Human experience has proven, however, that when we get those coveted things we are appalled to find them utterly disappointing. We thought they would bring life, they bring astonishment and boredom.

Ask the men who have plenty of headlines whether they like them or not. Most of them that are honest will definitely say No. The world is so full of a number of things that we are all foolish and off the beam entirely if we waste our time hunting for or seeking after headlines.

They don't pay and they don't satisfy.

"And no more of this 'Double Your Money Back' with our next product!"

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

May 2nd, 1942

Ten million tomato plants are now rapidly being transplanted from greenhouse to hotbeds in various parts of the district. Ideal weather conditions are causing the work to be done ahead of normal schedule. The Canadian Canners in Wellington and two private growers in the same village are working at top speed, as is Mr. John Weese who has his own greenhouse on his farm on the Belleville-Picton highway.

What a woman can do when her initiative is challenged has been illustrated by the building which occurred at Shanick on Monday evening. Mrs. Robert Grey heard disturbing noises coming from the sheep pen near her house about midnight. Armed with her husband's shotgun she went to ascertain the cause. She saw a large bear standing on its hind legs and, taking aim, ended bruin's career.

Six hundred fat market hogs valued at $18,000 were lost early today when fire completely destroyed the modern piggery of Charles Farm at Camdiba. Loss of the building was estimated at $7,000. One hundred and forty animals were saved by Farm and helpers before the flames enveloped the entire building, destroying the remaining six hundred which were to have been marketed today.

The stealing of bicycles in Belleville has developed to such proportions that police have almost come to the point where they cannot keep track of the situation although Chief Kidd points out today that in the large majority of cases the stolen bikes are subsequently recovered.

Mr. George F. Stewart, a member of the teaching staff at the O.S.D. gave an interesting address at the meeting of the members of the Y's Men's Club last evening.

The Rev. Gerald Graham of Brockville, who was admitted to the office of a deacon at the ordination service in St. George's Cathedral in Kingston on Sunday, has been appointed by the Bishop to take charge of St. John's Mission, Herchimer Avenue and other rural parishes under the jurisdiction of the Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne, vicar of St. Thomas' Church.

Contractors report that there will be considerable activity in the building trade here this summer which will help to relieve the unemployment of skilled and unskilled workers. Several houses are to be built and additions of verandahs and porches to other houses are planned.

Will 401 Just Feed Toronto?

Sarnia Observer

What effect is Highway 401 going to have on the communities lying close to it?

Will it perpetuate industries now huddled in the giant complex of Metropolitan Toronto by moves to these communities, because of the high construction it provides for goods moving to market?

Or will it cause more communities to grow in the status of dormitory towns, filled with people who make their living in Toronto?

Mr. D. H. Cooper, general manager of Imperial Oil's Marketing Branch, gave his views last week to a meeting of community planners called to consider questions of highways and urban transportation.

Mr. Cooper seemed to think Ontario towns and cities would grow, and that the present use of an oil man interested in increased highway transportation, this no doubt is encouraging. But we don't think the communities themselves may be so happy about it.

He used that ominous phrase "urban transportation" probably this is a town or city whose very life is tied to Metro, to, because the people work there. Metro stores, he points out, can expect their trading area because truck delivery can be made economically over a greater area.

If this is the function of Highway 401 — to let Toronto grow bigger — then the establishments dominate a greater area — then massive fraud has been perpetrated on the part of the Ontario taxpayers.

We have paid about one-third of a billion dollars in 401 a large part of it supplied by the taxpayers of the province of Southern Ontario. Have they paid this money for the privilege of seeing Toronto, locally-based retail merchant is the dominant one in the community, everywhere. If he is driven out of business, the small independent of the city, he starts to wither on the vine.

It may be nice to live in new suburbs getting up, populated by newstyle lodgers who spend their business and a good part of their shopping hours in some other centre. But the tax-payers who have paid to pay the shot for roads and sewers, schools and communuties.

We agree with Mr. Cooper that Highways can be one of the most powerful forces directing the economic and community growth of a province. But we don't think that the force will be for the good, if its function is to encourage growth of Toronto. We don't agree, either, with Mr. Cooper that the pattern will be the "string of beads" growth that came with the transcontinental railroads. The economic factors are far different.

Jail Perfect Hide-Away

Cape Breton Post

From Missouri comes news about two prisoners who made a key to the jail, let themselves out, robbed a bank, then went back to the jail and let themselves up with no one the wiser.

It happened last December but was found out the other day when the key fell from another prisoner. Not only did the culprits make a key, they also stole a transistor radio and a box of cigars. They used their jail key to cut out a piece of scrap iron. It later was found under a metal plate at the threshold of the cell door along with 12 hack saw blades.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

EXCELLENT THINGS

Thoreau once said: "Sometimes, as I drift idly on Walden Pond, I cease to live and begin to be."

This thought played around in my mind for weeks one summer when I found myself far away from the noise, clatter, and the turmoil that so mark the days in a big city.

One evening I walked to the edge of a strip of land tipped with rock formations. Below, a high bluff fell to the water of a great lake below. Dusk was on. It was cool and calm. All of a sudden, from the lower sky across the lake, a band of golden gold began to show. It was the full moon, just peeking its head above the lake.

I sat there and watched for what seemed like hours. Little by little, this golden object seemed to climb steadily into the heavens. And as it climbed it grew in intensity of color and beauty. I was joined by a companion. His first words were, "What a glorious moon!"

Then from the far side of the lake a gentle rippling of reflected light touched the silver surface of the water until it took upon a song of its own and joined in color with that of the celestial body above.

Soon the colored path grew wider and more brilliant until you felt the actual soul of the atmosphere of nature. Words could never adequately describe the beauty of nature. Only in this world can only be breathless and speechlessness, of being able to be mildly intoxicate the mind with a glow of joy or peace.

Like Thoreau, I felt I had ceased to live and began to be. To be something deeper and and fresher, and stronger than anything I had ever been before.

I sat there and watched for what seemed like hours. Little by little, this golden object seemed to climb steadily into the heavens. And as it climbed it grew in intensity of color and beauty. I was joined by a companion. His first words were, "What a glorious moon!"

Hyperthyroidism Can Be a Serious Condition

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Please explain a little about goiter and overactive thyroid gland. — Mrs. A.N.B.

The best explanation of the thyroid is that it is like the damper on a furnace. It controls activity.

Shut off the draft and the fire smolders along.

Open the draft and the fire roars — and so with an overactive thyroid (hyperthyroidism Metabolism and all body processes are keyed up.

There are all degrees of this, of course. Mild cases speed it up a bit. More distinct cases produce the buzzing sort of person who is so constantly "on the go" that other people despair of keeping up.

In severe, uncontrolled cases, this can play havoc.

The nervous system is so stimulated as to make irritability a prevalent symptom. The individual may be so nervous as to have a small tense tremor of tongue and fingers. His skin is warm and moist; he dislikes warm rooms, tolerates cold; prefers winter to summer.

The vascular system is keyed up, too. Pulse is fast, blood pressure elevated. In time this can be extremely hard on the heart, and is known as "thyrotoxic heart disease."

The body's chemistry naturally is affected. Blood sugar tends to rise, and there may be rises in the urine requiring care to distinguish this from diabetes. (If a diabetic develops an overactive thyroid his sugar balance goes awry, and prompt careful adjustment of diet and insulin is necessary.)

The body demands more protein and the patient can lose weight despite good appetite. Calcium and phosphorus required in the body may be depleted.

So much for severe cases. More commonly are the milder cases that may be overlooked. These include tendency to occur at any age, if sometimes not often to be the reason for a certain amount of irritability, some nervousness and cantankerousness and tendency to fits and sobers.

Effective treatment is largely according to the case — medicine often is not needed. Sometimes part of the thyroid gland is removed surgically. The decision rests on such things as the degree of trouble, enlargement of the gland (goitre), or presence of nodules or lumps in the gland.

You can't attempt to second-guess the treatment until the individual case has been examined and sometimes watched for some period of time. Furthermore there are excellent diagnostic tests: The basal metabolic rate or "BMR" based on breathing into a device which measures the amount of oxygen you use, and the chemical test for "protein bound iodine" or "PBI," and the use of radioactive iodine to measure the speed at which it is taken up by the gland, hence gauging the gland's activity.

Dear Dr. Molner: I recently had an attack of diarrhea and thirty-six hours. What would cause this? — G.G.

There are many possibilities, ranging from trivial to extremely serious, and it is impossible to guess at the cause. It could be infectious, ulceration, polyp, cancer, diverticulitis. One thing is sure: any time blood appears in the stool, see your doctor.

Dear Dr. Molner: Please write about "butterfly erythema of the face." — Mrs. J.W.F.

This a rash across the bridge of the nose and cheeks and is suggestive of lupus erythematosus. Such rashes are aggravated by exposure to the sun.

Canada's PMs Long-Lived

Hamilton Spectator

With the exception of Sir John Thompson, who passed away at age 50, all of Canada's former prime ministers managed with great ease to live more than three score years and ten. In fact, the average age of the others when death came was 80.1 years. This does not prove anything, but it may bear any more bleats about how strength-sapping the job of a prime minister is.

Starting with Sir John A. Macdonald who died at the age of 76, here are the ages of the prime ministers at the time of their passing: Alexander Mackenzie (78), Sir John Abbott (72), Sir John Thompson (50), Sir Charles Tupper (94), Sir Wilfred Laurier (77), Sir Robert Borden (83), Arthur Meighen (86), R. B. Bennett (76), and Mackenzie King (79). Not a bad longevity record for a set of men who worked hard long past the generally accepted retirement age.

As for the most recent prime ministers, Louis St. Laurent looked 30 years younger when he celebrated his 80th birthday last year. In 100 years, say, John Diefenbaker will be 67 on Sept. 18. We hope they both live to be 100, and the way they're both going, they should make it.

Vote for Man Idea Assailed

Halifax Chronicle-Herald

Many people have the misfortune to think that they have achieved the heights of political sophistication when they have learned to vote for the man, not the party."

So far from representing what they believe to be a sturdy independence of thought it is a reluctance to descend into the muddy water of party politics that more often only betray a lack of knowledge of our political institutions. And this laudably high-minded attitude absolves them of the responsibility of trying to understand the system under which we are governed.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

"Heart failure," stated a doctor with whom I was doing a little trout fishing, "is, of course, the greatest cause of death."

"Well, how about . . ?" and I named three or four other serious ailments of the human species.

"No," said the doctor. "When the heart fails, you're dead."

You can be hit by a truck, or wasted away with cancer, or shot with buckshot or filled up with poisoned fish, but until the heart stops, you are alive. Any one of the thousand ailments to which mankind is heir can plague us. But so long as that hard bow pound or two of muscle in our midst keeps slugging away, we are still here.

It is a miraculous instrument. Compared to it, moon rockets are primitive. The famed computers and business machines of which we are so proud are elementary. We go bragging around about the marvels of this second half of the twentieth century. But nothing so far conceived, let along realized, can hold a candle to the human person to a device we all possess, from time immemorial, right in the middle of our chests.

'Hasty Pees' Will Feature Regt. Change of Command With Colorful Ceremonies

By GEO. H. CARVER

Pomp and ceremony will mask harsh emotions here on Sunday when a famous Canadian infantry regiment bids farewell to a beloved commanding officer.

The Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment will mount regimental parade will watch the reins of command transferred to another popular officer in special rite and ceremony.

Lieut.-Colonel Angus R. Duffy, CD, formally relinquishes command of the regiment and it will be accepted by Lieut.-Col. Joseph Black his former second-in-command.

The colorful ritual and attendant ceremonies will take place Sunday afternoon at the Belleville Shopping Plaza on Highway No. 2 starting at two p.m.

High-ranking officials from army headquarters in various places, and other regiments will be here to honor Col. Duffy.

Following an all-morning rehearsal drill, the regiment will parade at 2 p.m. for a change-of-command parade.

Adding to the overall color at the function will be the uniforms of the regiment.

Officers will wear "blues" with shoulder cord, swords with silver sashcords, sword knots, white gloves and medals. Senior non-commissioned officers will wear blues, sashes and medals. Other ranks will parade in battle dress, berets, puttees and medals.

Prior to the actual change-of-command Brigadier A. J. R. Bailey, DSO, OBE, ED, CD, Eastern Area commander, Kingston, will pay tribute to the retiring commanding officer.

Then comes Col. Duffy's moment. He will bid farewell to the regiment he loves and which he has served faithfully and efficiently in peace and in war for so many years.

Brigadier Bailey then will introduce Lieut.-Col. Black the new C.O. who in turn will briefly address the regiment.

The final act in Col. Duffy's official military life comes when he takes the salute from his beloved Hasty Pees led by Col. Black in the last march-past.

WILL BE INSPECTED

The annual inspection by the brigadier and regiment demonstrations follow the change-of-command parade.

At four o'clock receptions will be held in the officers' mess and the sergeants' mess in the Bridge street armouries.

Regimental officers issue a cordial invitation to the general public to view the change-of-command and other ceremonies and demonstrations.

Lieut-Colonel Black has ordered a 100 per cent regimental attendance for the parade. Units of the regiment at Millbrook, Port Hope, Norwood, Madoc, Picton and Trenton will be at strength.

Approximately 500 all ranks (of the regiment) including 100 now taking the special national survival course will be on parade. Not the least attractive will be the fine band of the regiment in its colorful uniforms.

Affectionately dubbed "Mr. Hasty Pee" by his friends and the regiment Col. Duffy enlisted in the army as a boy in Trenton. He served his country with distinction and he rapidly rose through the ranks, attaining the rank of regimental sergeant major.

He served brilliantly with the Hasty Pees in World War II helping the plowboy Black Princes win their golden spurs on the bloody fields of Sicily, Italy and other European theatres of war.

Returning to Canada he was commissioned in his regiment and helped mold it into one of Canada's finest militia units on his way to the commanding officer's position.

In December of last year Col. Duffy suffered a heart attack which with pressure of business necessitated his withdrawing from active duty with the regiment. But relinquishment of command does not remove the Hasty Pees from the heart of their former commander. They will be stabilized there forever.

WORTHY SUCCESSOR

Lieut.-Col. Joe Black served with the Royal Canadian Artillery in Belleville and overseas during the war. He also served with the Essex Scottish Regiment with distinction.

Returning to Canada, Col. Black returned to the militia, joining the 8th Anti-Tank Regiment RCA and continuing service with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment following amalgamation of the units in 1953.

Col. Black was appointed second-in-command of the regiment in 1958. He is very popular with both officers and other ranks of his regiment and is a worthy successor to Col. Duffy.

It is expected a large number of former Hasty Pees including veterans of the "line regiment," regimental associations and others, will be here Sunday to watch a famous soldier bid farewell to the life and the unit he loved and still loves so much.

Auditor's Report for County Shows Surplus of $44,632

The county of Hastings had a surplus of $44,632.46 for the year 1961, according to the auditor's yearly report presented to county council at its annual spring session on Tuesday.

Accumulated surplus at the year end, including that for last year, now stands at $34,32, and with a reserve fund of $10,000 brings the total county surplus to $103,304.78.

Total county revenue for last year was $1,304,904.46 against expenditures of $1,-260,272.46.

Taxes receivable from local municipalities as of December 31st totalled $87,793.86. The net debenture debt of the county at the end of the year was $102,497.39.

Council members moved yesterday to reduce the county surplus and recommended to the estimates committee that $50,000 be taken from the surplus to be applied to the new county building. For the past two years the county has made a special levy of three mills to be applied against the county share of this cost.

Madoc township Reeve Earl Sager said he did not see why it was necessary to continue the three mills in view of the county's surplus.

His recommendation to the estimates committee to reduce the surplus by $50,000 was seconded by Reeve Harleigh Hamilton.

While the overall county financial picture showed a surplus the county roads and bridges committee actually went into the red last year.

The county auditor's report showed the roads deficit at $10,-208.42, but it was brought out later that the true deficit was actually $6,643.15.

This was explained by the fact that the road committee's fiscal year did not coincide with the county's calendar year and as result the county audit would show a larger over-expenditure than the actual.

County Home for Aged Full Members of Council Told

With 207 residents registered, there is no more room at the Hastings County Home for the Aged, members of county council were told yesterday.

Home superintendent Kenneth York told councillors the home was filled to capacity and he even had one would-be resident who had been waiting for admission for six months.

The county home report read by committee chairman Deputy Reeve Gerald Irvin of Sidney, showed there were 112 men and 95 women now in the home, of which 55 were from the city of Belleville.

Last year's financial report showed total expenditures at the home were $136,-597, of which $5,692 was for capital expenditure cost.

Receipts for the year totalled $134,880, leaving a net cost of operation of $64,686. This is reduced by Department of Welfare subsidy and capital cost subsidy leaving a net cost of $19,348.

Gross cost per patient day was set at $2.62, which was said to be the lowest in the province.

The county home farm showed a profit of close to $4,000, with revenue of $14,964 and expenses of $11,067.

Mr. York told councillors that the Department more or less frowned on county home farms as such and then showed an operational loss.

He said there would be no objection to the Hastings county home farm as long as it showed a profit.

And the farm has a value far beyond the fact that it shows a profit.

Mr. York said many of the residents enjoy working on the farm. "If we didn't have the farm they wouldn't know what to do. It is good therapy for them," he said.

Castro Only Wanted Power Says Defeated Diplomat

By JOY MILLER

NEW YORK (AP)—It's been a year since the Cuban invasion ended disastrously in the Bay of Pigs, but Teresa Casuso hasn't given up hope.

"If there's another invasion everyone will join," she says emphatically. She's more sure than she was a year ago when she told the press she felt the invasion was under way would succeed.

At that time Miss Casuso was sending off a newsworthy figure herself. Not too long before she had washed her hands of Fidel Castro, resigned as his delegate to the United Nations and sought asylum in the United States.

Since then the small, good-looking brunette has supported herself in exile by lectures to college students and from royalties on a recently published book, Castro and Cuba.

Castro looked like a big noble St. Bernard dog when she first met him in Mexico City and for a year, even in the smallest ways. And they make jokes. But the failure of the invasion didn't kill their sense of humor. "There's always an army of jokes facing a dictator in Cuba."

The other day, back in her New York bachelor apartment between lectures, she somberly discussed the role of what's happening in her tortured homeland and said she keeps in touch with events in Cuba through letters and meetings with refugees.

"There's really starving," she says, "and the black market flourishes.

"Everything must be sold to the government at the official exchange of 1 a newsworthy figure herself. Not too long before she had washed her hands of Fidel Castro, resigned as his delegate to the United Nations and sought asylum in the United States.

St. Paul's G.A. Presents Teen-Age Fashion Show

ROSLIN — On Wednesday evening St. Paul's Church Hall was filled for the fashion show presented by the G.A. of St. Paul's church under the direction of their leader, Mrs. Kerr Gray and assistant leader, Mrs. Don Bates.

The hall was most attractive with potted plants and lilies and the stage, with its white gateway trellis, made a pleasing entrance for the models, all members of the G.A.

Dinner and officers present from Belleville were: the Dean, assistant leader, Mrs. Bates and the G.A. Links secretary, Mrs. Fraser.

Several members of the C.A. of Christ Church were also in attendance.

Other guests present were from Roslin United Church, St. John's Church, Thomasburg and St. Paul's Eighth Line Guild.

Following the "Opening Worship" service conducted by the leader, Mary Gray and devotions led by the girls, the main feature of the evening entitled, "Fashion and Fancy" was presented depicting how a girl can dress in keeping with her best.

The commentator, Mrs. D. Bates, described the costumes as follows: every girl's pride is her sewing and time for contest to take stock of their wardrobe and plan shopping or making over; perhaps some hand-me-downs and some new ones. With the weather still cool one first must check the cost and fit of last year's coat for quality.

Navy blue gals plan coats or delicate shades that live at the cleaners. Choose tailored checks, tweeds, or one of the basic tone, they are always in fashion.

The five girls taking part in the show were: Barbara Johnson, Diane Grant, Anne Hilliard, Barbara Bates and Ethel Silmser, each modelling a coat. They were in black and white check, red wool, bold brown check and camel hair and rain wear of water repellent cotton.

Pert collared blouses accented around the bottom with the same material. This is a holiday charmer. A favorite Mickey Free in drip-dry cotton. Dressed modestly as a country teenager should be, a dainty spice beige dress with scooped neckline. Tiny pockets and pleated skirt, Pearl beads added a feminine touch.

A party time dress was shown in smart navy and white check, offering a jacket with three-quarter sleeves that can be removed for party or dinner date — or worn shopping or to church. Removed, the smart sleeveless dress is accented with a bright red pleated cummerbund and red bows at the shoulder.

3RD SUNDAY SUITS

It's 3rd season and there is a suit for every whim. First shown was a cool, crisp one in blue seersucker featuring all around pleated skirt that always looks fresh since it is cross-cut-pleated. The jacket tops off the skirt with fashion's little three-quarter length sleeves and modern box style collarless jacket with a double breasted front. It could be adorned with chitlin scarf or bright necklace. A grey tweed chic for church or visiting, in sheath style; a plain two-piecer; a sueder pin or flower on the jacket adds a gay note of spring. This frock features long sleeves and gives a pencil slim silhouette.

A suit in heavenly blue wool a spring fashion leader with slim skirt and jacket and three quarter sleeves, flat buttons in blue pearl to add just the right trim, whether you are short, medium, or tall, you can be styled to a suit. Next a suit for summer days sueder cotton weave in beige with a full wide skirt. The many colored jacket adds a smart color coordination. This also had three-quarter length sleeves and wide buttons down the front. This is a holiday treasure.

SCHOOL TIME FAVOURITES

Every girl must be clean and well groomed if she is going to be a Christian witness at school and other places. Shown here were checked gingham skirts and many cotton sporting, pleated skirts topped with printed basket blouse, tennis skirt and colored blouse and sweaters.

Shown here were gims with drip-dry cotton blouse, which needs little or no ironing. For contrast to be in fashion, a green blouse was worn with embroidered aprey tean design.

For Sunday wear a girl's own blue blazer of wool flannel over a white pleated skirt and white blouse is always nice and different with its bib collar. Changing the collar will change the appearance of the blouse. This is a beloved classic for good taste anywhere, anytime.

Rainbow soil cloth slims with drip dry cotton blouse worn shown and lilac shoes; appropriate for camping, hat and glasses are a must. More slims in casual plaid topped with pastel cardigan sweater, coming to points at the waist in front and back, short sleeves and a scooped neckline. Another casual showed a black skirt and white cotton blouse of cotton and dacron lace embroidered and so smart.

SWEATERS

Sweaters so everywhere — bowling, boating, on picnics, and for the active teens playing hockey. Suits were displayed and cool orlon cardigans.

A fit on jewellery for teens, jewellery is pretty, not too much. Better to be well dressed but not overdressed. Keep your sparkle jewellery after five o'clock to be in good taste.

Everyone loves a picnic. Young and old can enjoy the outdoors in nature and the fellowship with family and friends.

Wherever you are toasted this summer, well done, or medium, wear colors that flatter your complexion. Choose cool hues, blue, green or lavender. Of course white outshines all.

A DREAMY HELLO TO SPRING

Plenty of sleep is a gal's best friend and it goes hand-in-hand with exercise and proper food. Shown were smart pyjamas of carefree drip-dry cotton topped with duster coat of blue and cute baby doll pull-out slippers. A nylon quilted blue duster and baby doll pyjamas in pink washable cotton.

Printed cotton pyjamas designed to keep you cool no matter how hot the weather.

CONFIRMATION TOGS

Young girls on their way to a decision to follow Christ will be taking the next step of confirmation wearing white, which suggests purenoss before God.

Dresses shown here were sarnel eyelet dress with slim bodice and swirling full skirt a picture in white. This dress will take on a pastel colour when worn over a colored crinoline for other dress-up occasions.

Another was in crisp, cool white eyelet organdy with a swirling full skirt, short sleeves and a scooped neckline. A special feature was the gathered cummerbund to give a smart appearance.

A white, tailored skirt of sarnel worn with an all around embroidered bodice blouse and trimmed with lace.

Also worn was a white dress with billowy skirt of nylon, fitted bodice, featuring an over-jacket of fine nylon lace, and elbow length sleeves. All these dresses were smart for confirmation — a day to be remembered.

SELF IMPROVEMENT

Not only is it important to be clean and well groomed, but equally important for the teen to be graceful in her movements.

Here are some tricks to practice at home to improve yourself: Those were demonstrated in the right and wrong way and included walking, picking up an object, sitting, carrying a bag and posing on a coat.

PARTY BOUFFANTS

Every girl entering high school dreams of her first school prom, with all the trimmings. Shown for this was a breath-takingly lovely gown of yellow nylon net over nylon taffeta, with pleated bust line in waist-length and held snug to her petite figure with a long zipper. This dress features a floor edged ruffle over the left breast and apron effect ruffles on the skirt. A wispy net shoulder stole and a flower at the wrist adds a feminine and youthful appearance.

Another suitable promenade dress was in delectible candy color of lilac nylon organza over crisp ruffling taffeta, sprinkled with sparkling satin dots, featuring all round pleated cummerbund, square neckline and sleeveless.

Final tips for teenage dainties:

Did you bath today? Use deodorant? Put on clean underclothes?

Are your clothes cleaned and pressed and in good condition and suitable for the occasion? Do accessories compliment your clothes? Is your makeup light and not freakish? If you can say "yes" to all these you can be sure you are well groomed.

Following the showing of the fashions, refreshments were served by the members of the W.A. assisted by the girls.

By EDNA BLAKELY

They are two of three Eskimo girls employed in the welfare division of the northern affairs department.

Both girls are tiny, both like their job and both are extremely shy.

Much of their work it translation of letters.

Leah, 22, learned English at eight classes while working at a rehabilitation centre at Frobisher Bay. For a short time she took a one-room school at Resolute and "apparently did well" says Walter Rudnicki, welfare division chief here.

She grew up with six brothers and three sisters at Pond Inlet on the northeast shore of Baffin Island. As a child she spent months in hospital at Quebec City.

"My father told me it was for heart trouble but other people told me I had tuberculosis," she said. Leah brushed a smattering of English during a short stay in Ottawa while awaiting transportation back north.

The same is Ottawa just July on a contract that expires this June and hasn't decided yet whether she will stay. Recently she moved to a room with cooking facilities.

Sarah, whose home is at Fort George on James Bay, came to Ottawa in September, 1960. A sister who came to Ottawa with her is married to a non-Eskimo and has a daughter, Sarah, 20, boards and rooms in a building for government employees.

She hopes to go home this summer to see her parents and six brothers and sisters. Although she loves the north, doing block prints and giving up the job which she also likes. When asked what she would miss most if she returned north, she replied without hesitation that it would be the food.

The girls' favorite weekend entertainment is shopping and they enjoy prowling through the stores together.

"People often ask us if we're Chinese," Leah said.

They attend movies and go to dances where they waltz, jive and square dance but they haven't learned the twist.

Both would like to learn to swim. Leah went swimming last summer for the first time.

TIPS ON TOURIST HOMES

Everyone can't take a slow boat to China, but nearly half a million Canadians take a slow tour of the countryside at some during the year.

One of the most meandering of the budget-conscious ways to do this is to stay at tourist homes and guest homes recommended by a friend or brother who has enjoyed a pleasant period of staying over. But this arrangement very satisfactory to travellers does not always happen to stumble in advance, and there's no reason why you should ever be one.

Tourist homes are scattered literally along the roads in well-known vacation areas. At the end of a day on the road, it's usually easy to find one with a vacancy. When traveling tourist class, though, visitors should remember that, in effect, they are guests in a "private" home. Behavior, naturally, is a little different than it would be in a hotel or roadside inn.

If you've never stayed in tourist homes before, there are a few tips that might prove helpful on a first-time tour.

When checking into a tourist home, your hostess might ask you to sign her guest book, after which she'll show you to your room. If the home is spacious, you may be asked to set a room with connecting bath. If more than one family is probably have to share a bath with a few other guests.

Make sure, if the latter is your lot, you'll been have to keep your own towels, soap, a tube of paste and toothbrush in your own room. Use of the bathroom is usually a matter of first come, first-served. If you want to bathe or shower, you'll have to wait your turn. As in any private home, it's rude to keep the door at the bathroom for intervals to hurry a slow-poke out. By the same token, you should try to limit your bath to a 20-minute soak so you don't keep others waiting in line in the hall.

If there are any other rules, the hostess will let you know. For instance, some guests can eat in their rooms — note calls and their cost. These will be added to the bill at check-out time.

If you have a travel iron and year is up-to, it's courteous to ask the hostess for permission before you prefer to use your iron in the kitchen. Use of extra electrical appliances in your room might put a strain on the circuit, so it's safer to broach the subject first.

Unlike a hotel where there's always a large amount of noise at night, it's good manners to try to be as quiet as possible when you're late at night. Slamming doors is rude at home. Guests generally are viewing up a good night's sleep before hitting the road early in the morning. Loud talking and laughing is far more penetrating under the circumstances.

BACKACHE? ...or not me!

Dodd's Pills

Before checking out of a guest home, it's not necessary to make up beds. Just as in a hotel, the hostess usually has a few chambermaids to make up rooms and it's courteous of guests to pay over several nights in row. It is expected, though, that guests take care not to spot or stain furniture in any way.

As we want to underscore, tourist homes, although offering lodging to wayfarers, are still essentially private homes, and many revert back to their original purpose as soon as the tourist season is over.

Our picture shows Sausage Rolls in three guises. In all, the sausages are par-boiled before rolling. Sausage Rolls at top are covered with fresh white bread. Those at centre with rich plain pastry and rolls at bottom and those are covered with puff pastry. Mary Moore tells you how to do all today.

Sausage Rolls For Snacks

by Mary Moore

The results of a recent session of role-searching were, surprisingly, sausage rolls.

To explain this low form of pastry talk: In my role of cooking "counsellor" I range over a wide field; but I have neglected to dwell on late snacks.

I am about to correct that fault.

I have made three kinds of sausage rolls from one kind of sausage: 1) sausages rolled in fresh white bread and broiled; 2) sausages rolled in rich plain pastry and baked and 3) sausages rolled in puff paste (see yesterday) and baked.

I had a variety of opinions about these. My friend Garry is here and she said: "I'm not going to eat bread when I can eat Mary's puff paste." Pete said "They are all good — there's something there for every kind of cook — whether she's a novice or an expert". Peachy said "The mustard on the bread sausage rolls was a real discovery".

I would like to add that Sausage Rolls make an excellent accompaniment to a soup supper, indeed they transform a soup course into a main course.

WEDNESDAY
(This could be a guest meal)

Dinner Menu

Stuffed Pork Loin; Spiced Applesauce; Pan Roasted Potatoes; Asparagus with Lemon Butter; Grapefruit and Avocado Salad on Endive with French Dressing; Coffee Almond Butter Tarts (see Tuesday); Coffee.

SAUSAGE ROLLS:

Buy small pork sausages — 30 to a pound if possible. Place in shallow pan, pour 1 cup boiling water over, cover, bring to boil, turn heat low and simmer 10 minutes. Drain. (This cooks the sausage and removes a little of the excess fat.) Cool. Use them in any of the 3 following variations.

1) Simple. Use fresh white bread for these. Cut off all crusts. Squares of bread should be 4" longer than sausages and long enough to give a 1" overlap. Spread some thinly with mustard and some with catsup. Roll cooked sausages up in the slices, winding each with about 4 or 5 loops of string (to hold and to give a spiral marking on the bread when removed after toasting). Place on broiler pan 6" from hot burner to warm the sausages through. Then turn and move closer to burner to brown. Serve at once with coffee or tea for a late snack or with soup for a main course or with first course cocktails.

2) Standard: My sausages measured 3" when cooked so I cut my plain pastry in squares 3 x 3" and placed them, lapped side down, on baking sheet and chilled them. I baked them at 400 deg. F.ahr. about 18 to 20 minutes (see tomorrow for the plain pastry recipe used in prize winning apple pie).

3) Super! Make non-roll Puff Pastry (see yesterday) and roll out to 3-16" thickness and cut out, roll up sausages in it, chill and bake as above for Standard Sausage Rolls. Serve hot. Amateur bakers — watch the baking of these carefully, because the butter oozes out and could drip and burn you when pan is removed from oven. These were a smash hit.

See Non-Roll Puff Pastry yesterday, Thursday, May 3rd.

Ten Children Receive Rite Of Baptism

FRANKFORD — The Sacrament of Infant baptism was celebrated in Frankford United Church, the Sunday after Easter, with a congregation overflowing into the aisles and vestibule, solemnly promised, "to support these children with constant love and wholesome example and faithful prayer, that they may grow up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, to lead Godly and Christian lives".

The minister's message stressed the obligations and responsibilities of parents and godparents and proclaimed the scriptural authority for baptizing little children by sprinkling. "The water is the symbol of purity and innocence," he declared, "the act is not something you do, it is something that is done to you by God by the parents and by the Church". The choir, with Miss Judy Whitmore at the organ, sang William Robertson's

"We bring them, Lord, and with the sign
Of sprinkled water name them mine:
Their souls with saving grace endow;
Baptize them with Thy Spirit now."

The following children were received by baptism, into the fellowship and sacraments of the Christian Church: Stephen Joseph Adams; Robin Lee Morris; Kelle Wynn Bloomfield; Leeann Marie Bloomfield; John Warren Coverdale; Brian Allan Coverdale; David Charles Palmer; Kenneth Ray Stewart; Gail Lynn Stewart, and Vickie Lee MacDonald.

The altar was beautifully decorated with spring flowers for the occasion.

LIVING LONGER

Life expectancy for women in Canada between 1931 and 1961 increased from 62.10 years to 70.81.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Mr. L.F.— Senior clubs aren't enough. I want a job.

Mrs. L.F.— He turned down a job. He's too fussy.

Mr. L.F.— I'm a retired railroad worker, in good health, and I have at least 15 years' worth of good hard work in me yet, even though I'm 65. My father kept going to 97 on his farm and, if I'd been in business for myself I wouldn't have kept track of my birthdays at all. Senior centres bore me to death.

But when I start to look around, answering ads and asking my friends, I'm either offered something ridiculous to do, like walking dogs or picketing a movie house, or I'm told that the unions and the bosses don't want such as me because of their pension plans, their group insurance arrangements and other complex matters.

My wife thinks I should grab any job and shut up. I think I can afford to be choosy. We're not broke yet.

Mrs. L.F.— Len seems to have an idea that a new railroad may turn up offering positions to retired passenger agents like him. He turns down anything else he hears of.

I'm very sympathetic with his need for work. In addition to being restless, he can use some extra money. Our children are married and have blessed us with six grandchildren. It's a great joy to be liberal with gifts and treats for them. And we'd like a few modest luxuries for ourselves that the extra dollars would pay for like a concert subscription or a cabana at the shore.

But the way things are, Len must be more adaptable. I'd like an outside job myself. I'd register at an agency with him if he'll agree to take what's correct. I'll wait days if that's what the call is for.

The Council: Time was when medical journals were filled with esoteric papers on drugs and surgical techniques. But look, Ma! The doctors are now regarding us — the community — as medicine, as a source of treatment and healing. In fact, almost every issue of the major professional weeklies, monthlies and quarterlies describe the fine results fellowmen can make possible for each other. In the American Geriatrics Society reports, for example, we find a possible answer for Mr. F.

Using a pair of spectacles as their trade-mark, a White Plains, N.Y. group of volunteers runs SPEEC, standing for "Senior Personal Employment Service. They match up people like Mr. F. with the odd job, the part-time job, the seasonal job or the after-hours job which is done with the unions, jolly for the boss and gravy to the senior citizen.

Instead of bucking the regular agencies, Mr. and Mrs. F. might write to this one, 50 Quarropas St., White Plains, N.Y., for help in starting a SPEEC in their own community. The main work is usually done by volunteers, retired workers themselves — including housewives — who lend sympathetic ears five mornings a week to over-40's who want positions.

What makes Mr. F.'s quest (and Mrs. F.'s, too) more likely of success is that the majority of retired people are not lonely. Most studies reveal the demand for paid work, not bored careers, is elusive. The average ex-worker is satisfied with senior centres; with continuing spare-time interests started long before, with restful relaxation. Only about one in four is a job hunter most of them for the money, a few for the status and a few more for lack of other satisfactions.

But Mrs. F. points to the essential change at this stage of employment — adaptability. The above-mentioned report tells of openings as companion to a grandpa; alone at home during a family's vacation tour, as desk clerk in a funeral parlor, as an extra hand to an accountant at tax-due times. Let's hope the right agency can show Mr. F. he's right for many jobs that he realizes.

THINGS JAIL IMPROVED

MONTREAL (CP) — Lt.-Col. Leon Lambert, 72-year-old acting governor of Bordeaux Jail, ended his term Monday night "as happy as any inmate just released from here." No successor has been named. Colonel Lambert, appointed by the provincial government to attempt a thorough house-cleaning of the troubled and controversial jail, said he was satisfied that the situation has improved considerably since his term began.

Milk Marketing Views Given At F.U. Meet

ROSEBLAW—The April meeting of Local 171 of the Ontario Farmers' Union was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Spry with the president, Morney Bateman, chairman.

The minutes of last meeting were read and adopted. A letter from head office was read thanking the Union for dues sent in.

Jeanne Williams reported that the Union executive met with the Ontario Farm Products Marketing Board and presented the Union views on Milk Marketing and other marketing problems.

Morney Bateman was a delegate to the Ontario Hog Producers Convention and gave a good report and stated the fee for handling hogs to be raised from 45 to 50 cents.

There was a meeting in Stirling early in the month of Union members from Hastings, Northumberland and Prince Edward, Peterborough, Lennox and Addington and Frontenac Counties.

The Provincial president, Mel Tebbutt and the secretary, Frank Gamble, spoke at the meeting which was most enthusiastic with several members and gave reports of the meeting.

The next meeting is to be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Murney Bateman.

Shirley Reid moved a vote of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Spry for the use of their home.

The ladies served lunch and a social period followed.

Club Activities

Y.P.U.

Frankford United Church Young People met in Rosebery Hall on Sunday evening, with Lyle Williams in charge, as president. Eleanor Beach was attending an out-of-town convention of United Church Young People.

The worship service was from the "Sermon on the Mount", in the 5th chapter of Matthew. Minutes of the previous meeting were read by Judy Whitmore and treasurer Roger Love reported $38 expenses for two delegates to Five Oaks, Paris, and $28 on hand.

Arrangements were made for a congregational get-together on Sunday evening May 6th and a lively program is being arranged for the occasion. A panel discussion, with William Dafoe, Colleen Chase, Marilyn Hall and Dean Kemp as moderators, discussed nuclear war and fall-out shelters in relation to Christianity, with 25 teenagers having 25 different ideas.

Rev. Cranston was formerly introduced and welcomed to the meeting, which was closed with 'taps' at 9.30.

Bemersyde IODE Plans Birthday Tea

CAMPBELLFORD — The April meeting of Bemersyde Chapter, I.O.D.E., was held at the home of Mrs. Robert Anderson with 26 members present and the Regent Mrs. G. Vice in the chair.

Mrs. A. Whitfield, Commonwealth Relations convener, read a paper on the Algerian crisis and the trouble following the cease-fire. She indicated the trouble spots on a large map which made the situation more clear.

Mrs. R. Locke, convener, reported that plans for the "Birthday Tea," to be held this Saturday, were complete and asked the members to assist in their usual manner.

Mrs. J. Connor gave an interesting report on the agenda of the annual I.O.D.E. meeting in Hamilton, which she attended as a delegate. Mrs. Connor also reported that Mrs. Florence Bendt has been re-elected to the Provincial council.

Group II served lunch.

Meat Completely Thawed Should Be Cooked Quickly

By EDNA BEAKLEY

OTTAWA (CP)—Frozen meat thaws more quickly at room temperature if it is placed in front of an electric fan.

This is a general rule, two to three hours per pound thawing time at room temperature should be allowed, says home economists of the consumer section of the federal agriculture department. In the refrigerator, it will take up to 72 hours per pound.

Meat that has been completely thawed should be cooked promptly, not refrozen.

A guide to the maximum storage times is given in the department's booklet, "Meat—How to Buy, How to Cook."

STORAGE LIMITS

For long storage the booklet gives these directions: Beef steaks and roasts, 10 to 12 months; veal roast and chops, four to five months; pork roasts, four to five months; pork chops three to four months; pork cured, smoked, four to five months.

Bacon may be kept frozen three to four months; sausage and wieners, two to three weeks. Lamb roasts will keep six to eight months, lamb chops four to five months; variety meats three to four months; raw minced meat two to three months.

If each package is marked with the date it is frozen—and the name of the cut—it is a handy record.

Large or thicker cuts of meat can be held longer than smaller pieces.

COOKING TIPS

Whether frozen meat is thawed before cooking is up to the housewife, but it does take longer.

A meat thermometer is the best way to determine how well a roast is cooking. For a frozen roast, the oven time generally is increased by half as much more as for fresh meat.

Steaks and chops often are more difficult to brown when frozen. The oven time for beef steaks and lamb chops should be doubled. For pork chops, it should be increased by one-half, and veal chops require an additional five to 10 minutes if cooked while frozen.

Successful Living

(A Canadian Social Worker Helps with Human Problems)

What Is 'Free Love'?

DEAR DORIS:—Referring to your answer recently to Mixed Up. I have been that way for years, culminating my daughter and I leaving our "house." I cannot remember it ever having been a real home.

One of the things I had thrown at me when I remonstrated with my daughter's mother was that I didn't understand "free love," which was what she was indulging in with what I found out to be one of the most notorious women chasers in the city. All this ended in my little girl getting married two or three years before she planned to (just to get out of the home.)

Will you give me your definition of "free love"? If I remember correctly it goes along with the "trial marriage" idea of the hungry thirties. I was away working trying to get enough to get married on in 1935 when my "intended" wrote and told me she was studying "free love" with a college student who was staying at her mother's.

I wrote and told her she could practise it all she liked, but I wouldn't marry her. Later she convinced me everything was all right. Now she begins it again after 24 years of marriage.—L. S.

DEAR L. S.:—"Free love" means love that you get for nothing. That is, without marriage. It generally seems to be very costly. Perhaps your wife is trying to dignify, by ascribing to it some sort of cult, behavior which is beyond the pale in our society.

As for trial marriage and the hungry thirties. I think there was a violent reaction to Victorian puritanism in the twenties and thirties. After the First World War life was unsettled and in many cases people had lost their sense of security. In some people this reaction amounted to saying, "Let's taste everything while we can."

Then perhaps modern psychological findings which pointed up the importance of physical expression had something to do with it.

Doubtless certain physical aggressive individuals could find excuse for their own off-beat behavior. The fact remains that marriage as an institution is just as strong as it ever was. And it's a lucky thing for our children that it is.

DEAR DORIS:—When one does the hair in a French roll and lets it grow long does one have to have a permanent? I don't really care to have a permanent.

I am an older woman and like to look smart in my hair styling.—MRS. A. H., B.C.

DEAR MRS. A. H.:—You don't have to have a permanent if you don't want to. With some types of hair a permanent does help to keep the ends tidy and to hold the French roll in shape, but—to wave or not to wave is your privilege.

Good for you for keeping smart! Older women can be quite distinguished in appearance by giving some dash to that crowning glory—all too often neglected.

DEAR DORIS:—My problem is about a boy who takes me out for a drive about once a month. He claims I don't like him enough but I don't see anything wrong with my going out with other boys if he does not come to see me any more than that.

He does not go out with any other girl and when anybody goes to his place he hardly speaks to them, no matter how well he knows them. He does not want me to go out with anyone else and his parents don't want me to go out with any other boy either. If they see me talking to another boy, they go home and tell him and he is mad about it.

Do you think he really likes me or does he just come to my place to have some place to go?—R. B.

DEAR R. B.:—It sounds as if his parents send him over. Yes, I think he likes you.

What's jealousy of his is it if you want to go out with someone else? Pay no attention to such stupid criticisms and do exactly what you please when it comes to going out with other boys. You don't want to become a hermit too.

Vandervaker sang "The Old Rugged Cross," accompanied by Mrs. Truax. Prayer closed an inspiring worship service.

Mrs. H. East read an article on the "Dead Sea Scrolls," and conducted a Bible quiz on chapters 4-5-6 of the book of Acts. Mrs. East also told the story of Stephen.

The program committee for the month of May will be: Mrs. Barton Crook, Mrs. C. Cleave, Mrs. A. Hudson, and Mrs. G. Dorland. In the business period the reports of the recording secretary and treasurer were received and the calls were reported. Mrs. Norman Allison was appointed corresponding secretary for the Unit.

A contest was conducted by Mrs. East and refreshments served by the committee in charge.

Out of Delivery Room 5 Minutes After Birth

TORONTO (CP) — A teenage mother, five minutes after the birth of her child, walks out of the delivery room carrying her new baby.

Looking up at her husband, she asks: "Well, what else shall we do today, honey?"

This picture of natural childbirth was presented Tuesday by Dr. Robert A. Bradley of Denver, Colo., to a seminar on prenatal education.

The session, sponsored by the Natural Childbirth Association, was attended by physicians, physiotherapists and psychologists from a number of Ontario hospitals.

Dr. Bradley backed up the description of the teen - age mother with a photograph of the couple walking from the delivery room of a Denver hospital.

"Natural childbirth is a noble and dignified method," he said.

"When we train wives to have their babies they are so exuberantly, so spiritually beautiful, that we ask their husbands to bring their cameras."

Effects of Nuclear Fallout On Genes Is Worrisome Question Surrounding Tests

OAK RIDGE, Tenn. (AP)—Much of human destiny is governed by genes, the tiny microscopic agents of heredity.

What effects nuclear fallout has on genes is one of the worrisome questions surrounding atomic tests. Recent scientific findings, including the story gathered from 1,000,000 mice here, are putting the answer in better focus.

It has long been known that genes mutate or change spontaneously. Mishaps occur when new genes are assembled in body cells. Heat and chemicals can cause mutations. So can radiation.

Fallout has added a little bit to natural radiation, so scientists believe fallout may also be contributing to human genetic changes.

EFFECTIVE

Geneticists assume there is no threshold dose with a radiation so low it wouldn't affect some genes, sometime.

Dr. Liane B. Russell, his wife, Dr. Liane B. Russell and their colleagues have expert mousing at the Oak Ridge, national laboratory, operated for the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission by Union Carbide Corporation, to provide with a colony of about 100,000 mice—and 1,000,000 have served in the research studies since 1950.

Dr. Russell exposes some mice to different rates of radiation dosage, Gamma rays, the x-rays but more penetrating. Then she breeds them to see the mice as they live for four or five weeks in a special room.

The irradiated mice then are bred to mice that for years haven't been exposed to radiation. Their offspring are carefully observed. The rate at which radiation is given is found to affect genetic changes.

OBJECT TO CONTROL

Dr. Russell finds even the smallest dosage can produce a few genetic changes out of hundreds of mice.

She and other observations lead most geneticists to believe a small radiation is to have some real effect on human heredity, but a very minor effect—mutations in body cells, other causes of genetic mutations.

A. F. Mercier New President Canadian Press

TORONTO (CP)—A.F. Mercier of Quebec Le Soleil was elected president of The Canadian Press Tuesday.

Mr. Mott was elected honorary president, Stuart Keate of the Victoria Times first vice-president, and St. Clair Balfour of the Winnipeg Tribune second vice-president.

The Canadian Press is the partnership through which Canadian daily newspapers exchange the news of their areas and local items and distribute the news of the world. CP also provides news to most of Canada's radio and television stations.

Mr. Mercier, 51, vice-president and general manager of the company publishing Le Soleil and L'Evenement-Journal, succeeds to the CP presidency after terms as first and second vice-president.

He was educated at College St. Michel and at Laval University, began his career as a teacher, went into business, and became general manager of Le Soleil in 1937 after periods as president of Chicoutimi Le Progres and Sagueney and general manager of L'Action Catholique. He has been vice-president of Le Soleil Limitee since 1954.

VICE-PRESIDENT

Mr. Mercier is a vice-chairman of the International Press Institute, a former president of the Canadian Daily Newspaper Publishers Association, and was for four years a director of Canadian Overseas Telecommunication Corporation. He has been a CP director since 1946. Active in civic affairs, he was the first president of Quebec City's Order of Municipal Merit established in 1955.

Officers were chosen by the board of directors after the annual general meeting of members at which Mr. Mott reported on the co-operative operating position and prospects, and Gillis Purcell, general manager, on details of the year.

The annual meeting elected 10 directors for two-year terms. Nine elected last year continue in office.

Saskatchewan Premier to Talk To Physicians

REGINA (CP) — Premier Woodrow Lloyd Thursday will outline to more than half the doctors in Saskatchewan his CCF government's plans for instituting a compulsory prepaid medical care plan.

The premier will address 350 of the province's 806 doctors at the opening session of a two-day meeting called by the Saskatchewan College of Physicians and Surgeons to discuss the plan, opposed by the doctors.

The meeting, attended almost all doctor's offices in the province will be closed. Enough doctors to provide emergency treatment in hospital will remain on duty.

College President Dr. H. D. Dudgeon of Saskatoon said in an afternoon information will be given doctors at the meeting. A report by a committee on the Medical Care Act, including a list of controversial amendments to it, adopted by the Saskatchewan legislature last year.

OBJECT TO CONTROL

The doctors' main objection to the plan is government control. They maintain the seven-man medical care administrative commission can dictate to them. Premier Lloyd and Health Minister J. Deroy say the act and amendments to it do not "interfere with the way the physician diagnoses and treats his patient."

The government says the plan provides guaranteed payment of fixed income to physicians.

In initial objections to the plan, the doctors said they opposed state medicine and that it would destroy private health needs in the province—care of the aged, the mentally and physically ill and the indigent.

However, the doctors later said they would co-operate in government control.

The government, stating if doctors boycott the college will stop individual members of the profession from accepting payment for services through the medical care commission, says it will introduce the compulsory scheme July 1.

The Blend Benders Quartet will appear in The Harmony Night Show at the Belleville Collegiate this Saturday evening. Eight presentation of Barbershop harmony will also include four additional quartets; two of which, the Keynotes and Bell-Villains, are from the Belleville Chapter. The Ontario Championship fifty voice Scarboro chorus will be featured on this Harmony Night program.

Britain, U.S. Reluctant To Play Prominent Role

By DAVID OANCIA
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The two-day meeting of the Central Treaty Organization in London this week promises a clear indication of British and American reluctance to play a more prominent role in Middle Eastern affairs.

This was the conclusion drawn from the decision by the ministers from the five nations attending the conference not to unify military operations by appointing a single commander.

Pakistan, backed by Turkey and Iran, battled for the appointment of an American to the top military post.

The British delegation, supported, by the Americans who are not full members, proposed the appointment of Britain's Gen. Sir Charles Jones for the job.

The upshot of the matter as explained to the British Foreign Secretary Home was that ministers present decided "further inter - governmental consultations" were needed before a final decision could be taken.

Home, who is Cento's chairman, stressed at the conference's wind-up press conference Tuesday that Jones still is available for the job.

But he added that Jones was a man of great stature who could not afford to wait around indefinitely for the job.

By striking to get an American appointed to the top post, Pakistan aimed to tie the Baghdad Pact more closely to Cento. The U.S. flow is an essential member but participates fully in the organization's military committee.

The Pakistanis also wanted the development of a more complex defumand system in western Asia to permit the more effective use of national forces.

Their feeling was that the advantages of such a move would be far outweighed by the public outcry in neighboring neutral nations.

Such a move would also provide much grist for the Communist propaganda mills, which are always on the lookout for what they view as evidence of American or British imperialism.

The result of the London meeting is that the Cento powers will have to give more thought to how they can use the existing military machinery to the fullest extent.

Union Completes Evidence to Save Local

TORONTO (CP)—The International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers has completed evidence Tuesday in the latest phase of its fight to keep its 17,000-member Sudbury local from absorption by the United Steelworkers of America (CLC).

The Ontario Labor Relations Board was to hear argument today from lawyers for the two big unions and the executive of Local 598, which is at odds with the latter office.

The national Mine-Mill body alleges that a conspiracy to destroy the local's membership has existed between the local executive and the Steel union. Counting of a membership vote to choose between the parent unions has been held up by the board pending inquiry into this charge and Mine-Mill allegations of fraud on Steel's part in signing members.

The fraud charges are to be aired before the board later this month.

DFPO WITHHELD

Tuesday the board heard, William P. Sieniuk, a former member of the Sudbury executive, testify that the executive withheld from the membership information that the local could get into the Canadian Labor Congress without its members joining the steel union.

He said Cento president Claude Jodoin told the board this in 1950 but the executive decided to give the local membership the impression 598 could divorce itself from the national parent and enter the congress as an independent affiliate.

Mine-Mill itself has been denied affiliation with the congress. It was evicted from the old Canadian Congress of Labor a dozen years ago.

NEW YORK (AP)—A type of measles vaccine has been tested here for two years with almost 100 per cent effectiveness, it was reported Tuesday. The single-inoculation test involved 4,000 infants and youngsters in the metropolitan area.

Urges Govts. To Call Halt On Expenditures

TORONTO (CP) — Government at all levels should seriously consider calling a halt to increased expenditures, J. K. Macdonald, president of the Dominion Mortgage and Investments Association, said today at the association's annual meeting.

Increased taxation at all levels now amounts to close to 30 per cent of gross national product, Mr. Macdonald stated.

"It is difficult, if not impossible, for any government to drastically reduce its expenditures, particularly in the welfare field, but surely we can call a halt to further increases until we can stimulate an increase in the rate of economic growth."

Mr. Macdonald, who is president of Confederation Life Association, said the present system of taxation is one of the factors in Canadians' failure to provide more capital.

"In Canada," he added, "45 per cent of federal revenue is derived from taxes on income and wealth. Practically all European countries raise a smaller proportion of their revenue from these sources and they have shown larger per capita gains in output in a few years."

Mr. Macdonald's comments were contained in a text made available to the press in advance of delivery.

Booby-Trapped Car Blast Kills 8 Algiers Moslems; Angry Mob Slays European

CP from AP-Reuters

ALGIERS—A savage wave of Secret Army terrorism including the explosion of a booby-trapped car left at least 16 Moslems dead and upwards of 100 wounded today.

It was the bloodiest day in recent weeks in Algiers, and for a time it appeared that Moslem patience was about to break into bitter widespread vengeance against the European.

One European man caught up in a Moslem crowd after the booby-trapped car exploded had his throat cut. But otherwise the United Nations observers taken in hand by nationalist agents, kept calm.

At least eight Moslems were killed when the booby-trapped car exploded like a bomb beside a bus stop in the Moslem quarter of Algiers. About 100 were injured in the withering hail of metal.

Another eight Moslems were slain and 10 wounded when a Secret Army terrorist machine-gun attacked.

Tension mounted in the Casbah and other Moslem quarters as rumors of the car explosion arrived from the blast scene in front of an employment centre where dockers were.

European workers in nearby docks and industrial firms were hurriedly sent home as French security forces and Moslem police cordoned off areas to head off a murder rampage by Moslem crowds.

SEEKS REL. IN U.S.

The European was seized and killed by a band of Moslems when he was recognized in area shortly after the blast. It was the first Moslem reprisal against a Moslem labor centre in two days.

Thousands of ragged Moslems were pressing around the bloody office where Europeans were out warning the car exploded. Panic sent scores of Moslems fleeing in all directions as they began returning to carry off their wounded.

The car was ripped apart and pieces were hurled for several hundred yards.

When the explosive charge—fixed with a time fuse—went off, it opened up a crater about eight or 10 feet in diameter in the paving and blew along the Mediterranean sea front. Flames shot up from a geyser of water shot up from the stone.

The explosion lifted a car parked nearby and hurled it several yards, where it struck another car. Both vehicles caught fire.

The debris was littered with chunks of smouldering metal and pieces of concrete paving. Huge splotches of blood splattered the pavement.

INCLUDED WOMEN

The injured included several white-robed, veiled women who had apparently been packed into the car by the terrorists, who then parked it near the employment office where Moslems would regularly show up at set times for work.

It was the second time in about two weeks that a booby trapped car had exploded in a Moslem crowd in Algiers.

The Secret Army, which opposes Moslem rule in an independent Algeria has been decisively attempting to provoke the Moslems into attacks on the Europeans, in the hope that the French Army would "fraternize" with the Europeans. That, the cease - fire agreements signed in March would be compromised or broken and Algeria's evolution toward inde-

Stern Decorum Seen in Room Of Court Martial

OTTAWA (CP)—With the table of medals and a knocking of sabhards against table legs, the court martial was in place.

The officers were ready to hear evidence in military trials of soldiers involved in alleged smuggling of gold and opium in Indochina.

The silk in the assembly hall of a personnel depot—a large bare room, brightly lit by six tall windows on each of two sides. It measures about 25 feet by 50.

Half the room is given over to two clusters of chairs—for about 40 spectators, whose seats is to the entrance. About 30 of the seats were filled Tuesday as the trials began.

The other half serves as the court proper.

It is occupied by a U-shaped formation of portable wooden tables, some of them pushed into an upright position by twine backs of the chairs. The table is draped with an ordinary red cloth—the old army issue.

SET AT BASE

At the base of the U sit the black-robed judge advocate and the five members of the court in dress uniform—a brigadier, three lieutenant-colonels and two majors.

The accused and his defending officer sit on one arm of the U along with an army public relations officer, and the reporters facing the army prosecutor and the court reporters on the other side.

At the mouth of the U is a plain army issue wooden chair. There sit the witnesses. Rules of evidence are essentially the same as in any criminal court.

The court members, with the judge advocate presiding, differ from a criminal court jury in one aspect — their verdict is based on a majority vote, and need not be unanimous.

pendence would be slowed or halted.

HALT MARCHERS

But in the eastern port of Bone, riot police flopped hundreds of Moslems—armed with hatchets, iron bars and pieces of wood—from marching on a European district Tuesday.

Police said the march began when the Moslems heard rumors that the Europeans had made planning to kidnap Moslem children.

Bone was the scene of a grenade attack against a Moslem labor centre that injured more than 20 Moslems.

Violence throughout Algeria Tuesday was 19 persons killed and 48 wounded in acts of violence. Seven of the dead and 17 of the wounded were Moslems.

Stock Market Skidding In Face of Good Business

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market has been skidding in the face of good business.

Why?

Although there are many opinions, sometimes contradictory, the most common feeling among Wall Streeters is that the investor fears:

1. The Kennedy administration is anti-business and that the assault on the American steel-price increase may be only the beginning.

2. Business, good as it is now, won't be so fast later in the year.

3. The cost-price squeeze on industry may damage profits in subsequent quarters.

4. There will be a substantial deficit in the federal budget.

5. Stock prices are too high.

BEGAN WITH STEEL

The market has been reeling since the steel - price rollback April 12. With unloading of stocks increasing, the market, as measured by the popular averages, has sunk to successive lows in the last week.

Despite reports of record spending in plant improvement and equipment, many analysts feel that business, in its pronement over just what the government will do in any set of circumstances, may cut back on this type of outlay. That would mean fewer jobs and less consumer spending.

With stock yields relatively low, there is increasing competition for the investor's dollar. A tremendous amount of new money has gone into savings banks, which are offering up to 4½ - per - cent interest. Bonds, particularly the tax-free variety, are attracting m o n e y from stocks.

The big institutions—mutual funds, pension funds and the like—are sitting on the sidelines and their absence from the buying market is being felt sharply. They sold substantial blocks of their holdings, particularly the steels, earlier.

Investors' confidence m a y have been shaken, too, by the United States Securities and Exchange Commission's investigation of the entire securities business, Wall Streeters feel.

Prices recovered late Tuesday amid heavy trading which some observers described as a selling climax to the long declining trend. Whether the late recovery will mean a reversal of the recent down-trend remains to be seen.

CPR President Says Labor Hurting Its Own Chances

MONTREAL (CP)—The president of the CPR said today that labor is hurting its own chances for employment by claiming double share of earnings.

Speaking to the annual meeting, N. R. Crump, president and chairman of the world-wide organization, said the use of capital must be paid for in the same way as the use of labor.

"The real opportunity for jobs in the amount of reward necessary to attract the investment. The return on investment in any company or industry is inadequate to attract investment and employment opportunities must diminish."

He added: "If labor attempts to appropriate an undue proportion of the earnings of any industry, opportunities for it must be impaired."

After referring to the company's major labor dispute at the CPR with the non-operating railway unions, who are demanding a rigid job freeze, he said the basic employment is in country or occupation "commodity industries dependent on world markets."

He said a new formula should be developed to resolve labor disputes in the transportation industry, as interruption of operations, even the least of it," has an immediate adverse effect on customers and the country as a whole.

The company anticipates the total volume of business to be handled by passenger services in 1956 will increase over 1941 revenues, he said.

Greater tonnage is predicted for the CPR ships across Seaway this year, and the company would benefit from the in-

London Has Now Between 30 to 50 Legal Gambling Clubs All Making Money

By DOU GRANSHALL

LONDON (CP) — When the new Betting and Gaming Act opened a legal right of way for the casino card game, club managers and entrepreneurs were slow to clinch aboard the gambling gravy train. Now the compliments have evolved.

London already has between 30 and 50 legal gambling clubs — nobody is certain of the number — and casinos are being constructed around the least from Brighton to the Isle of Man.

The new act allows any club to run a gaming table provided play is restricted to members and their guests, that every player has an equal chance and that the club does not take a cut of the winnings.

This last stipulation stymied the gambling operators at first. Then somebody hit on the idea of charging players anything from £1 to £20 for the right to sit down and play for a single session.

A session of chemmy usually lasts 36 minutes and involves nine players. With two tables going for six hours a night at an average charge of £3 a head, a well-run club can clear more than £7,000 a week over and above initial subscription fees.

INVENT ROULETTE

The operators then invented a new form of roulette—called broulette—which works on the same principle and eliminates the house's zero slot. Most clubs also cater for high-stake bridge and poker sessions on the side.

Before the gambling clubs became legal, private gaming parties with astronomical stakes were the talk of the limousine set in London's Mayfair district. One peer is reported to have lost £41,000 on a single draw of the cards and £130,000 in a week.

The first legal club opened in Berkeley Square but went bankrupt because the managers were too generous with their credit. Some of the pillars of Britain's establishment did-played an alarming and unsuccessful resistance to home rule.

The new clubs keep the stakes comparatively low and the credit limited to what they know they and their members can afford to lose. The gambling is protected from losing his shirt and this means more players and a bigger profit for the operators.

BIG LOSERS

But there still are a surprising number of people who can cheerfully lose £300 or £1,000 in one night. Most of these, reports say, are foreigners. Only about 30 per cent are English-born and include anything from actor-managers and surgeons to car salesmen and saplings of the nobility who control their parents' fortunes to avoid death duties.

The best clubs use continental staff. A Belgian employs French croupiers, lured from Deauville, Cannes and Monte Carlo with salary offers of more than £4,000 a year.

Britain's sudden gambling fever has imposed severe strains on the resources of French croupiers manufacturing equipment. Until a British plastics firm entered the business this spring, there was a delay of three months in delivery of casino and club chips.

TRAIN CROUPIERS

The supply of trained croupiers is also running short but millionaire industrialist Jack Foster found the answer to this.

He advertised casually for men between 25 and 33 to train as croupiers for his £100,000 casino opening soon in Brighton and had 600 applicants on his hands before he could spin a fortune wheel.

He says many of them are teachers, bank clerks and insurance salesmen. "I never thought Berkeley Square but went glamor and adventure. Englishmen, he believes, have gambling blood in their veins and are in their element when the chips are down.

17-Year-Old B.C. Girl Wins First Prize at Science Fair

VANCOUVER (CP) — John Fisher's "parabolic steam superheater" hasn't been too successful in Victoria because it needs plenty of sunlight to make it work.

The supervisor, which looks like a child's backyard slide, picks up sunlight that is forwarded to the steam of which drives a small engine.

The apparatus was presented as part of a collection at the province's B.C. Youth Science Fair, sponsored by a Vancouver department store and The Province.

There were 36 entries from the B. C. Lower Mainland and Vancouver Island. The teenagers concentrated their efforts on technical design instead of the "usual hobby stuff."

MAKES ELECTRICITY

In front of a collection of beakers and bulgy lacrosse balls, Sid Pertzis, 14, a ninth grader from Vancouver, explained how he was making electricity out of chemicals.

"We could power cars this way some day," he said. "Of course my own development doesn't quite work yet, but by passing air from these bags through the chemicals we could power an engine."

Other entries showed the effects of hormones on guppies, the pre-natal history of a chicken, how to make crystals from old rose food, and how to heat metals in an arc furnace.

Woollen socks help protect a 50-power telescope. Old car batteries power a metal furnace that melts aluminum, building up 3,000 degrees.

The entries were judged at the conclusion of the exhibit and the winner—Wendy Gibbs, 17, of Vancouver, for her series of slides showing a biological study made with micro-photography — had an expense-paid chance to compete in the science exhibition at the Seattle World's Fair.

Derek Stuart, 18, of Burnaby Central High School, got a special prize of a week aboard a U.S. Navy cruiser for experiments showing the application of spark discharge in industry.

Other lesser winners received equipment they needed to continue their enterprise.

JAILED FOR FIRE

WARSAW (AP) — Shipyard foreman Marian Kaminski was given a three-year prison sentence, and two workmen, each got a year in jail, for negligence in a fire aboard the freighter Maria Konopnika that killed 22 persons at Gdansk last December.

Snow Geese Gather Near Quebec Bridge on First Leg To North Nesting Grounds

QUEBEC (CP) — Signs of spring in this region include geese, marbles, and the funny nets and grassier snow cones.

Dr. Lemieux has found that winter soon scrapes the cover from roots along the shores, providing plenty of food.

The geese, which average about eight pounds, return to these shores in September and stay until the cold weather sets in.

A hunting season is set by federal - provincial agreement each year for about two months, beginning before mid - September. By mid - April, an estimated 40,000 were marshalled on the St. Lawrence River banks north, east of here for the 1,000-mile flight to their summer nesting grounds on Bylot Island.

Studies by Dr. Louis Lemieux, director of the fish and wildlife management service in Quebec, have provided much to-date info the biology of the big, majestic white geese.

The part which the Chaudiere River flows into the St. Lawrence—also marked by the massive steel of the Quebec Bridge — apparently is one of their gala points.

PLENTY OF FOOD

At this point, they wheel and circle for days. The immediate reason is the shores opposite Orleans Island and Ile-aux-Grues (Goose Island) to settle and feed on grass, mud flats along the shores.

Key to Reading Weather, Ice Pictures Taken by U.S. Satellite Being Studied

By ED WALTERS

HALIFAX (CP)—The key to reading weather and ice pictures taken by an orbiting U.S. satellite is being sought here by a joint Canadian-American operation with the code name Tiros.

Pictures of the Gulf of St. Lawrence and the northwest Atlantic off Newfoundland taken by the satellite Tiros IV are being checked against photographs and visual reports from the Canadian and U.S. aircraft.

From comparisons of the space photos and conventional pictures, weather officials hope to evolve a system to identify drifting ice and cloud photographs transmitted to earth by the space vehicle.

Flt. Lt. M. J. Meek of the RCAF's Maritime Air Command said he feels it is "extremely difficult and sometimes impossible to differentiate between cloud and ice in photos taken by Tiros IV. In pictures taken from aircraft the differences are easily recognized.

CONTROLLED BY GROUND

Tiros IV can take wide-angle photographs of the northwest Atlantic only when it passes over it daylight, as in phase one of Operation Tiros Feb. 8-12 and in phase two April 2-23.

The satellite must also be pointed at the right angle. The Tiros cameras are activated from two ground stations, one at Wallops Island, Va., and the other at Point Mugu, Calif.

Miss I. M. Dunbar, who represents Canada's Defence Research Board, says that if the cameras are, triggered one second late, the satellite travelling at nearly 17,000 mph will be far past the point where the photos should have been taken.

Tiros IV, measuring 19 inches by 42 inches, travels in an almost circular orbit, roughly between 400 and 500 miles above the earth. It completes its earth-to-sat circuit every 100 minutes.

The pictures for the operational command post at Maritime Air Command are transmitted from Tiros to Wallops Island and then flown to Halifax.

PLAN NEW SHOT

When the key to interpreting the Tiros IV photographs is found the satellite will provide long-range weather and ice forecasting for advance of present methods.

An even more complete ice prediction and weather forecasting service is expected when another satellite, Nimbus, is rocketed into orbit next winter.

The Canadian personnel of Operation Tiros, composed of the RCAF, Defence Research Board and transport department representatives, are commanded by Air Commodore W. J. Clements. Flt. Lt. Meek coordinates flights of Canadian aircraft engaged in the operation.

American agencies involved include the navy, weather office and auxiliary services.

WHEN YOU DRIVE A VOLKSWAGEN
ALL YOU STRETCH ARE YOUR LEGS

LOW PURCHASE PRICE
There's no need to stretch your budget when you buy a Volkswagen. Although its initial cost is within the reach of everyone, the Volkswagen is one of the most gratifying cars you can own.

ECONOMICAL DRIVING
No budget-stretching here, either. In regular driving you will get 32 miles per gallon, on the average. Because the engine is air-cooled, and because the engine and transmission lubricants are no radiator, water pump or anti-freeze problems.

PRECISION BUILT
The smoothness of every Volkswagen can be seen in the way a Volkswagen is put together — tight-fit, sound. The engine is so well machined for minimum friction that you can run your new VW at top speed the first time you drive it. You can drive all day long at 70 MPH without strain.

LOW DEPRECIATION
. . . is no stretch of the imagination! The VW is designed to last, not to become obsolete. VW changes its car only to make it better; its heart and face remain the same. For this reason a used VW has remarkable resale value.

AROUND TOWN OR AROUND THE WORLD,
VOLKSWAGEN TAKES YOU THERE IN TIMELESS STYLE.

You enjoy the fun of driving one of the most responsive, manoeuvrable cars on the road. Volkswagen's roominess comes as a surprise to most people and there is also space for a good deal of luggage. You don't compromise when you drive a Volkswagen . . . . . .

Stirring Sagas of Intrepid Reporter Back in Television

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—The Orik Powell Show on NBC-Tuesday night—a hunt-and-chase story called Savage Sunday—was of special interest on two counts:

It was a pilot film, on the strength of which a network series for next season was sold, to be called Saints and Sinners. It also was the first television return to the newspaper drama since The Big Story and those stirring sagas about Steve Wilson, intrepid editor.

Judging from the preview, Saints and Sinners will occasionally show reporters reporting, and writing.

In the other half-hour shows there just wasn't time for this realistic touch. The heroes were too busy rescuing fair maidens and trapping vicious murderers to bother with typewriters, deadlines or even telephones.

The characters haven't changed much during the 3,250 years. Nick Adams plays the usual brash young reporter, complete with a belted trenchcoat. There's the tough city editor with the heart of gold and, of course, the aging, ailing drunken man. On top of all this, there was a rather familiar story about a naive girl reporter, terrified by a pair of drunken ruffians.

Burt Lancaster isn't the only one walking out of PM, a late evening syndicated show. Mike Wallace, the host, is pulling out June 22 and the show is folding.

Anne Bancroft, a performer who can do anything from serious dramatic acting to singing and dancing, will be back on still another Perry Como Show—May 23. Her guest appearances have been so frequent she's almost a program "regular" now.

Recommended tonight:

Joey Bishop Show, NBC, 8.30-9 EDT.—Milton Berle is guest star.

A Man for Oona, CBS, 10-11 —Hannah Bankhead is a comedy.

May Not Race Again

Moss Starts Recovery

LONDON (CP) — Now that Britain's ace racing car driver, Stirling Moss, has made a start toward recovery from his latest batch of injuries, the question arises whether he will ever again compete professionally.

Both his parents say they want him to quit the tracks, but have not discussed the matter with their son, still in serious condition in hospital after a crash Easter Monday at Goodwood track in Sussex.

Moss, 22-year-old millionaire owner of a car-racing stable and Moss' sponsor in grand prix racing, recently was told on his voice to the parents' plea. Moss was the only most consistently successful drivers not never winner at the top prize in the world driver's championship, resisted all earlier attempts to persuade him to stop racing. But his return this time may depend on how completely he recovers.

He still has periods of unconsciousness. Even more worrying is the presence of some particles of splints in his left side and difficulty with his speech.

Young Actor Admits School Career Less Than Success

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The luncheon crowd in the MGM commissary stared unbelievingly at the tall, slender figure strode into the room.

None had to ask his name. It was Robert Walker.

The young man is 22, just about the same age his father was at the start of his Hollywood career.

The first time Robert Walker was shy, bespectacled boy from Salt Lake City who found fame in a small, important role as a soldier in the wartime film Bataan. He followed with See Here, Private Hargrove, Till the Goods Roll By, The Clock, Song of Love, Strangers on a Train and My Son John.

Walker died in 1951 at 32. His son Bob was then nine and living with his mother, Jennifer Jones, who became the wife of David O. Selznick.

Now William Perlberg and George Seaton, who starred Miss Jones in her academy-winning role of Bernadette, have given young Walker his first screen role — as a soldier in The Hook.

WON'T DISCUSS DAD

Talking with Bob, I told him I had known and admired his father, and he seemed appreciative. But when I asked him what he remembered of his father, he said: "I'd rather not talk about that."

Otherwise he proved to be frank and open. He admitted that his school career was less than a success.

"I got up to high school," he said, "I went to 14 or 15 different schools and didn't like any of them, I just didn't care much about the subjects."

"I didn't do any acting in school, I wasn't the least bit interested in it. If I did think about it, I did so subconsciously, because I was never aware of any yen to be an actor."

That came only in the last year or two, he said.

"I was taking a course in playwriting in New York and I decided I should know something about the problems of actors," Walker said.

He appreciated in summer stock, played Twelfth Night in New York, Bells Are Ringing in Florida and a children's show on Broadway.

His agent took him to Perlberg and Seaton, who tested him for The Story. The story takes place in the last three days of the Korean War and Walker won the role of a young soldier who defies Kirk Douglas' order to kill a prisoner.

At the Park
OPENS THURSDAY

"Whistle Down The Wind" tells the story of three young impressionable children who, when playing on their farm, discover a wounded murderer on the run, taking refuge in a disused barn. In their simple manner they become convinced that he is Christ returned. Not realizing the danger that they are in and unknown to their parents, they shelter and nurse him back to health — until their secret is betrayed.

Richard Attenborough and Bryan Forbes in their first film as a producer/director team have produced a classic. It is an exciting story, beautifully and simply told, and a first musical score and expert direction with delightful touches contribute to the good taste of the whole production.

For the children, it's enthralling and for adults this heart-warming film has excitement, humor and understanding.

On the same program the riotous comedy "Carry on Teacher" starring Kenneth Conor, Charles Hawtrey, Leslie Phillips and Ted Ray.

Maple Leafs Topple Suns 5-1

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Maple Leafs scored five unanswered runs after two were out in the eighth inning Tuesday night to topple Jacksonville Suns 5-1 and knock manager Bo Bergagio's club out of a tie for first place in the International League. Buffalo, who had been tied with the Suns in the lonley with a 4-1-0 lead.

Jacksonville left-hander Dan Morrison dropped Ellis Burton's offerings to left, opening the game. Before reliever Don Bessent could get them closed again, Maple Leafs scored five times on four walks and a two-base hit by Jim Pendleton after Jim Suns' Steve Hamilton, who had gone into the lonley with a 4-1-0 lead.

Atlanta Crackers, who in their first year in the league can look down on the other clubs from their perch at the top, beat Buffalo Bisons 5-4.

The Buffalo and Jacksonville defeats dropped them into a tie for second place behind the Crackers.

OVERCOME LEAD

The Crackers had to overcome an early Buffalo lead. The Bisons were leading 3-0 in the fourth inning when Earl Wilkeld got the Crackers back in the game by doubling home two runs.

Then, after Tom McCarver singled in the fifth, Jim Beauchamp hit his first homer of the year to send the Crackers ahead 4-3. McCarver added a homer in the seventh and Beauchamp hit his second a few minutes later after winning pitcher Bob Sadowski had walked. Lee Elia hit a homer for the Bisons in the first inning.

Seth Morehead of the Lea's gave up only three hits to the Suns in the first seven innings before being lifted for a pinch hitter in the eighth.

GET EHL FRANCHISES

NEW YORK (AP)—Jacksonville, Fla., and Nashville, Tenn., were granted franchises Tuesday in the Eastern Hockey League. The move increased to 10 the number of teams in the circuit. "Representatives of both cities will have to comply with certain conditions by June 1," said Tom Lockhart, EHL president.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

There was a time when the masterful males of the species were kings of their nautical castles when afloat in yacht or power-driven craft. They sported jaunty yachting caps, handled the steering and mechanical tasks aboard and generally speaking were seamens of all they "see-vayed."

Oh, they took the girls along with them—for decorative purposes and for the distaff side of the daily chores. These "galley-slaves" did not pull an oar like the shackled serfs of the Roman era—and they spoke a different language to their port-and-starboard masters.

But it couldn't and didn't last. Yachting and power-boating proved just as vulnerable to feminine invasion as other sports. They haven't taken over, so to speak, but they've marked their presence felt.

Women's place is no longer in the galley. She is now capable of taking over the bridge, navigation, etc., with as much ability perhaps as the "skipper."

The "Squadronettes" divisions of powers boat squadrons are ample evidence of the ability of women to learn to operate, navigate and maintain power craft. In one week-end cruise I was amazed at how few men are allowed to do, but they are relatively few.

As Quinte Squadronette Past Commander Mrs. Dorothy McCulloch told a class of feminine graduating junior pilots the other night, "Boating is an excellent mental exercise to boost your own feeling of individual accomplishment."

"It makes you a first mate of distinction with more ability than just to scream in an emergency. You may not be a power hitter in golf, tennis or husband roars, 'Take the stern line.' You know where to look for it at the bunny end of the boat."

Power-boating may be one of the latest sports to welcome the gals—but it won't be the last. Don't be surprised one of these days to hear of a woman astronaut. It is bad enough for the fair sex to let the sit man get out of sight occasionally but when he starts going out of this world, you can bet your boy-line some feminine will want to know what is going on, as the dark side of the moon—and sooner or later she will find out."

Women in sport goes a long way back in history. Ancient Greek ladies ran the distances while their spouses looked for restaurant sites or founded shipping lines.

Mary Queen of Scots was the first woman to take up golf. Elizabeth (1558-1603) of England was a card player, devoted to hunting and had a fondness for dog racing. Anne, Queen of England (1702-1714), had a passion for horse-racing. She took over control, standardized the rules and gave the sport a great impetus.

Eleanora Sears, a Boston society girl, shocked the Cabots, the Lodges and it was reported God, when she turned to sports activities at the turn of the 20th century. Ladies at that time indulged themselves in knitting, tatdidelling, verandah chatting and other gentle things of life.

Miss Sears told the conventions to go to hell and proceeded with the revolution. She took up lawn tennis, became an excellent canoeist, sailed a boat with mast still and darling, was a fine swimmer, a splendid rifle shot and a superb horseback rider. Staid Boston was shocked. In other parts of the world women's eyes began to open.

In 1909 she appeared at a country club where a polo game was about to start. She wore a divided and riding trousers, the first woman to appear in the male garb. The captain of the British polo team was speechless. The American spectator took one look—and ordered Miss Sears off the field.

She became an expert motorcycle rider. She drove high-speed automobiles. She challenged the men drivers. They refused to race the "female speed demon." When motorboats became racing craft she drove them.

She was a fine golfer, but never sought titles. She played for fun and could "drive" with the best of the male sex. At 46 she shifted to long distance walking trips and soon owned all feminine records for durability.

At 56 she took up squash and won the singles championship. At 58 she was still playing and made the national quarter finals.

Single her time there have been many great women athletes, and perhaps the greatest of them all was the famous Babe Didrickson, a victim of cancer.

Here in Belleville we have many fine lady golfers, figure skaters, and yachtswomen. The "Squadronettes" of the Bay of Quinte Power Squadron, although but seven or eight years' unit age, have already made a name for themselves in power squadron circles. They are getting better every year—and their numbers are increasing.

But cheer up, mates. All is not lost. The gals have yet to develop a Rocket Richard, Bobby Hull, Eddie Arcaro, Stan Matthews, Stirling Moss, Ron Stewart, Floyd Patterson, Bobby Hayward (the cams close), and others of that ilk. But who knows . . . ?

Giant Hurlers Rolling Up Records

Backed By Hot Bats

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

Sensational! Phenomenal! Spectacular!

Take your pick to describe the pitching duels being turned in by San Francisco Giants' mound staff.

Billy O'Dell added to the amazing record when he beat Pittsburgh Pirates 4-2 Tuesday night and ran the National League leaders' winning streak to seven games. He was the fifth Giant hurler in succession to go the distance.

In those five games against Juan Marichal, Jack Sanford, Billy Pierce, Gaylord Perry and O'Dell, opposing Chicago Cub and Pittsburgh batters have been able to score only five runs and the Giants' earned run average is an astonishing 1.16.

Al Dark's workmen now have completed 17 games in 21 starts this season. At the same time not one opposing pitcher has managed to last nine innings against a Giants' attack that has made timely hitting its main weapon.

At Los Angeles, Doug Camilli's run-producing single in the last of the 11th gave the Dodgers a 4-3 decision over Chicago. St. Louis Cardinals bopped Houston Colts 6-4 and Cincinnati Reds walloped New York Mets 8-2. Milwaukee Braves and Philadelphia Phillies were idle because of cold and wet grounds.

O'Dell ran his record to 3-0, scattering nine hits while going the distance for the second time. Singles by Don Clendenon, Johnny Logan and Bill Mazeroski nicked him for a run in second and Clendenon's ninth inning homer ended the Pirates' production for the night. Logan was 4-for-4 but to no avail.

The Giants put it away in the second, with three runs on five singles by Felipe Alou, Jose Pagan and Jim Davenport, a wild pitch, a passed ball and an error. Orl Cepeda wound up the Giants' scoring the next inning with the seventh homer off Bob Veale (1-1).

Camilli's single in the last inning that could have been played — the Dodgers' rallied to win. Frank Howard would have batted for pitcher Ed Roebuck (1-0) got the victory with Glen Hobbie (0-4) taking the loss.

The Cubs had tied it in the eighth on a two-base error by Davis and George Altman's single. And went ahead in the 11th when two runs on singles by Willie Davis and an attempted sacrifice by Andy Carey that failed.

Pastrano Stops McNeely

BOSTON (AP)—Clever Willie Pastrano sent young Tom McNeely reeling toward possible retirement Thursday night, easily outclassing the recent world heavyweight title challenger on a unanimous 10-round decision.

The lumbering McNeely outweighed Pastrano, of Miami Beach, Fla., 208 pounds to 185 but was unable to land more than half a dozen telling blows after the opening round before 2,096 fans.

Pastrano opened minor cuts over McNeely's eyes early in the bout and bloodied his nose in the seventh. It was McNeely's third fight since being knocked out by champion Floyd Patterson in Toronto Dec. 6.

Yank Hurlers Just Miss No-Hitter

By JACK HACKLEMAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

There was a rare bid for a no-hitter in the American League Tuesday night. New York's 5-man pitching Yankees didn't quite pull off that spectacular stunt, but they did overwhelm Chicago White Sox 6-1 and strengthened their hold on first place.

Bill Stafford and Roland Sheldon staged the drama, holding the White Sox without a hit for eight innings. After the spell was broken when Shelton was nicked for a run in the ninth, Marshall Bridges put on a workmanlike flourish by quelling the mild Chicago threat.

The three-man job was a hitter recalled in the Yankees' sixth straight victory and stretched their All Juan to 10½ games. Chicago fell into third, 91 percentage points behind Detroit Tigers.

Vic Wertz delivered for the fourth straight time as a pinch hitter and gave Detroit a 3-2 decision over Kansas City Athletics. Washington Senators ended a 13-game losing streak, edging Boston Red Sox 3-2 on Pete Burnside's four-hit pitching. Leon Wagner took over as the majors' hottest home run hitter with eight as Los Angeles Angels topped Cleveland Indians 5-4. And Baltimore Orioles nipped and hitting led Minnesota Twins over Baltimore Orioles 8-3.

STAFFORD

Stafford turned away the White Sox enough a scratched out a hit through five innings, then retired with a sore hip. Sheldon took over the string until Nellie Fox opened the last of the ninth with a sharp single to the middle. Joe Cunningham drew a walk and Floyd Robinson singled to right, chasing in the lone Chicago run and bringing in the hard-throwing Bridges from the bullpen.

Bridges put away the first two men he faced, walked Smith to reload the sacks and Sherm Lollar on a foul pop for the final out.

With the help of two errors three unearned runs, the Yanks built up a 6-0 lead on lefty Juan Pizarro (2-0) before Elston Howard slugged a two-run homer in the 7th against Herb Score. Bobby Richardson, who has hit in all 18 games this year, collected two singles for the Yankees' 10-hit offence and Roger Maris had a double for the 12th hit in his last 24 at bats.

Wertz settled the issue between unbeaten right - handers Jim Bunning and Jerry Walker with his bases-filled, two - out pinch single in the top of the 10th at Kansas City. Bunning (3-0) was knocked for seven hits, including Jerry Lumpe's homer in the last of the 10th, while the Tigers got 10 off Walker (2-1), one of them Al Kaline's 6th homer.

Burnside, who now has recorded two of Washington's three victories, shut out the Red Sox after they got their run in the first inning. Burnside's double, a sacrifice and Frank Malzone's single, Bob Johnson's double and Dale Long's single produced the tying run in the fourth and the Senators got the winner in the eighth on Jimmy Piersall's double, a passed ball and Don Kleip's sacrifice fly.

The win was the first for the Senators since April 13 when Burnside beat Cleveland.

Wagner, on a home run-or-nothing kick, connected his 6th two times up against Cleveland, with two on the first against loser Sam McDowell (1-4) and with the bases empty in the second against Frank Funk.

The Angels' unbeaten rookie Bo Belinsky won his third in a row as the first of four Los Angeles pitchers.

Percival (4-1) pitched in his fourth complete game with a one - hitter, whacked a line-breaking two - run homer and also chipped in with a single in the Twins' victory over the Orioles.

Soccer Fans Protest Player Ban

TORONTO (CP)—Soccer fans here fired a barrage of telegrams, letters and telephone calls to officials in England and Italy, protesting restrictions placed on players wishing to come to Canada.

Many of the communications have gone to government officials, but the majority were directed to Franco Bertoldi, secretary of the Italian Soccer Federation, and Alan Hardaker, secretary of the English League.

The fans were protesting league policies of not allowing the stars to play with the Eastern Canada Professional Soccer League.

Charlie Lombardi, president of Toronto Italia, said he feels the ineligibility of the top Italian players will be relaxed before the end of May, but to make sure "I'm going over to Italy myself within the next few days."

Kowalchuk Still Hitting 'Em

TRAIL, B.C. (CP) — Trail Smoke Eaters' first ice date today.

It was the first day in a month that they hadn't practised or played in the Allan Cup playdowns.

The eastern champion Montreal Olympics, however, spent the day on skates in search of the pace they hope will produce a victory in tonight's game at one of the best-of-seven finals series for the Canadian senior hockey title. They lead the set 2-1.

The Smokes can take the series-by wicking tonight and Friday. One or more victories for Montreal would push the series to game Saturday and next Monday.

Only one lineup change is in prospect tonight, involving a return to action by Montreal forward George James. He suffered shoulder and jack injuries and was bruised in the third game Monday in a collision with Trail's Ross Kowalchuk.

Name Ortiz Fighter Of Month

NEW YORK (AP) — Lightweight champion Carlos Ortiz of New York was named "fighter of the month" by Ring magazine today for his one-sided triumph over defender Joey Giambra in their 15-round title fight at Las Vegas April 21.

Brown was made the No. 1 contender followed by Jose Charnley of England. In another lightweight change, Carlos Hernandez of Venezuela whipped Doug Vaillant of Cuba and moved up from sixth to third among the contenders.

In the heavyweight ranks Sweden's Ingemar Johansson was advanced from fifth to fourth in an exchange of places with Bob Cleroux of Montreal. The switch resulted from Cleroux's loss to third-ranking Zora Folley of Chandler, Ariz. Cassius Clay of Louisville, who stopped George Logan of Boise, Idaho, moved up from 10th to ninth. Argentina's Alejandro Lavorante fell from ninth to 10th.

In the heavyweight rankings, after champion Floyd Patterson of New York, Sonny Liston, Philadelphia was listed first and Eddie Machen, Portland, Ore., second.

Eastern Football TV Dow Won't Renew Option

MONTREAL (CP) — Dow Brewery Limited has decided against renewing its option to co-sponsor the Eastern Football Conference games on the CTV, Canada's private television network, it was learned Tuesday.

The decision was described as the result of a change in the firm's "marketing plans and advertising strategy for the current year."

British American Oil Company and Dow purchased the sponsorship franchise jointly last year after Toronto's CFTO-TV ousted the CBC for the television rights with a two-year, $375,000-yearly offer. There was no word on the oil company's plans for the forthcoming season.

Frisco Back On the Loose

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Star halfback Earl (Dutch) Morrall of San Francisco 49ers, who used his basketball rebounding skill to catch football in the National Football League, is shopping for a new team.

He officially severed connections with the 49ers Tuesday when his option ran out. Owners, 27, was believed to be seeking more than $25,000 for his services. The 49ers termed the figure excessive and said no San Francisco player has ever been paid that much.

Several Canadian teams seek Owens' services.

Yesterday Stars

Pitcher: Pete Burnside, Washington, Senators, snapped Washington's 13 game losing streak in the American League with a four-hitter that beat Boston Red Sox 3-2.

Hitter: Leon Wagner, Los Angeles Angels, hit homers, in his first two times at the plate in a total of six in the last seven games and drove in four runs in an 8-4 American League victory over Cleveland Indians.

Fool's Gold Guineas Favorite

LONDON (CP)—A speedy, almost jet-black filly, bred in the blue grass of Kentucky from the proudest bloodlines in the United States, faces her big test Thursday at Newmarket, headquarters of British racing since the days of King Charles II.

Fool's Gold, owned by J. H. Whitney of New York who formerly was American ambassador in Britain, will be one of the fancied candidates in the One Thousand Guineas, run over the Rowley mile. The One Thousand is one of Britain's five classic races.

The strongest opposition may come from the Irish filly Display; West Side Story, recent conqueror of Fool's Gold; and Azuzza, winner of a seven-furlong race at Newbury last month.

Fourteen fillies, some making their debuts as three-year-olds, will go the post for an event that favorite players always approach gingerly, since distaffside steeds are notoriously fickle in the spring.

The sire of Fool's Gold is Tom Fool, winner of all his 10 races as a four-year-old. The dam is Track Medal, full sister of Swaps which won the Kentucky Derby and was probably one of the best post-war thoroughbreds in the U.S.

EX-CHAMP ATTACKED

RENO (AP)—Bartender Ken Overlin, former middleweight boxing champion, is recovering after undergoing emergency surgery Tuesday for head injuries suffered when a customer allegedly whipped him. Police reported witnesses told them a man Overlin punched at the Monaco Club returned with a gun, slugged the boxer with the gun butt and kicked him repeatedly. Overlin held the New York version of the middleweight title in 1940-41.

Defence Policy Spelled Out By Pearson

By ARCH MacKINNON

VICTORIA (CP)—No "defence now exists except peace and Canada's voice can hardly be effective in the search for that peace if she is a nuclear power, Liberal Leader Pearson said Thursday night.

If millions are spent for arms, they could jeopardize the maintenance of peace and in the long run, arms have never possessed peace indefinitely.

"Arms can merely hold off the possibility of attack while a solution is sought," Mr. Pearson told about 300 persons at the end of an 18-hour day of campaigning for the June 18 election.

His main remarks constituted a policy statement by the Liberal party on the most explosive issue in the campaign formally opened last week in Prime Minister Diefenbaker's home province.

The Liberals had been stated previously — no nuclear arms now at least, arms for the Canadian NATO forces if the alliance "pools control, strength-ening of Canadian forces as necessary and a continental defence system. Mr. Pearson did not vote, warning for "the United States nuclear deterrent."

PREPARED FOR CHANGE

"I say bluntly that a new Liberal government will not hesitate to change defence policies to changing conditions," Mr. Pearson said. "One of the first things would be to discuss with our allies in NATO the extent of the fulfilment commitments that the present government has made for Canada."

After that discussion, changes would be made if needed.

Moreover, a LIBERAL government would look at what the Progressive Conservative government has; "flatly and persistently refused to do"—establish a parliamentary committee to study defence and provide facts for the public.

The Conservative government had failed, he said, through out its defence decisions and "as a result, we have wasted millions of dollars. We have defaulted our commitments to our allies."

"This government has made Canada look pretty silly."

The Vancouver day started early in Toronto where he boarded a commercial jet for Vancouver. After a press conference, he headed by chartered plane for Comox and neighboring Courtenay on Vancouver Island, addressed a gathering of about 200 briefly, became an honorary chief—Man of Great Knowledge — or Kuyimion—of the Comox Indian band, and flew here on schedule.

Today he bored into interior British Columbia, with visits scheduled to Kelowna and Cranbrook. Later, he was to visit Lethbridge and address a night meeting at Calgary.

Liberals captured none of B.C.'s 22 federal seats in 1958 but party spokesmen talked confidently to Mr. Pearson on Tuesday of taking perhaps eight seats this time.

Mr. Pearson said that smaller parties, "of course, are slow to say things we would all like to believe, but unfortunately don't accord with the hard realities that the next government must face."

Under a Liberal government, there would be no compromise about maintaining Canada's position as a member of the 15-nation NATO alliance.

"Now, defence policy has to be realistic," he said. More than ever it had to be flexible. But decisions at the same time must be made when necessary and carried through.

But nuclear defence was far from everything. A liberal government would meet Canada's share in stronger conventional forces.

Noting better than the Conservative government "does not in my mind mean making Canada a nuclear power — does better includes keeping down the number of nations with nuclear arms."

But there was a difference, Mr. Pearson said, in relation to NATO control of nuclear weapons. That would limit rather than extend nuclear spread.

He paid tribute to External Affairs Minister Green for efforts in the cause of world peace. But it was regrettable that so often Mr. Green's colleagues had "sabotaged" those efforts.

He dealt briefly with Canada's attitude to the U.S. and said there should be no doubt that Canada is fortunate to have a country inspired by the same ideals.

"The U.S. deserves our strong support when it is right and our constructive criticism when we feel it is wrong."

He had been "very much impressed" by his Sunday meeting in Washington with President Kennedy.

'Peace Crusade' Major Plank Of NDP Party

By JOHN MATTHEWS

CALGARY (CP)—T. C. Douglas, national leader of the New Democratic party, said Tuesday a "peace crusade" will be the greatest single issue of the June 18 election campaign.

"Peace is too important to be left to politicians, diplomats and merchants of death who batten on the profits of war," he told 1,200 persons at a keen-ly stimulating convention here.

"Arms can merely hold off the possibility of attack while a solution is sought," Mr. Pearson told about 300 persons at the end of an 18-hour day of campaigning for the June 18 election.

His main remarks constituted a policy statement by the Liberal party on the most explosive issue in the campaign formally opened last week in Prime Minister Diefenbaker's home province.

'Them As Has, Gets'

LONDON (Reuters) — A millionaire who says his only hobby is playing the soccer pools Tuesday learned he won £35,484.

Charles Dormer, 46, self-made owner of a string of garages and industrial companies, normally bets £30 a week—one for each of the average Englishman's salary—but doubled his winning bet because it is the end of the season.

Dormer was at his house in suburban Woodford, where he lives with his wife Betty and children and such luxuries as an indoor swimming pool and stereophonic loudspeakers in each room, when he got the news of the big win.

"How nice," he said.

Record Entry Of Candidates Shaping Up

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

A record entry of candidates is shaping up for the June 18 Dominion election.

Up to last fall when 864 contestants vied for the 265 seats at stake have so many Canadians offered their names in the parliamentary race. If the trend persists some 1,000 fielding candidates for all 265 seats in contention next month when voters of 17 years ago will participate.

An unofficial compilation by The Canadian Press shows 566 candidates in the race. The Liberals, Canada's ruling party of 22 years of Parliament after two terms in opposition, top the list with 262.

Progressive Conservatives, election winners in 1957 and 1958, follow with 153 candidates and the balance of the field is comprised of 116 New Democratic Party supporters, 114 Social Credit entries and 13 Communists.

In 1958 there were 831 candidates and in 1957 the number was 862. Progressive Conservatives and Liberals had full slates of 265 candidates in 1958, their predecessor, the then CCF, had 169, Social Credit 82 and other groups 50, of whom 18 were Labor-Progressive, or Communist, supporters.

FIVE WEEKS TO GO

The parties have almost five weeks to complete their rosters. Official nomination day in 263 constituencies is Monday, June 4, two weeks before the election. Nominations in 2 widely-scattered ridings close Tuesday, May 29. Monday 21 is a holiday. So allow two extra weeks for delivery of election papers. Two constituencies elect two members apiece.

The large number of candidates already in the field is unusual so early in the campaign but is explained by the fact there was considerable advance warning that this would be an election year. Candidates in many constituencies were chosen months ago.

All four major parties have indicated they plan to field full slates if possible and Progressive Conservative-Liberal contests are expected in every riding. The NDP may fall short of its goal by 9 or so and while Social Credit's slate will be determined by the success of seminars planned across the country.

Ontario, with a high of 85 seats at stake, already has 191 candidates in the field, topped by the Liberals with 73 and followed by PCs with 67, NDP 44, Social Credit with 34 and Communists with 5.

He was elected to Parliament in 1935 and was re-elected in 1940, resigning to lead the provincial party to power in Saskatchewan.

Astrological Forecast

For May 3

BY SYDNEY OMARR

Aries (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Realize financial advantage by taking profit instead of looking for "killing." You won't go broke-by taking gain. But you can lose, emotionally and materially, by seeking "all or nothing."

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20): Excellent for taking initiative, for striving to put ideas to work. Don't be too cautious, but make complete plans. Once when the iron is hot, then strike.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21): With Mercury now in your sign, very great opportunity for "right" contacts. Let others know what you have to offer. You might be pleasantly surprised at number of "takers."

Cancer (June 22 to July 21): Gesture of friendship could benefit you today and in future. Be generous with time, efforts, ideas. But don't bog down. Versatility is key to course of action.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21): Stress on part of chart having to do with ambition, aspirations and tendency to be dominering. A charm makes your day successful.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Favorable lunar aspect today means cycle up as far as romance, creative efforts concerned. Make changes, rather than settle, for "groove" which leads to getting in rut.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Seeking to find reason, rather than giving in to panic is best course, or you find there has been much shouting but very little accomplished.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 22): Cycle has been higher in past . . . not day to argue or "slide your seat out." Be a "chalk player." Stick with the known. Do not gamble on what could be. Stress facts.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23 to Dec. 21): Most pressure to "go out" in evening may be applied. But you might be better off by having needed rest. Be with those you like, not those who make you feel it's a duty.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Lunar and other aspects point to day when vitality is key. No matter who you do, do it with gusto. Show superiors you're capable and enthusiastic.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Being practical is one thing but being overly cautious is something else. Exercise independence today: invest in own talents, abilities and the payoff could be big.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): No one is completely immune from criticism. Knowing this, let one close to you know about frivolous error. Self-expression today's key to ultimate gain.

If today is your birthday . . . you could experience very productive year. Time to accept added responsibility, to invest, to enjoy progress and romance coming your way.

General Tendencies: Cycle up for Aries, Taurus, Gemini. Day when halfway measures doomed to failure. All could benefit from Capricorn interpretation.

Scouting activities

By ANNE M. McDONALD

A capacity crowd enjoyed the "2nd Ernest Gill Ye-Together" of Scouters and friends at Club Canada on Monday evening. The banquet opened with the singing of the "Queen" and grace given by Mabie Carter of the Salvation Army. A live-wire quartet lead by District Commissioner Murray Maw assisted by Rickshaw Mirkus, Mrs. F. Lancaster, president of the Belleville Boy Scout District Council welcomed the guests and stated that this is a voluntary organization and everybody should pull together to make Scouting a success. Mr. Maw expressed appreciation on behalf of the Scouters for the get-together provided by the District Council.

Mr. Dail Walters, Master of Ceremonies, introduced the head table guests which included Mr. and Mrs. F. Pollard, D.C. Mr. Maw and Mrs. Maw, Mr. and Mrs. Don Jack Kinzer, Mr. and Mrs. L. Andrews, Mr. and Mrs. F. Lancaster, Major Carter, Mr. and Mrs. P. Geisthorpe, Mr. and Mrs. Dave McDonald, Mr. and Mrs. G. Russel, Mr. and Mrs. A. Mercier, Mr. and Mrs. F. Leathem.

District Commissioner M. Maw made the presentations which included certificates for Basic Alexa Course and A.D.C. Gordon Russel assisted Mr. Maw presenting Gillwell scarves to Pack Scouter, Miriam Russell, Stan Terry, Arnold Welch, Alfred Wagner, and Troop Scouter Allan Turner all of 10th Belleville. While Scouting in this area is progressing favorably in most respects, D.C. Maw pointed out that 3rd Belleville St. Matthew's have made the most progress of any group and are operating at a very high level. Assistant Scout Master Bob Clary of 3rd Belleville was deeply moved at having such a high honor bestowed on their organization and expressed gratitude to Dr. Maw. A request was made for all groups to assist in selecting a boy to attend the World Jamboree in Greece in the summer of 1963. All Scouters are asked to attend a meeting regarding a "Scout Show" which is scheduled to take place next Easter holiday.

Mayor A. M. Haig honored the Scouters in taking time from his heavy schedule to bring greetings on behalf of the city of Belleville. He stated in part that if we are to preserve our democracy we must give more to our society, and praised the Scouting movement for making such a great contribution to the future of this District. Mrs. Haig who is Area District Commissioner of Girl Guides was also present.

Mrs. P. Geisthorpe, president of the Scout Ladies' District committee brought greetings on behalf of the committee and reminded the ladies to attend the "5th Annual Pot-Luck Supper" to be held in St. Michael's Academy on Thursday, May 3rd at 6.30 p.m.

SPEAKER INTRODUCED

Mr. F. Lancaster introduced his guest speaker, Mr. MacKinnon, Probation Officer of Hastings County, a position which he has held for 12 years. And how very fitting that Mr. MacKinnon should address an audience who can't be left out on "Juvenile Court". It was learned that cases of delinquency stem from neglect either physically or emotionally, and since parents are simply not interested in their children, surprisingly all offenders do not come from broken homes. Juveniles in Hastings County have not shown viciousness although they do get a touch of things and the most popular is straight breaking and entering. The committed a delinquency, parents are issued with a summons to appear before the court. The court session is very private.

The role of the Probation Officer at a court hearing is that of a friend to the delinquent and sees that he conducts himself in a proper fashion. Prior to the court hearing he is responsible for the child's background to assist the judge to come to a proper decision. Punishment will be dealt with not as offenders but as cases in condition of delinquency and, therefore, requiring help and guidance and not punishment, and it is here that the Probation Officer is a true friend.

Delinquency in this area is on the decrease, but Mr. MacKinnon stated that he and would like to see it down to zero, and ask the Scouters that where they fit in by doing what they can for youth in preventing delinquency and with their training programme. Although Mr. MacKinnon has never been a Scouter he has always been deeply impressed with the Scout Movement.

In appreciation for his very interesting and informative address Mr. MacKinnon was presented with an attractive pair of copper bookends by Mr. Dail Walters on behalf of the District Council.

Mr. Walters, chairman of the Scouter get-together thanked his committee for a successful evening and also the ladies of Club Canada for the beautifully decorated tables and delicious turkey dinner, and to Marion Geisthorpe, Akela of 8th Belleville for making and donating the name cards for the head table which were designed in the shape of the Scout Crest. Title part of the program was concluded with the "Benediction" by Mabie Carter.

DANCE PROGRAM

The dance program was most capably handled by Al Glover and Lloyd Brayton of the 2nd District Council. Round and square dancing was enjoyed to the tunes of the "Prince Edward Ramblers", and a total of 20 prizes were distributed through the courtesy of the merchants of Belleville. The Wings Diner was won by Janet Suyken and Scout Terry Flynn. James Joby of 10th Belleville won the "Big Camper's Lantern". Mr. and Mrs. Don MacKinnon were the prize winners of the Anniversary Dance" and won a large cake shovel decorated with a green bow. The highlight of the evening was the contest for "The Twist". The judges, Mr. and Mrs. MacKinnon had difficulty in selecting the final twisters because competition was keen, but the best and equally matched couples were Anne Murray and Scout Jim Pickering.

This ended a very happy occasion for Scouters and friends and their 2nd annual get-together, and many are looking forward to the 3rd. Mr. Walters and his committee deserve a great deal of credit for a delightful and well-planned evening.

The announcements were as follows: from Mrs. Anne McDonald, regarding the Annual Auxiliary dinner, May 3rd, at St. Michael's, the posters evening on April 30th at Club Canada, and the church parade for June 3rd, combined with Girl Guides.

Mrs. Rainbird reported on the Father and Son banquet. She brought a vote of thanks from the group committee president, Mr. D. McBride, and Scouter Ingraham for the work of the banquet. She added her own thanks to all who worked and for Signalling flags are to be made for Mother Ingraham. The auxiliary also agreed to furnish articles to complete first aid kits for the group hikes.

Meeting closed with the Scout Mizpah.

Group Captain Mrs. Carmen Lowther and her group were in charge of the evening and lunch. A game with house-hold articles wrapped and beside paper bags to be examined by members proved mystifying. So much so, that Mrs. Niles had 15 out of the 15 articles.

The guests of the evening: Scouts Glenn Rainbird, Bruce Johnston and Bill Gibson were introduced by Mrs. Kay Ingraham. They had on display their proficiency they had collected at the "3rd Canadian Jamboree" held last summer at Connaught Ranges, Ottawa. Their semi-lucence was amusing and enjoyed by all. They showed the various scarves and district badges, pictures and other tradeable articles.

Scouter Jack Hodgson thanked them on behalf of the auxiliary for their visit. Scouts Spencer and Bill Gibson were introduced as employable boys in Belleville and Trenton.

PICTON

Former Member, G. Tustin, Will Seek PC Nomination

PICTON — Mayor H. J. McFarland announced yesterday afternoon that he will not seek nomination as Progressive Conservative candidate for Prince Edward in the election.

At the same time, a former Liberal organizer, Tustin Companese, issued a statement stating that he will be a candidate at the nomination meeting to be held at the Prince Edward Collegiate in Picton on May 16.

Mr. Tustin represented the Prince Edward riding while sitting at Ottawa for a number of years.

He said he had been approached by many people, asking that he offer his services, and he had decided to let his name stand. He said, he said, that his experience may be of value, especially at this time.

Mr. Tustin is a close friend of Prince Minister John Diefenbaker, both having attended the same school in East York. He is an ex-mayor of Napanee, serving two years on the council before retirement to operated a theatre.

Clarence A. Milligan, of Napanee, who has represented the riding in the past two sessions, has declared he will again seek the nomination. Also definitely a candidate is Douglas Allenbrook, of Napanee, a former mayor of that town. Unless there is a "dark horse" it appears these three will seek the support of six hundred delegates expected to attend.

Though it is not part of the constitution of the Conservatives it is generally understood that Lennox has the Federal nomination of the Provincial. Provincial member and though not officially announced are interested in the Federal nomination, feel that Lennox and Addington have first opportunity.

Mr. Tustin was member for 22 years before being defeated at nomination by C. A. Milligan. Mr. Allenbrook was a candidate in Provincial election at the last election.

Mayor McFarland stated that it was because of fear of conflict with his business, interests that he would not seek the honor. He not only owns the construction company which bears his name but is associated with many other business interests. It would not be possible to divorce myself from these in time and would be unfair to endeavour any political party by being associated with it, when I myself might possibly benefit from my being a member. I will continue to work for the good of the riding," he stated.

Son Locates Nazis' Victim After 22 Years

SHELTON, Wash. (AP) — A German woman says she has been reunited by transatlantic telephone with a son the Nazis forced her to abandon 21 years ago when they shipped her to Dachau concentration camp.

"I thought he was dead," Mrs. Frank Cooper said Monday. "I was told all four of my children were killed during the war but they are alive — all of them."

Mrs. Cooper learned of this from her youngest son, Hans, now 22, telephoned her Sunday from Rotterdam, The Netherlands.

"It was like hearing a voice from the grave," Mrs. Cooper told reporters.

Mrs. Cooper, 47, said Hans told her last July, 22, her daughter, is married and has a child; Piet, 26, her oldest son, is married and has a child, and that Wim, 24, another son is married and a teaching school. She said Hans hopes to join her here.

During the Second World War when the Nazis invaded Holland, she was arrested and shipped to Germany. She said Piet was kept at Dachau about three months until the Gestapo learned she was born in Germany.

When she was released, she said she received letters from her husband, telling her the children had been killed. She said he also asked for a divorce.

After the war she met Frank Cooper, who was stationed with the American Army. They were married and moved to Washington state in 1947.

Tight Moslem Discipline Seen Near Breaking

Bloody Day Threatens To Bring Retaliation

ALGIERS (Reuters) — The feared "counter - attack" by Moslems enraged at European terrorism appeared nearer today after Algeria's bloodiest day for more than seven years, claimed at least 110 dead and 147 wounded.

French authorities beefed up security forces in the cities from countryside garrisons and tightened the curfew here amid signs that citizens' nerves were at the breaking point.

Troops opened fire on a Moslem crowd surging on the European quarter Wednesday night after a bomb explosion by the terrorist Secret Army Organization dropped on the Moslem suburb of Belcourt. Two Moslems were wounded.

Two more doctors were beaten and robbed of about 28,000 francs ($5,600).

Semi-official figures on Wednesday's violence were released today, showing that all but six of the dead and all but three of the wounded were Moslems.

The toll was the highest for any day since November 1954, when Moslem insurgents launched a war with France that ended in a cease-fire last year and agreement to stage an independence referendum.

Macmillan Arrives Home Looking Tired

LONDON (Reuters) — Prime Minister Macmillan arrived back here by air today looking tired after eight days of talks in the United States and Canada.

Macmillan will brief the cabinet and answer questions in the House of Commons on his meetings with President Kennedy and Prime Minister Diefenbaker.

Macmillan, whose tour was mainly aimed at discussing British negotiations for entry into the Common Market, said the trip was "rather crowded and enjoyable and, I think, useful."

He said in speeches in New York and Toronto he tried to give Americans and Canadians "a certain picture of what we are doing in Britain, how we are facing our problems, and particularly the deep interest we have in the Commonwealth and our American friends."

Able to Reverse Growth of One Type of Cancer

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) A natural hormone product which the human body has been able to reverse the growth of one type of cancer in some patients, a Philadelphia institute researcher reported Wednesday.

Dr. Leon Heilman presented the report to the Association of American Physicians.

The report said the natural hormone, prednisone — prednisolone—has been found effective in the treatment of lymphomas —tumors of the lymph and lymphoid tissue. Four of seven patients treated at the institute have been aided by the new treatment.

Prednisolone, a steroid, is a breakdown product of male hormones secreted in the testes and in the adrenal glands.

In studies carried out in the Shoa — Waterfarm Institute of Microbiology, Rehovot, Israel, a mixture of bacteria and a single tumor sites in four of the seven in the lymphoma group, which were treated with the mixture. The results were maintained while the treatment continued, the report noted.

When the treatment was discontinued, the report stated, prompt recurrence of the disease was seen in most cases, but subsequent courses of bacteriophage produced recovery.

Seek to Reduce Union Feuding

WASHINGTON (CP)—Claude Jodoin confers with AFL - CIO President George Meany today in an attempt to ease the strain of international union feuding that threatens the political power of the Canadian Labor Congress.

A qualified labor observer said the issue at stake goes to the heart of Canadian labor autonomy.

Since big international unions, which have headquarters in the United States make up about 75 per cent of the CLC membership, they could destroy the congress if they decided to walk out and set up a rival organization of their own.

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Syria's new government has launched its program of "Arab socialism" by reinstating the country's 1958 land reform law Wednesday. Glenn Acts as Guide for Titov As Cosmonaut Tours Washington

WASHINGTON (AP)—Soviet cosmonaut Gherman Titov and U.S. astronaut John Glenn, already associated in the space age, met face to face for the first time today.

The meeting of the two conquerors of outer space was a simple one, with Glenn saying "hello" as they shook hands and Titov replying "very pleased to meet you."

Both spacemen were accompanied by their wives and at their meeting only a few other people were in attendance including officials from the Soviet Embassy, the National Academy of Sciences and the International Committee on Space Research (of the International Council of Scientific Union).

The two posed for photographers after the exhibitions.

Then the only other thing said between the spacemen before they left was Titov's exchange:

Titov — "We are not trained for delivering speeches."

Glenn, with a grin—"I agree."

The astronauts and their wives had coffee. Then they went on a sightseeing tour of Washington with Glenn as guide, followed by a chat with President Kennedy at the White House.

ATOMIC EXPERTS STEP UP SIZE OF TEST SHOTS

Explode One of Million-Ton Range

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. atomic experts stepped up the size of their nuclear test shots in the Pacific Wednesday, exploding one in the 1,000,000-ton range.

It was the third nuclear device fired in the atmosphere since the moratorium was started one week ago in the vicinity of Christmas Island.

Like the first two, it was dropped from an airplane. It produced a much bigger blast, however.

The joint announcement by the defence department and the Atomic Energy Commission said it was "in the low megaton yield range." This means it had the explosive equivalent of anywhere from one to several millions tons of TNT.

By contrast, the atomic bomb dropped on Hiroshima during the Second World War was rated at 20,000 tons of TNT.

FIRST TWO SMALLER

The first two test shots in the Pacific were in the 100,000-500,000 ton range.

The Russians, after breaking the test moratorium last fall, did not get around to a megaton device until their fifth test shot, as announced by the United States, their first four shots in the Arctic tests ranged from 20,000 tons to 500,000 tons.

From there they worked up to one mighty blast of 30,000,000 tons, then tapered off.

The United States has announced it will not set off any super blasts in the Pacific series but will confine its experiments to practical military needs. These are not expected to involve any devices with a yield larger than 10 megatons, or 10,000,000 tons of TNT.

The Pacific tests are expected to run two or three months. About three dozen different devices will be tried out.

Leaders Go East and West As Campaign Warms Up

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Prime Minister Diefenbaker, resuming the campaign trail after a three-day layoff due to British Prime Minister Macmillan's visit, flew to Newfoundland Wednesday for two days of speechmaking in the Atlantic province.

Liberal Leader Lester Pearson began his day in Victoria, then moved eastwards into interior British Columbia and southern Alberta for his first campaign swing through the Prairies.

In Ottawa, Social Credit Senator Robert Thompson continued behind-the-scenes administrative work prior to getting his party's campaign in high gear.

Today's itinerary leave Mr. Diefenbaker visiting St. John's Harbor, Stephenville, Corner Brook and Deer Lake, NfId., before returning to Ottawa.

Mr. Pearson and Mr. Douglas both plan to spend the day in Saskatchewan, with the Liberal leader in Weyburn, Melville and Weyburn and the NDP leader in Regina. Mr. Thompson is scheduled to visit Quebec City.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker told a St. John's Progressive Conservative rally on a rainy, foggy night that Canada is negotiating hard for an extension of its territorial waters fishing limit.

He said Canada cannot act unilaterally to extend the limit to 12 miles without drawing retaliation on Canada's foreign markets. He noted that Mr. Pearson last week suggested in St. John's that Canada should act by itself, having failed to get international agreement for the extension.

He suggested that precipitate action might jeopardize great segments of Canada's fisheries and that Canada has already bought 50 per cent of total fish exports production. Retaliatory action could not be ruled out.

In a television address, Pearson in Ottawa, before his departure for Newfoundland, Mr. Diefenbaker said the United States, among other countries, takes "strong objection" to the system of Commonwealth trade preferences.

He reiterated that Britain's entry into the European Common Market might place a "strain" on the Commonwealth.

Mr. Pearson also touched on trade when he arrived in Calgary. He told a suburban Liberal rally that the government has been "diversion and dislocation."

Earlier, in the Kootenay town of Cranbrook, he expressed confidence that the United States will "reexamine" the Columbia River treaty with a new Liberal government.

The Liberals would start "at once" to get a better deal for Canada, he said, and he was sure a satisfactory agreement could be worked out in a matter of months.

NDP Leader Douglas spoke in the Interlake farming-fishing community of Selkirk, 22 miles east of Winnipeg, and his party would transform Canada from what he termed an American dictatorship into an economic democracy.

It was time, he said, that Canada had a government "to represent those who produce the wealth."

"A small economic clique is now today by far the owner of everything you and I are able to buy in Canada from an automobile down to a package of cigarettes."

DOCTOR MADE $400,000 IN LAND DEALS

Board Chastises Hospital Head

QUEBEC (CP)—A one-judge government commission has chastised Dr. J. Alcide Dionne, medical director and administrator of Montreal's Fleury hospital, for making some $400,000 in capital profits in real estate transactions involving the institution.

The only recommendation made in the report—tabled in the legislature Wednesday night—was that Dr. Dionne and his family withdraw from the hospital's administration and new directory be named.

"As for the exclusion of Dr. Dionne as a doctor at the hospital, it does not fall under the jurisdiction of this commission to make any recommendation on this subject," concluded the report by Judge Jean Tellier, appointed last June to inquire into the hospital's administration.

The report traced the complicated financial affairs of the institution which began as a modest private hospital but is now a public corporation with a $3,000,000 budget.

Judge Tellier said Dr. Dionne "benefited exclusively not only from his personal transactions with the private hospital, as well as with the public hospital, but also realized profits during transactions between the two hospitals."

HAVE CONTROL

The report said Dr. Dionne and members of his family have "quasiabsolute" control of the institution now building a 700-

Dollar Value In U.S. Funds Now 92½ Cents

Surprise Statement Made by Fleming

By ALAN DONNELLY

OTTAWA (CP)—The Canadian government, faced by a continued heavy drain on its foreign exchange reserves, has dropped the Canadian dollar's value to 92½ cents in U.S. funds and announced it will be pegged at that rate.

The move—heeded with consequences both favorable and unfavorable for Canadians—was disclosed by Finance Minister Fleming in a surprise statement at 11.15 p.m. EDT Wednesday night.

The new rate, which takes effect today, knocks nearly three cents off the dollar's value and drops it to the largest discount since Canada adopted a "float" exchange rate on Oct. 2, 1950. For the last two months the dollar has been worth around 96½ U.S. cents.

Put another way, it means Canadians will have to pay $1.08 for an American greenback.

The return to a stabilized exchange rate, for the first time in nearly 12 years, puts Canada in line with the policy of the International Monetary Fund. The IMF has been urging the move for some time.

LOWEST IN DECADE

He said Canada's exchange reserves fell by $241,000,000 in April to $1,585,000,000. This is the lowest point in more than a decade.

In the last six months the reserves have fallen by $315,000,000 under the government's policy of "unfloating" U.S. dollars on to the exchange market, to offset strong downward pressures on the Canadian dollar's value.

The new discount rate of 92½ cents in U.S. funds compares with the dollar's premium value of $1.06 in August, 1957—the highest point it reached in the period since it was allowed to float free, subject only to the market forces of supply and demand.

However, starting with the budget of December, 1960, Mr. Fleming has wielded some influence on those market forces through a number of steps. These culminated in his budget announcement last June 20 that the government's exchange stabilization fund would be used to support the dollar to a "significant" discount. The CNR has been at a discount ever since.

Mr. Fleming's new announcement took the government entirely by surprise. There had been no hint of it in his last budget April 10.

Philip Leads Glittering Array Of Royalty in Shipboard 'Twist'

AMSTERDAM (Reuters) — Prince Philip led a glittering array of royalty in dancing the "twist" as a gala shipboard ball went on to the wee hours today.

The ball on the luxury liner Oranje climaxed two days of celebrations of the silver wedding anniversary of Queen Juliana of the Netherlands and her consort, Prince Bernhard.

Prince Philip and Queen Elizabeth will fly back to London today.

An expert writhes, reported Princess Margarethe of Sweden as she danced with Prince Philip to the twist.

"Prince Philip was a good sport about it," said one of the Dutch guests. "He was smiling and gay, but you could see he had all his dancing of the twist abandoned."

Margarethe was really good," reported Cosimo Gilli, the Italian musician whose band played the twist music.

"She was outstanding at the twist when dancing with some young Italian. It was an exhibition; people backed away to give them room and to applaud."

Before the dancing the royal guests feasted on caviar, smoked salmon, turtle soup and roast beef with cherries while the 25,565 - ton liner cruised along the North Sea canal to Ijmuiden.

Motorists along the canal banks waved and saluted, with their horns and housecovers were waved as the liner passed.

Queen Frederika of Belgium danced often with her husband, King Baudouin, but she did not join the "twist" or Dutch alcohol eyewitnesses said.

Cannot Use Telephone to Get Names

OTTAWA (CP)—Any of the 67,000 enumerators preparing the voters list for the June 18 election who use the telephone as a short cut to doing their work will be fired without pay, Chief Electoral Officer Nelson Castonguay said Wednesday.

Mr. Castonguay issued the warning after receiving anonymous phonecalls "and being told by some friends" that enumerators in their districts had telephoned rather than visited electors' homes to gather voters' list information.

"I have instructed the returning officers that where such has been established the enumerators are to be replaced immediately and they are not to be paid for what they have done to date," he said.

Mr. Castonguay said Ottawa area ridings were involved but declined to name them. He said the information was being launched by his office to obtain evidence of the practice.

Some 67,000 enumerators started work across the country April 30 and have six days to enumerate an estimated 9,800,000 voters.

They are paid a basic allowance for the six-day enumeration period, plus 10 cents for each name properly registered.

Plowing Match Committee Has Surplus

Last year's International Plowing Match held north of Belleville was a successful financial and otherwise.

Individual interests financial success was given at the Wednesday evening session of county council when a cheque for over $200 was turned over to Reeve Ross Jr., J. Russell Scott, chairman of last year's county plowing match committee.

The cheque was the final payment of money furnished by the county to the plowing match committee. Last fall $4,000 was voted by county council to the county.

Dr. Scott said today payment covered last cent forwarded by the county.

And in addition to paying all its bills, the plowing match committee has something like $1,200 remaining in the kitty.

Dr. Scott suggested this be used for the 1964 match or future ventures of the county plowing match committee.

Establishment of County Library Asked of Council

The establishment of a county library to provide more and better reading for young people in the rural areas, was called for at yesterday's session of Hastings County council.

Placing the request before the members was Mrs. Jean Mac Donald of Bethesda library survey chairman for the Belleville and District Federation of Women's Institutes. A delegation of county council women is charge for over $200 was turned over to Reeve Ross Jr., J. Russell Scott, chairman of last year's county plowing match committee.

The cheque was the final payment of money furnished by the county to the plowing match committee. Last fall a grant of $4,000 was contributed to the county.

Dr. Scott said today payment covered last cent forwarded by the county.

And in addition to paying all its bills, the plowing match committee has something like $1,200 remaining in the kitty.

Dr. Scott suggested this be used for the 1964 match or future ventures of the county plowing match committee.

Mrs. MacDonald said that in the rural areas there was a tendency to feel that libraries were a frill rather than a necessity.

Hastings county was not alone in this respect but the library survey was general all across the province, according to Mrs. MacDonald.

Mr. Roedde told council that legislation had been in effect for two years allowing the setting up of county libraries.

OPEN AIR MEET APPROVE

Before this could be done, however, it was necessary for the member municipalities of the county to approve of the move. Approval of one-half of the municipalities or cities was necessary before the county could act. The assessment would be on the basis of 50 cents per capita.

The Ontario government was prepared to match per capita contributions by much more than one-half of the latter basis. An establishment grant of $12,000 was available, Mr. Roedde said, to establish the service would be a mobile library.

So far, Mr. Rhoedde said, no county libraries have been established, although one county had made a record as being in favor. There was no further discussion on the proposal by council following the presentation.

Senior Citizens Enjoy Meeting In Clubroom

The regular monthly meeting of the Belleville and District Senior Citizens Club was held last evening in the club rooms on Pinnacle St., with a large number present.

The president, Charles L. Hyde, opened the meeting with The Queen, followed by a welcome to all who felt they would be celebrating a birthday during the month to be brought. Mrs. A. Shirley presided at the piano.

Mrs. Harry Taylor, reporting for the sick and visiting committee, said quite a number were ill and several confined to hospital.

FINANCIAL REPORT

The treasurer's report indicated a healthy financial condition.

The program for the evening, arranged by the chairlady, Mrs. F. Akey, consisted of community singing by all present, Mrs. Young and genial Mr. Fred McGillin. Mrs. Young was also winner of the door prize draw.

The refreshment committee served the usual delicious refreshments and following a brief singing period the meeting adjourned.

Farmers Enter Seeding Season Shy of Rain

OTTAWA (CP)—Wide areas of Prairie farm lands are entering the seeding season with "critically low" supplies of soil moisture reserves, the bureau of statistics reported Wednesday.

Some large increases in plowdowns and destruction on the Prairies also are forecast in the bureau's first field telegraphed report on crop conditions based on reports from field correspondents received up to last day night.

The report said, however, that with some exceptions surface moisture in the West is adequate for germination of seed crops and field work should be well general in most areas this week. Little or no seeding has been done yet apart from some southern districts of Alberta and Saskatchewan.

Southern Ontario, most winter wheat is reported to have suffered about 85- to 90-per-cent winter kill in fields. In southwestern and central counties, the progress has been made in spring seeding but in eastern counties only limited field work has been done.

Too Many Deer In Haldimand Council Told

Resident of Haldimand county in Western Ontario have a much different problem to contend with than the deer problem in this part of Ontario.

The trouble is that area is that there are too many deer—so many in fact that they are making a nuisance of themselves and residents want the department of lands and forests to do something about it.

In a resolution from Haldimand county council today at Hastings county council, it was noted that herds of deer numbering up to 200 animals are seen in that area. The deer are the cause of highway accidents and are spreading diseases among cattle.

It was stated in the resolution whether hunting is permitted in the area.

"The people in Haldimand county have a different problem than we have," commented county Reeve Allen Bronson of Sarnia.

"We certainly don't have the problem of too many deer in Hastings."

Mr. Bronson went on to say that deer were depleting the deer population in North Hastings.

"And rifles," commented Reeve Frank Power.

The action of the Haldimand county resolution was taken and it was ordered filed.

The opening session of council was taken up mostly with discussion of the report of committees. Final discussion and approval of the year's mill rate was deferred until the afternoon session.

Clerk Thanked For Directory Of Members

With up to a third of the over 30 members of Hastings county council being changed following the June election, many instances it has been a case of "who's who" until the members get acquainted.

But that has been changed by the current issue of Hastings county council.

On the desks of each member when the session opened this week were council directories, giving the names of all members, the municipality they represent, along with their addresses and phone numbers.

The directory also includes the names of all county council committees members as well as county administration and other officials.

Reeve William Regan of Dolores Village yesterday moved a vote of thanks to Clerk Treasurer Carl Bateman for the thoughtful gesture and Warden Harold Varty added his personal vote of thanks.

Ready to Share A-Arms With European Union

ATHENS (AP)—The United States was reported today to be willing to share control of its nuclear weapons with Western Europe with a politically-strong European union that includes Britain.

The U.S. position was described as a step toward giving the 6-nation Common Market a shared discussion of giving the North Atlantic Treaty Organ this afternoon to study nuclear strike forces.

Canada's foreign secretary disclosed the new U.S. ideas as foreign and defence ministers of the 15 nations gathered for speech to open NATO's annual spring meeting. The defence ministers including Douglas Harkness of Canada were to discuss plans including How-ard Green of Canada Friday upon a thorough review of the allied defence position.

Must Hold Plebiscite Before Takeover

KINGSTON (CP) — City council must take over the privately owned bus service July 1 if it wants to run it, he said.

So the public utilities commission will operate the bus service, but the Ontario Municipal Board will not allow this until a plebiscite is held.

The Kingston City Coach Co. announced recently terminal facilities. When its present contract with the city expires July 1 the city will run the buses but will have to set up maintenance facilities and operate the service.

Council has voted unanimously to turn the service over to the public utilities commission, which agreed to operate it.

Science at Work

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Topics This Week: Some facts about the weather, late space and a look at the importance of sunshine on earth.

WINDS OF SPACE

Just how large are the clouds of cosmic gas travelling through space? Is there much cosmic radiation shoots through the reaches of our galaxy? Is there any way?

Satellites gave astronomers the first practical way to probe these mysteries, and at a recent meeting of the American Physical Society some of the results were summarized.

Explorer XI, for instance, carried a telescope capable of seeing high energy gamma rays, the powerful particle of rays that travel in straight lines and are not affected by magnetic fields.

The cosmic gases are clouds of the basic kind of hydrogen atoms. When cosmic rays hit these a tell-tell bursts, gamma rays are produced.

By measuring the gamma rays, physicists can learn how many hydrogen hearts or nuclei and how many electrons there are—and perhaps, eventually, where these winds in space come from. Current studies indicate there may be many more cosmic rays and more gases than estimated earlier.

LAND OUR SHADOW

The earth apparently casts a shadow in space. It isn't a shadow of light and dark, but only an area sheltered by earth and its magnetic field from the winds of charged bits of sun dust through our galaxy.

Satellites, ranging far out into space, have found that this sort of sheltered area or shadow exists, but its exact limits are not known.

PLACE IN THE SUN

The big benefit of photosynthesis, the process by which plants combine the energy of the sun with chemicals from the earth to make sugar, matter, life energy and growth.

Scientists are highly interested in the process, especially how one form of energy—the electromagnetic energy from the sun—changes into chemical energy and food.

Some of this field was named Dr. Melvin Calvin of the University of California the Nobel Prize in chemistry last year. Dr. Calvin used radioactive carbon to find the pathways from carbon dioxide to sugar in the process of photosynthesis.

The evolution of chemicals into living cells, Calvin believes, has followed a predictable and inevitable pattern.

Hobbies Apparently Keep Pace With the Rocket Age

Ought to Keep Busy Says James Stewart

NEW YORK - (AP)—"I feel I'm a little lazy," admits James Stewart, "but I think a man ought to keep busy."

Jimmy still wears the shy, deceptively easy-going air of the boy next door that has been his acting trademark for a generation.

His record shows he has kept pretty busy. In addition to a series of Broadway plays, he has been in some 76 films, won an Oscar and been nominated for an Academy Award three other times.

Outside his profession, he has been equally active. He does everything from flying bombers in warfare to shooting tigers in India.

Currently he is a trustee of Princeton University, a member of the board of the Air Force Association, a brigadier general in the U.S. Air Force reserve, a trustee of the Boys' Club executive and participates in a number of community affairs.

HAS'T BORRING

He also enjoys half a dozen hobbies, ranging from building fishing and photography to flying his own airplane.

Outside his chunk of luncheon roast beef, Stewart discussed his life with Dorothy Manners in a recent interview for Hobbies apparently keep pace with the rocket age.

Bill, 12, and Matt, 11, spent their leisure hours comparing the advantages of using liquid fuel (benzine and alcohol) and solid fuel (gunpowder and alcohol).

They had intended to use one or the other of the fuels to propel a rocket designed by Matt. He had designed the rocket casing of tin cans and figured on fitting it with a radio receiver and a parachute.

The idea of launching the projectile was vetoed, however, when the boys approached their father, Dr. C. E. Cowan, chairman of the physics department at the University of Waterloo.

Some of the fuels were too dangerous and sent the lads back to their chemistry laboratory for further experiments.

Bill, using an old Grade 12 text book, began testing the effects of various chemicals on the growth rate of snails. Matt turned his attention to making suits. He built himself a scuba outfit.

BUILT WIND TUNNEL

This sort of hobby isn't unusual in Kitchener-Waterloo, although the boys' interests are perhaps more diversified than most

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP)—Spurred by announcement that the Canadian dollar has been fixed at 92.5 cents in terms of its U.S. counterpart, the stock market today shot ahead to its best single rise this year.

The industrial index jumped more than six points; all other sections caught the enthusiasm. Volume, however, dipped slightly from the total at the same time Wednesday.

Papers showed most strength, paced by Asbestos which climbed as much as 2% to 49¼ — its highest this year—before easing off to 49. Fraser Companies, Great Lakes Paper, Consolidated and Price Brothers all took gains ranging to 1½.

Liquors were also strong with down 2¼. Ogilvie Flour was Distillers Seagrams registering the smartest jump, 1¾, Canadian International 1⅝. Pipe Line rose 1¼, Moore Corporation ⅞ and Atlas Steel ⅝.

On the exchange index, industrials climbed 1.37 to 191.85. Golds 7.80 at 88.97, base metals 2.68 at 209.17 and western oils 1.35 at 111.97. The 11 a.m. volume was 640,000 shares compared with 829,000 at the same time Wednesday.

Base metals shared the general strength. Gains of one point went to Hudson Bay Mining, International Nickel and Noranda while Consolidated Mining and Smelting rose ¼. Junior issues were less active than usual

In golds, Dome rose ⅝, Hollinger ⅛ and Kerr Addison 25 cents to 26.65.

Home B and Hudson's Bay both added ¼ among western oils.

The market wavered between gains and losses Wednesday before pulling slightly ahead.

Steels were the major strengthening factor in the main list, as Atlas, Algoma and Dominion Company of Canada all rose in ¼ to ⅝ range.

Russell Industries dropped 3 to 14 and Levy Industries rose ½ following disclosure that a Levy bid for 419,000 Russell shares at $20 each had proved successful.

Losers included Falconbridge, down ⅜, Ochawa Wholesale A, down 1¾ and Moore Corporation ⅞ to 46, down 1.

On index, industrials rose .86 to 210.59, golds .01 to 87.17 and western oils .47 to 110.72. Base metals slipped .43 to 206.48.

Base metals were weakened by a drop of 1¾ to Hudson Bay Mining. Ventures dropped ⅝, Noranda ½ and International Nickel ½, while Denison Mines, a speculative issue, was supposed to operate with profit, opened one point to permit Dr. Dionne to withdraw all the possible advantage.

BEFORE GRANTS PAID:

The advantages would include various types of grants from the federal and provincial governments, but "happily" the inquiry would be held before government grants had been paid.

There was nothing wrong with Dr. Dionne's operating when the hospital was privately-owned, but as a public corporation "with the principal aim of obtaining grants" it was another matter.

Judge Tellier said he supported the recommendations of the Jean-Talon inquiry that a provincial board be established to oversee administration of hospitals. The government has indicated one will be instituted this session.

Pilot Lands Plane Safely

TRENTON — It was learned today that on Tuesday night the pilot of a Yukon aircraft, on a routine flight, had taken emergency measures when bringing the large plane in for a landing at RCAF Station, Trenton, after one of the many fire warning lights aboard the aircraft had flashed on.

The pilot took the aircraft up to a high altitude and made a shallow dive for the field. He landed safely and the "warning" turned out to be a malfunction in the electrical wiring system.

NO RECEIPT LEFT

On Wednesday, Bill VanTassel, deputy returning officer for South Hastings, said that there seemed to be a fairly large amount of confusion in the Middleton Park area, and of Trenton, about the system being used to enumerate voters, for the forthcoming provincial election.

Mr. VanTassel said that in urban areas, (towns), two enumerators call at each home to list voters and leave a "receipt".

In rural areas, and Middleton Park is considered a rural area, one enumerator calls, and does not leave a receipt.

According to reports, residents of Northumberland County have also queried the system used to enumerate rural voters.

ASKED TO COMMENT

The emphasis was on the United Nations at this week's meeting of the Quinte Toastmasters Club.

Members were asked to comment on the U.N. assembly or give pertinent facts about the UN nation assigned to them for the evening.

Most of the speakers felt that nothing but good could come of a greater interest on the part of the people of the "West" to understand the people of the "Iron Curtain" countries.

bed hospital in north end Montreal.

He also suggested that the attorney general's department look into a $2,500,000 bond issue by the hospital in June, 1960, which was "surely tainted with irregularities."

The conduct of brokers and accountants involved should be investigated, he declared.

Since the public hospital had been incorporated as a non-profit body, said the report, Dr. Dionne "should not have been able to realize gains he made."

The hospital was incorporated as a public body in January, 1957, but, said the report, was "desperately for more than three years even though financial real estate transactions" were made directly with this hospital."

"They," demanded the report, "did this public hospital, which was supposed to operate without profit, operate at cost to permit Dr. Dionne to withdraw all the possible advantages?"

HANDS ACROSS THE SEA — At yesterday's meeting of the Belleville Presbytery of the United Church at Grace Church, Trenton, Robert Cuthbert of Jamaica, who is taking a post graduate course in theology at Queen's University, found a great deal of interest to discuss with Rev. Ewen Siwale of Rhodesia, right.

Rev. Alexander McDowell New Presbytery Chairman

TRENTON—On Wednesday, close to 100 ministers and lay representatives gathered at Grace United Church in Trenton for the 96th annual meeting of the Belleville Presbytery of the United Church of Canada.

The presbytery is comprised of 53 charges in the counties of Hastings, Prince Edward, Addington and Prince Edward.

Elected for the 1962-63 session were Rev. Alexander McDowell of Eastminster United Church in Belleville, as chairman, to succeed Rev. C. W. Coleman and Rev. Oscar Wagar also of Belleville, as clerk and secretary. Re-elected to the post of treasurer, which he has held since 1925 was Harold C. Martin of Stirling. Rev. W. G. Fletcher of Stirling was re-elected recording secretary of the body.

Guest speaker was Rev. Roy E. Webster, associate secretary of the United Church Board of World Missions. Mr. Webster urged his listeners to consider United Church missionaries as men and women who are making their lives a living sacrifice for their faith," and not to think about the dollars and cents angle of the spreading of Christianity.

Rev. Ewen Siwale, the moderator of the Northern Presbytery of the United Church of Central Africa in Rhodesia, spoke briefly to the assembly, telling of the needs of his country. He said that missionaries are required in Africa as "the light of the world," in a country full of racial prejudice and political tension.

Unanimously carried by the assembly was a resolution that in the coming year, services conducted by United Church ministers, earth be cast upon the casket, rather than flowers at any other substance. The popular custom of throwing flowers into the grave was spoken of by one minister as "a pagan custom." The general feeling was that United Church ministers should not deviate from forms of service, to any great extent.

Pipe Still Seen Remedy for Rats But This Time It Is for Ditch

TRENTON :—
"Great rats, small rats, lean rats, brawny rats,
Brown rats, black rats, grey rats, tawny rats —
When you put it that way, it's amusing. But it isn't very amusing to the people living in some sections of the town.

With the advent of spring, comes the complaints about the rats from irate citizens.

And who gets to hear the complaints? As always, the members of the Trenton Board of Health.

At yesterday's board meeting, board chairman H. S. Prase and members Miss Marjorie Gothard, Del Topping and Dr. E. W. Dow considered reports that rats were rampant in the vicinity of the Broken Front Road, Bay Street and Campbell Street. Miss Gothard upheld the honor of her street insisting that the rats on Marmora Street were every bit as numerous as they are in any from other sections of the town.

Where are the rats coming from? Are they sewer rats? Or do they come in from the country? Bay and Campbell Street residents feel that they come from the sanitary landfill area. But how can this be so, when an extermination is being done to do away with rats here?

"It's driving them off onto private property," lamented one board member.

SUGGEST FILLING DITCH

Broken Road residents feel that if a ditch in the area were filled in the rats might go away. But the ditch runs across private property. It's six feet across and, in places, four feet deep. Chairman Prase wondered if the town was interested in piping the ditch. He said that there were an "umpteen" children in the area and that some of them might drown in the ditch."

Asked if the Trenton public utilities might be interested in extending a pipe (which will be run along the site of a hydro transformer installation in that area) to eliminate water from the ditch, town engineer Aldersey hazarded a guess that the utilities commission "wasn't interested in children."

"It should be," said Mr. Topping, "they're future hydro users."

"Present hydro users," amended Dr. Dow.

In all events, the possibility of piping the ditch will be explored.

Mr. Prase reported that one Broken Front Road resident had told him that he had been almost bitten by a rat which jumped out of his garbage can.

It was felt that rats in the sanitary landfill area are encouraged by such things as an out-of-town poultry farm dumping truck loads of rotten eggs and dead chickens in the disposal area. The farm has no permission to use the Trenton dump.

An effort will be made to have garbage covered with earth soon after it is placed in landfill area. Beyond that, and advising the ratepayer that the rats are getting ahead of him, there just isn't very much the board can do about the rat situation.

Mr. Pase told the board members that he had found a complaint about pigeons creating a nuisance in one area of town to be unfounded. He said that he had visited the pigeon fancier and that everything seemed to be in order. Trenton does not have a by-law covering pigeons, anyhow.

BY-LAW PROBLEM

Perhaps Bill will make an enquiry at provincial government level, as to the present status of the air pollution by-law.

Some time ago, through the efforts of the board, the town council at the day passed the air pollution by-law, making it an offence to burn leaves or rubbish within certain corporation's boundaries.

This year, (in October), council rescinded the clause of the by-law dealing with the burning of leaves, the cost of removing leaves from town streets entered into council's thinking on the subject.

Now, the board questions the right of council to upset the terms of a by-law, approved by a provincial government agency.

Miss Gothard said that Trenton throws away enough to do without being called out to fight fires caused by the burning of dead leaves and grass.

The board will recommend to town that it proceed with the installation of a trunk sewer on Dufferin Ave., as waste matter from homes in the area and also from a canning factory, pours into the bay in a raw state creating an unhealthy situation.

Something will be done soon, about a newspaper box, located at the corner of Dundas St. E. and Sidney Street. Paper boys collect their evening's papers there and proceed to toss wrapping paper around the lawns and streets. The newspaper companies may be asked to leave their papers in another box.

Boys Sustain Minor Injuries In Accidents

TRENTON — Two-five-year-old Trenton boys sustained minor injuries when they were involved in separate accidents in Trenton yesterday.

Kenneth Mitchenson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Mitchenson, 81 Louis St., received a skinned left knee when he was knocked to the ground by a car driven by Simon Koetsier of R. R. 2, Brighton. Police say that the child ran from behind a stopped car into the path of the Koets car. The accident occurred on West Street, around 1 p.m.

Steven John Murdock, the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Murdock, 294 King St. was treated at Trenton Memorial Hospital for a cut on his forehead after he had run his tricycle into a car driven by Mrs. Gordon Marks of 73 Henry St., Trenton, shortly after 4 p.m. The accident occurred at the corner of McLellan Ave. and Henry Street.

A collision between cars driven by Mrs. Rita Goldberg of 17 Spring St. and Constance Gendreau of 203 King St., resulted in damage estimated at $175. Police say that Mrs. Goldberg had stopped for a passenger out on King Street and was struck from behind by the car being driven by Mrs. Goldberg.

In Soviet Style

When Russian cosmonaut Ghermann Titov and his pretty wife met U.S. Secretary-General U Thant at UN headquarters in New York City on Monday, they were applauded by several hundred spectators. "Titov, in Soviet style, applauded in return," reports the Associated Press.

We recall our surprise on first seeing this Russian custom. If memory serves us aright, it was on a television show during Khrushchev's visit to the U.S. There was Mr. K. apparently applauding himself vigorously. We remember feeling a little embarrassed for him and wondering why some old smoothie from the Russian embassy had not explained to the poor country boy that some things are just not done. Since that time, of course, it has become painfully apparent that Mr. K is no country bumpkin, despite physical appearances, and that any slips of etiquette he may make are deliberate and not the result of ignorance. Far from not knowing what he was doing when he applauded, Mr. K was showing a sturdy preference for a Russian custom over the custom of his hosts.

And, come right down to it, there is much to be said for the Soviet style. Here is a man being applauded. People are letting him they like him personally, or that they admire his achievements or, perhaps (polite clapping) that they merely recognize the importance of the position he holds. What more natural than he return the compliment—telling friendly crowds that he likes them, telling those who are paying tribute to his achievements that he welcomes their approval, telling the polite that he, too, is prepared to be civil?

And yet, perhaps because it is so strange to us, applauding does not seem to be quite the right answer. The difficulty is to discover a better. The out-stretched arms gesture favored by President Kennedy—the hands clasping the wrist of the other arm above his head, is no acceptable substitute. Does it not stem from the prize ring, where some bumptious boxer, his hand raised by an official in the traditional signal of victory, first thought of doubting the impact by shielding his other hand himself? Yes, it has all the overtones of self-congratulations which go with the applauder applauding in turn, without in any way lending itself to interpretation as a reciprocative tribute to the crowd. The Queen's bow and wave of the hand, graceful as it undoubtedly is, is a queenly gesture does not fit everyone. With some, instead of being gracious, it would appear stiff and formal—stuck-up to be precise. This can be avoided by waving the whole out-stretched arm. Properly done, this is probably the best gesture of all—but it has the disadvantage of repeated the arm tires and stiffens into something unhappily reminiscent of the Nazi salute.

Familiarity may eventually erase the objections we instinctively feel to the Soviet style of returning handclap for handclap—and if it does this style may eventually flourish here, too, unless somebody can devise a better gesture.

A Question of Principle

Two members of the track team at New Carlisle, Indiana, High School ripped part of the surface off a new blacktopped county road, hauled the material to their school and built a hardtop runway for the pole vaulting pits. The theft discovered, County Commissioner John Hanley said there would be no criminal charges and the school could keep the blacktop material. But Principal Harry Stoneburner ordered the boys to remove the material and dropped them from the track squad.

Regarding the boys' banishment from the team, there can hardly be two opinions. The punishment was deserved. There will almost certainly be differences of, opinion, though, about the decision to have the pole vault runway ripped up. This material would not likely still be suitable for use on the track. To rip it up will thus be to waste it. Why rob the remaining members of the track team of the benefits of using it? Is this not foolishness? We think not. Principal Stoneburner's staunch refusal to permit any students to derive benefit from a theft ought to be an excellent lesson in ethics for all his students. County Commissioner Hanley's decision was the easy and popular one; Principal Stoneburner's the difficult, unpopular and correct one.

If the plays and the novels of today deal with littler people and less mighty emotions it is not because we have become interested in commonplace souls and their unglamorous adventures but because we have come, willy-nilly, to see the soul of man as commonplace and its emotions as mean.—Joseph Wood Krutch.

'Sell' Two Big Parties Like Breakfast Foods

BY RICHARD JACKSON
(From The Ontario Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau)

OTTAWA — More than ever before, Canada's two big political parties are going to be "sold" in this election like so much packaged breakfast food, soap or detergent.

And the labels on the packages read "John Diefenbaker" and "Mike Pearson".

It's the responsibility of the leader rather than the policy of the party that is being "pushed" by the political hucksters in charge of election "sales".

They are both famous advertising men are these political salesmen, James J. Moore, formerly of the MacLaren agency, and Allister Grosart, ex-vice-president of Meighen.

This is the third time around for Al (Grassroots) Grosart as National Director and Organizer-in-Chief. Abd having been engaged in political advertising ever since Dave Croll — Diefenbaker race for the Conservative leadership in 1942, he is regarded, even by the Liberals as the old master.

In the 1958 landslide contest 14 years ago, Grosart was mastermind ing Dev&il campaign, and called the organizational and publicity shots in his two unsuccessful Toronto races against "Uncle Louie" St. Laurent and the then all-powerful Liberal machine.

THE SWEET SMELL:

When Drew retired for reasons of health, Grosart stage-managed the Diefenbaker drive for the leadership, planned the organizational startegy for the two national election campaigns of successes which rapidly followed.

To the Liberals this sweet smell of Conservative success has been so overpowering that they hired the same advertising publicists to try matching Grosart.

In publicizing the leadership for the political market, both hucksters emphasize personality are selling character.

With Diefenbaker the keynote line is "Leadership", and natural follow-up to the highly successful "Follow John" of the '58 election.

With Pearson, the key phrase is "Mike means Peace".

Moore is selling the Liberal Leader as a man of quiet but deep wisdom.

Their man Mike, say the Liberal hucksters, is comfortable — a political leader easy to live with. He is certainly unexciting, but for that very reason, easy on the nerves.

His international know-how, his fame as a man of peace, his relaxed and easy charm, are calculated, so say the Liberal salesmen, to give people that comfortable feeling of knowing here is a man able to deal in terms of peace and safety the national security on a global scale.

Instead, he's stimulating, energizing, promising of certain future action — a man of many interesting qualities, none of which is boring.

In Mike Pearson, the Liberals will be presenting this new 1962 model of the political "father image" of comfort and security.

In John Diefenbaker, the Conservatives will offer their pitch on dynamism.

Strictly Personal

There Is No Real Equality Of the Sexes

By SIDNEY J. HARRIS

Purely Personal Prejudices:

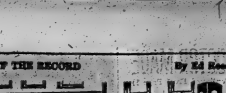
Every nation wants peace, and every nation wants its own way; but while nations are ready to risk a great deal to get their own way, they are willing to risk very little to obtain peace.

Whenever I meet a man who seems guarded, I feel that his spirit is not at one with itself; for the guarding instinct does not so much imply suspicion toward others as it does lack of confidence in one's own strength.

There is something ugly and freakish-looking about little boys who are dressed beyond their years, in shrunken versions of men's hats, pants, ties and jackets; as Bertie Carvel custom of keeping small boys in knee-socks and short pants is much more sensible and attractive than ours.

The psychological appeal of fanatical, extremist movements at all times was most keenly and accurately described by Eric Hoffer, in his book, "The True Believer," when he remarked: "Passionate hatred can give meaning and purpose to an empty life."

No adage is more wholly wrong than that "necessity is the mother of invention" — for most important history it has always been leisure and liberty that were the parents of invention, not necessity.



Real "equality of the sexes" is impossible while it is to remains a fact that any man, whatever his handicaps, can find a woman who will marry him, while numerous women cannot find even a single matrimonial law of supply and demand will always ensure a buyers' market for the male favor.

What one sees in a mirror is not one's face, as visible to others, but a version profoundly distorted by one's own feelings; as evidence, if you were to meet yourself suddenly in a moving elevator today, you would not have the slightest shock of recognition.

Of all parental virtues, patience is the most important for the child's development: to be impatient with a child is only to prolong the period of frustration and his resistance — for many children are intelligent parents fail to realize what every farm animal instinctively knows about breaking.

It is the unfailing mark of mediocrity to condemn what it beyond it; a certain type of mind must always call "fraudulent" what it finds inexplicable, unfathomable, and "artificial" what it finds unnatural to itself.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS.

YOUR "GUARDIAN SPIRIT"

In the middle of the first century a boy was appointed in the Roman world. His name we now know as Epictetus. In addition to being a slave, he was lame and very poor.

But somehow, amongst all over the world, are thousands of books containing the simple, golden sayings of this great Greek philosopher. The influence of his life seems to have no end.

Said Epictetus: "God hath placed by the side of each a man's own Guardian Spirit, who is charged by him over him as a Guardian who sleeps not nor is deceived. For to what purpose do you commit yourself to a keeper who has committed much of his trust to you have about the doors and made a business with him, remember never to say that you are alone.

What with the world so full of elements that are forever beating and battering at our faith and hope, would we do without this Guardian Spirit?

We are often amazed at the superhuman courage and fortitude of certain people who make through the blackest and most disastrous experiences of pain or sorrow. But it is not to be wondered at when you come to realize the source of these rare spirits who look higher than their mortal frame and who somehow find the great God teaching in their hearts with all the rest of the world outside.

Nothing can defeat the Guardian Spirit in a man. It is well to recognize this fact early in the dealing with a brave man. The weak and the fragile, no matter how well they deceive by their outward show, are sure to rout. They do not always look weak and fragile, but somehow that Guardian Spirit, which is so evident in noble lives, shrouds its keeper like a shield.

There is a silent something in us all from the minute we feel God in our hearts. And it is this that makes us worthy and willing to serve — even at the humblest task assigned to us.

Heart, Liver, Kidney Diseases Related to Nose Bleeds

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have periodic cramps every month, and have ever since I can remember. I am 35 and married.

I am enclosing an article I read in a magazine (about cutting the presacral nerve near the uterus). Is this article true?

My doctor said if I have children the cramps will stop. My husband and I would like children but have not had any in five years. There is nothing wrong with either of us; why can't we have children? — Mrs. G.L.

The article is true, but cutting a nerve should be the last resort. I always advise the least cutting necessary — and the newer diuretics, to rid the system of excess fluid during the period, given marked relief. Simple pain-killers, tranquilizers, anti-spasmodics also have succeeded in many cases. (But patients should be warned about the obvious reason: The risk of addiction.)

It is likewise true that many a young woman, plagued by cramps, has found them to disappear after becoming pregnant. Then there are quite a few I know, remained free of cramps, and while there is no way of predicting in advance which will be best, it is not too difficult to have your doctor try different ones in rotation.

As to your failure to have children, it is encouraging to date after five years a fertility problem does, indeed, exist. It isn't by any means permanently a matter of general health, although a metabolism check is advisable for both of you.

Going beyond that, it is my considered advice to start with husband, since a sperm count is an uncomplicated procedure far easier than checking the various gynecological aspects of the wife.

In one-third or more of infertility cases the sperm count shows the husband to be at fault. Too many husbands are reluctant to meander this far front to their virility," but the report (of which a copy goes to the Queen and when raised will be transferred to other women.

Dear Dr. Molner: Last year I had surgery — perforated diverticulum. And part of my bowel and appendix removed. In the last few months I have noticed part of the stool are very dark, almost black at times. At other times, everything seems normal. It can't seem to pin it down to any certain foods. — Mrs. V.M.

These dark stools should be checked for blood — they are a usual sign of bleeding higher up. A diverticulum can be a cause of such bleeding.

Dear Dr. Molner: Over a long period, my 12-year-old son has been troubled with frequent nose bleeds. Do diseases of the heart, liver or kidneys have anything to do with this condition? Aside from his nose he seems to be in good health. — Mrs. C.H.

These diseases can be related to nose bleed, but there would be other signs. If the boy's general health is good, it would be more reasonable to suspect that some tiny artery is located near the surface membrane of the nose and is irritated easily by blowing, picking, a slight bump, etc. The small, bleeding vessels of the nose usually can be easily eliminated by simple cauterization.

Interrobang Advocated

Wall Street Journal

Reports are circulating of a movement to add a new punctuation mark to those now available to writers of English. As visualized by its creator, Martin Speckter of New York, the new mark would resemble a cross between an exclamation point and a question mark and would be called an interrobang.

In Mr. Speckter's view an awful lot of rhetorical questions which now end with a conventional question mark should properly end in punctuation them that's a little more emphatic than "?" but is less emphatic than "!" or "?!".

For example the "?" at the end of "Who cares?" does not always indicate just the tone of voice a writer wants to convey. The interrobang, therefore, which for mechanical reasons would be here displayed would indicate more accurately the degree of pleasure, curiosity and maybe surprise — all in one — the writer intended. "How do you do?" to deliver. An interrobang would be just right if said to punctuate a rhetorical accusation, such as, "Who forgot to wind the car?" Here is a plain question mark, just isn't adequate.

But what the printed language needs even more than the interrobang is some sort of exclamatory device indicating the oral sound made when, for instance, a man has finally worked his way to the punchline of a long, involved story. Because up to now, there just isn't a really acceptable printed symbol for such an emotion-charged moment.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

"When a good time comes along I've advised many of my friends and acquaintance, "lay in a supply of it. For as soon as it is recognized as a good thing, the experts move in. They point out the hazards of it, what a boon he has conferred on the public. Eventually it is him that this good thing should be made available to a few large companies. Then they move in to capitalize the venture on most grievous terms. Before you thing you know, the good thing is just junk. I hate to look back over my merchandising career and remember all the fine things that were ruined or killed by the experts. For in business the commonest sense of expert is the expert at the fast buck."

"They wait just long enough for a good thing to build up a following," advised Clark generally. Then they move in. There is a name for this type of business operation, but I have forgotten what it is. The name I call it can't be printed in a family newspaper."

So I laid in a supply of what he was offering me, enough to last three years.

East Huntingdon Request For Withdrawal From School Area Is Filed

The controversial Centre Hastings High School Area issue which last February saw Tweed and Hungerford being given permission to withdraw from the area was again the topic of discussion at yesterday's session of Hastings county council.

The issue under discussion yesterday, however, was an aftermath of the main issue, which sees East Huntingdon township ratepayers also wishing to withdraw from the Centre Hastings area so their children may continue to attend classes at the Tweed high school.

But no action was taken by County council on the East Huntingdon ratepayers' request — the reason being that there was no covering resolution from the Huntingdon township council.

Huntingdon Reeve Elmer Wilson said the majority of his council were not in favor of East Huntingdon ratepayers withdrawing from the Centre Hastings area.

Mr. L. Jones, spokesman for the East Huntingdon ratepayers, told council the main reason for the request by withdraw was because of their geographical location.

MORE CONVENIENT

Because of this he said it was much more convenient for high school students from his area to continue classes at Tweed instead of being transferred to Madoc as had been voted by the Centre Hastings board.

He claimed that in a democracy no group of people had the right to impose this inconvenience on them.

"We should be allowed to withdraw," he said. "If it was right for Tweed and Hungerford to withdraw, it is also right for us."

Mr. Jones said it had not been their understanding that the resolution from Huntingdon council would be necessary before county council could act.

But Mr. Jones was persistent and told his reeve that they would only accept his word if they had the permission requested, "even if it meant a change of council."

Kel Kincaid, chairman of the Centre Hastings High School Area, said his board would oppose the withdrawal of East Huntingdon ratepayers, claiming that this could mean a loss of up to $15,000 in grants.

NO NEED TO WITHDRAW

Many of the county councillors felt there was no need for East Huntingdon to withdraw from the area to allow students to continue attending classes at Tweed.

Such difficulties could be solved, satisfactorily, if all were explained, and in six months time "everyone would be happy."

Reeve Haright Hamilton of Sidney, said arrangements had been made for certain students in his township to continue classes at Trenton when Sidney joined the Bay of Quinte High School area and he felt the same thing could be done in the case of East Huntingdon.

But Mr. Jones replied they had been told that Tweed and Hungerford did not want Huntingdon students at the Tweed high unless they were part of the area.

Lincoln Elliott, member of the Centre Hastings board, said it was his understanding that Tweed-Hungerford wanted something more substantial than the prospect of Huntingdon students attending at Tweed one year and not the next.

WOULD AFFECT SCHOOL

Also in the minds of councillors was the question of the withdrawal of East Huntingdon, if granted, would affect the proposed new technical school addition at Madoc.

Councillors were told by Mr. Jones that his ratepayers were prepared to guarantee the same pupil attendance support to the Madoc technical school as had been guaranteed to Tweed and Hungerford.

He quoted a Department of Education official as saying that with the pupil attendance guarantee the withdrawal of East Huntingdon would make no difference to the Madoc school.

And councillors also wanted to know where withdrawal requests were going to end. "Will we be going to next?" asked Deputy Reeve Allen Bronson of Bancroft.

SITUATION EXPLAINED

This was explained by Mrs. A. E. Bowerman of Tweed, who said that both East Huntingdon and Elzevir had been approached by the reeve of their going along with the withdrawal request but these ratepayers had declined to take a walk and see situation.

"They felt that if Tweed and Hungerford were allowed to withdraw, they could get out any time as a matter of course," Mrs. Allen said.

Reeve Earl Sager of Madoc township, said he was willing to receive and file the East Huntingdon request and it was seconded by Tweed Reeve Douglas Spencer.

In the absence of a formal resolution from Huntingdon township it is the only thing we can do," he said.

Appeal Made For Foam Bank In County

Establishment of a foam bank in the county to assist in the fighting of gasoline and other fires, was urged at county council yesterday by Deputy Reeve Gerald Wood of Belleville, co-ordinator for the local mutual aid association.

He told council that with the number of big carriers using the highways it was essential that there be foam banks for the protection of the local area.

"It could happen anywhere," he said.

Chief Vance suggested a foam bank of about 300 gallons capacity would be sufficient to fight a gasoline fire of up to 30,000 gallons.

Under the mutual aid system the nearest fire department would be called to fight a gasoline or other such fire.

Mr. Thompson of Frankford Reeve Frank Rabel the matter was sent on to be discussed in ways and means.

Also during the session county council will discuss a by-law to include the county of Hastings in the Emergency Measures Organization being set up in the Quinte area.

The local organization would take in Belleville Trenton and Picton and the counties of Prince Edward, and Hastings.

BUILDING RECORD — Wall tablet giving the building record of the new Hastingns County administration building was officially unveiled yesterday. Seen reading the tablet are: County Judge J. C. Anderson, Warden Harold Varty, Mayor James MacDonald of Trenton, Mayor A. M. Haig, Madoc township Reeve Earl Sager, and Bancroft Reeve Jack Brown, chairman of the building committee.

DOLLAR VALUE

improve earnings from exports and of world prices, such as the big grain and paper exports and probably wheat.

A resulting increase in Canadian prices of imports will have a double-barrelled effect. It will put Canadian industry in a better competitive position compared with some imports, but will boost the consumer cost of some items which Canada must import such as tropical fruits.

Vacation trips by Canadians in the U.S. and abroad will be costlier, and Canadian travel by American tourists will be cheaper since their dollars will go farther.

It also will add to the costs of provincial and municipal governments who have borrowed through bond issues in New York and will have to pay interest and principal in costlier U.S. dollars.

ADDS ELECTION ISSUE

The move undoubtedly will add a big new issue to the election campaign.

Walter Gordon, Liberal economics spokesman and head of the party's campaign committee, termed the situation "a financial crisis" which was bound to come "in view of the way our financial and economic affairs have been mismanaged."

Liberal Leader Lester B. Pearson said in Calgary Mr. Fleming has done something he once said he'd never do."

Social Credit Leader Robert N. Thompson called the move "a desperate measure to perk up a limping economy" and said it will increase living costs to the last penny.

Mr. Fleming, however, said it is expected that the step "will be to the great advantage to the Canadian economy."

He said the new exchange rate had been adopted with the concurrence of the International Monetary Fund.

IMF WELCOMES MOVE

The IMF executive board hurriedly convened a 30 - minute meeting in Washington at 6 p.m. Wednesday night and later issued a statement, timed to coincide with Mr. Fleming's announcement, saying Canada's return to a fixed exchange rate was "promptly welcomed" by the fund.

Under the IMF rules, the government's exchange fund will have to intervene in the market to ensure that the exchange rate doesn't move more than one per cent on either side of the 92½ cent rate.

This is there is a heavy market demand for Canadian dollars, forcing their value up to 93¼ cents, the government would have to step in with Canadian dollars and purchase U.S. dollars. If downward pressures on the Canadian dollar decrease, with a heavy demand for U.S. dollars, the government would have to sell U.S. dollars from the exchange fund.

However, under the IMF there are arrangements to provide foreign exchange to help meet a run on the currency of member countries.

Mr. Fleming's statement said the government's "very extensive financial resources" and its domestic and international policies "will be directed to maintaining the stability of our exchange rate at this definitive level."

His statement referred to large deficits on international trade and payments in the last decade, which have been as high as $1,504,000,000 in 1959 and last year declined to $989,000,000.

He also said there have been "excessive capital imports and consequent overvaluation of our currency."

The government had made "substantial progress" in its efforts at steps "designed to facilitate an orderly movement of the exchange rate to a level up in keeping with the country's balance of payments."

He said Wednesday's rate was about 10 per cent below the rate prevailing late in December, 1960, when the government took the first move to influence the decision in the exchange value.

Now it was possible "to give to the market the advantages and the security of a fixed exchange rate."

The minister's statement referred to the recent declines in exchange reserves, and said the new rate had been established after studying all factors "including the attitudes in the foreign exchange market and the nature of the exchange transactions which have been taking place in recent months."

Mr. Fleming's budget moves in the last two years, aimed at influencing the exchange rate, have been directed, mostly at the inflow of foreign capital which in the past has pushed up the dollar's exchange value.

In his March 31, 1960, budget he cautioned provinces and municipalities about the dangers of borrowing in the U.S. money market because of the uncertainties of future exchange rate.

In his July budget the next December he increased capital-holding taxes on various transfers from Canada of interest and

Melrose W.I. Installs 1962-3 Officers

The annual meeting of the Melrose W.I. took place at Melrose Hall with Mrs. J. McFarlane and Mrs. Roy Badgley acting as hostesses for the 38 ladies in attendance, including several visitors from Tyendinaga East Institute.

The president, Mrs. E. McMechan, presided for the usual opening and welcomed all after which the roll call, "Say, Sing or Pay," was held and proved most entertaining. Correspondence was dealt with and Mrs. L. Conecliffe and Mrs. E. Pascoe were appointed as delegates to attend the district annual at Carmel on May 16th.

The convenors' reports for the year were read and will be forwarded immediately to the district convenors. The secretary-treasurer's report showed a most successful year had drawn to a close. The district president, Mrs. R. Taylor, gave an interesting travelogue of her visit to Vancouver when she attended the F.W.I.C. convention last summer and showed beautiful colored slides taken on her trip and made a brief commentary as they appeared on the screen. She also kindly installed the delegate and convenors for the coming term as follows: president, Mrs. M. Laxier; 1st vice-president, Mrs. A. English and vice-president, Mrs. C. Pascoe; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. Roy McLaren; district director, Mrs. R. McMechan; alternate district director, Mrs. G. McLaren; auditors, Mrs. E. Badgley and Mrs. V. Pascoe; pianist, Mrs J. Mrs A. English thanked Mrs. Tucker for her kind assistance in the program and presented her with a fitting token of appreciation. This was followed by a humorous reading by Mrs. E. Pascoe which was well received, after which a bountiful lunch was served and a social time enjoyed.

'Organization of Education' Topic at H-S Association

The recent regular meeting of Queen Mary-Prince Charles Home and School Association was held in Prince Charles School.

The president, Mrs. Taylor, read an Easter prayer. The card party showed $131 realized.

The slate of officers for next year will be brought in at the next meeting.

Banner winners were as follows: Prince Charles—primary, juniors, Mrs. MacPherson. Queen Mary, juniors, Mrs. Rachelle; intermediate, Mr. Bailey.

After the business part of the meeting adjourned, a fine display of gymnastics, with the boys of Mr. Bailey's class taking part. The boys were thanked by Gwen Wright.

Mr. Lockyer introduced two guest speakers, Mrs. Anderson and Mrs. Blakely. These ladies attended the conference on education in Windsor, and told of two of the several group discussions.

Mrs. Anderson spoke of "Provision for Individual Differences." There are many differences in children, the main ones being heredity, environment and disabilities.

Some excellent suggestions were given to cope with them. Mrs. Anderson said that better academic and professionally trained teachers were needed.

Mrs. Blakely spoke on "Education of Special Groups."

The special groups consist of emotionally, disturbed, handicapped and retarded children. She said that recommendations made at the conference were sent to the government and research is being carried on.

Specially trained teachers are needed to help the handicapped. If more training is given to the very young child he will be able to achieve better grades later on. Some of these classes are being taught in some cities of which Belleville is one.

Mr. Harnden thanked the speakers.

A social half hour was spent.

Tabernacle Comrade Club Unit 2 Sponsors Spring Tea

"The year's at the spring,
And the day's at the morn;
Morning's at seven;
The hillside's dew pearl'd;
The lark's on the wing;
The snail's in the thorn;
God's in His heaven—

So sang the poet, Robert Browning, and, as if to bear out the newness and everything, Tabernacle United Church Comrade Club presented a charming "Spring Tea" yesterday afternoon in the spacious auditorium of the Sunday School. Rich, green, graceful ferns marked the entrance to the prettily appointed tea room, and at the far end a "flower" scene of a gaming living room, with comfortable furniture, tall, seven-branched candelabra with lighted tapers, highlighted by a bouquet of pastel-tinted snapdragon flowers, in a blue goblet-like vase, and potted ferns added its welcome to the attractiveness of the occasion.

Around the room, at pleasing intervals, were arranged the little quartet tables, each covered in a cloth of yellow, plaid, pink, white or green, and centred by little sugar and creamer, some in floral china, and others in gleaming silver. Holding the spotlight was the daintily appointed tea table with its beautiful Chinese linen cutwork cloth, centred by a lovely arrangement of pale-pink snapdragons, mingled with blue-tinted carnations, yellow Shasta 'mums, and British Columbia huckleberry sprays. At either end were the shimmering silver tea service, and here and there the gay little blue-edged serviettes embellished with little spring flowers in blues and pinks.

Receiving the guests were Mrs. H. Snider, president of the Comrade Club, and Mrs. Mel McFarlane, wife of the pastor. Those who presided at the tea services were: Mrs. L. Andrews, Mrs. W. May, Mrs. M. McFarlane and Mrs. E. Barlow.

The tea room hostess was Mrs. W. Embury.

Those who served included: Mesdames G. Stanton, D. McLean, G. Priest, M. Hackett, G. Wamboldt, M. Smith, J. Bebiak, S. Joss, G. Ashley, A. Bell, Misses Joy Hurtle, V. Grose and J. Foote. Assisting in the kitchen, Mrs. E. Moorman, Mrs. S. McBride, and Mrs. G. Stewart.

There were five extra attractions, the homecooking table, conveyed by Mrs. W. J. Wonnacott, assisted by Mrs. J. Arnott, Mrs. L. Walmsley, and Mrs. W. Slavin. Most tempting were the delicious confections for sale: home-made bread and buns, apple, raspberry, lemon and pumpkin pies; cookies of several varieties; Parkerhouse rolls, date squares, tasty tarts, coconut tarts, loaf cakes, nut-topped and coconut sprinkled layer cakes, chocolate cakes, angel cakes, and jars of delicious jams and jellies.

The other booth was that of the fancy work, under the convenership of Miss Edith Moorman, and Mrs. R. Erwin. Here were laid aprons, some in large blue-toned squares, others in pink and blue; crochet hot-plate mats in blue, white and yellow, and soap bags; other aprons in floral prints; little panty dishcloths; red crochet TV slippers; pretty square cushions; crochet-edged hemstitched pillow slips, and a host of other pretty and useful articles.

NURSERY

In addition, to make the afternoon a most pleasant one for mothers, a nursery was provided for the tiny tots, under the charge of Mrs. R. L. Sprackett.

The treasurer for the afternoon was Mrs. E. Greenleaf, and the over-all convenors, Mrs. C. Mott and Mrs. J. McLeod, to whom appreciative thanks are tendered for a pretty and successful tea, and to all who assisted in any way.

Women's L.A. Sponsors Coffee Party

The event was arranged by a group of the ladies in the Women's Liberal Association in order to provide an opportunity for some members and friends to meet Bob Temple, Liberal candidate for Hastings South, and his charming wife, Ortel.

Coffee and cookies were served from 8-10 p.m. Organizers of the Women's Liberal Association appeared well pleased with the enthusiastic response to this party and said other events are being planned for the near future.

The resolution was among a number passed at the spring board meeting this week. It said many persons face financial difficulties when lack of hospital space forces them to transfer to nursing homes.

Prize-Winning Apple Pie

by Mary Moore

At the Canadian Restaurant Association Convention in Toronto there was an apple pie contest for restaurant bakers and I was one of the judges.

The contestants entered their pies under three categories: 1) one-unit operations (i.e. restaurants with one place of business only); 2) multiple unit operations and 3) Institutional or Industrial dining and catering operations.

Pies were flown to Toronto from as far away as Edmonton.

The pie that won grand first prize was made by Mrs. E. Enns of the Knotty Pin Restaurant in Preston, Ontario — a one-unit operation.

There were eleven judges in all and they were given 1½ hours to taste the pies, tabulate the scores and make their decisions.

After Mrs. Enns' pie was selected I tasted it again and agreed that it was perfect — it was apple pie as I wanted it to be.

If it were being served for the first time to some man from Mars, let us say, to show him Canada's most popular dessert, I would be happy to have the hypothetical Martian taste Mrs. Enns' pie.

So — I sought out the owner and manager of the restaurant for whom Mrs. Enns works and asked for the recipe and here it for you.

Mrs. Enns wrote it out and there is nothing notably different about it. I think it is a series of little things that Mrs. Enns observes that totted up to the perfect pie that won.

Mrs. Enns uses lard in her pastry and Spy apples.

Dinner Menu

THURSDAY

SUNDAY

PRIZE - WINNING APPLE PIE:

(By Mrs. Enns of Knotty Pine Restaurant in Preston, Ont.)

1½ lb. lard (Schneider's Crispycrust), ¾ lb. flour (3 cups), ½ teaspoon salt, ½ cup (or less) cold water. (Mrs. Enns says amount of water depends on temperature of lard).

To quote Mrs. Enns, her method: "I had used Spy apples for those pies. Enough apples to fill a 9" pie were mixed with a scant cup of sugar, a speck of salt, a sprinkling of cinnamon, topped with a teaspoon of butter."

Note from Emenn. In the filling I used 6 medium-large Spy apples, ⅓ cup white sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon cinnamon and one teaspoon butter as Mrs. Enns suggests.

Mrs. Enns says to bake the pie at 425 deg. Fahr. "until apples start coloring" — then turn to 375 deg. until apples are very tender — these instructions worked out to 20 minutes at 425 deg. and 40 minutes at 375 deg.

Everybody agreed it was a high class pie and what any apple pie connoisseur would pronounce "perfect". Serve with Canadian Old Cheddar cheese.

Canadian Red Cross Branch Gives Report

Mr. A. Lewis stated that the Blood Donor Clinics had been most successful. A total of 256 bottles of blood had been collected at the April clinic. The response had been so great that some had been deferred to the June clinics.

Mrs. McCabe reporting the Disaster Relief said that five families had been assisted during the month.

Eleven quilts had been completed by the Women's Work Department as reported by Mrs. Hey.

It was also stated that Stirling had completed a successful campaign during the month.

Words of appreciation were given by Mr. Lewis to the boys from the Key Club, who gave assistance at the Blood Donors' Clinic.

Medical Aux. Hears Talk on Gem Stones

The April meeting of the Women's Auxiliary to the Hastings and Prince Edward Medical Society was held at the home of Mrs. F. Loder, MacDonald Ave.

After the business meeting, Mrs. B. Crook introduced the speaker, Mr. Paul Mercier, who with some beautiful jewellery and gems as examples, gave a most interesting and informative talk. He outlined the five factors to evaluate a gem stone — beauty, rarity, durability, demand and portability. Flaws and synthetic stones may be detected with the microscope, specific gravity, hardness, lustre and other ways.

At the conclusion, on behalf of the auxiliary, Mrs. K. Douglas expressed thanks to Mr. Mercier.

St. Andrew's of Roslin Dedicates Church Basement

In 1858, a number of Irish and Scottish settlers who settled in the Roslin district felt the lack of adequate spiritual worship. As a result, St. Andrew's Church, one of the oldest houses of worship in the Ameliasburg district, was founded.

Little of the early history of the church is substantiated by documentary evidence, but definite reference is made to the first Sacramental report - indicating that the church was established 126 years ago, in August, 1836, as an ordained charge. It is also learned that for a number of years it was a mission, an outstation for the Rev. Andrew's and has been a recognized congregation.

FIRST SERVICE.

First services were centred at the old Squire Campbell home following his settlement at Roslin. The first permanent place of worship was a small building on the site of the cemetery in the village, the congregation later moving to the present site where a brick building was erected in 1877. Finally construction of the church weekend structure to such an extent that in April, 1959, it was condemned as unfit for worship by Trenton township council, and had to be demolished. Following this, services were held in the home of Mr. Percy White, all cider, whose parents held the work of the church as the main interest in their lives, and later still, worshipped in the Orange Hall, nearby. With the death of Mrs. W. White in 1960, members of her family began the building fund as a memorial to her.

NEGRO DIES

Work commended on the basement in September, 1961, and it was completed early in 1962. Therefore, it was decided to hold the 126th anniversary service and have the dedication service of the new basement unit on the same day, May 27, 1962.

In the Sanctuary for the morning service, conducted by Mr. Earle Wannamaker, superintendent of the church, were the Rev. W. H. V. Walker, assistant minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Belleville, who read the Scripture Lesson, and the Reverend Malcolm Mark, B.A., Superintendent of missions, who preached the sermon, "Something to Shout About", based on Mark 16:4.

Dedication of hymn books, presented to the choir by Miss Sarah Cross, also took place at this service.

TRIBUTE OF FLOWERS

Flowers were placed in the church in loving memory of Mr. and Mrs. W. White, who contributed faithfully to the congregation for so many years.

The choir under the direction of Mrs. Earle Wannamaker, rendered "Behold, God the Lord Lord Us".

The dedication service in the afternoon was under the direction of the Toronto-Kingston Presbytery, and again was conducted by Mr. Earle Wannamaker.

The Scripture Lessons from the Old and New Testament were read by the Reverend R. A. Sinclair, B.A., minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Tweed and St. Peter's Presbyterian Church, Madoc.

Prayer was offered by the Reverend Donald G. Kemble, B.A., of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Picton.

BASEMENT DEDICATED

In the absence of the Reverend M. C. Young, B.A., moderator of the Toronto-Kingston Presbytery, the new basement unit was solemnly dedicated to the glory of God, and for the salvation of souls, by the Reverend S. D. MacLean, minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Belleville.

At this Service, the choir sang, "Fairest Lord Jesus".

The sermon at the dedication service was again preached by the Reverend Malcolm Mark, B.A. entitled, "Getting our Bearings", based on Psalm 8:3 Both sermons were timely.

At the conclusion of the service, afternoon tea was served by young ladies of the church assisted by friends who came to honor for this memorable day.

The anniversary cake, a gift of Mrs. J. W. Wood, was cut by Mrs. A. O. McDonald, of Fergus, Ontario, widow of the Reverend A. O. McDonald, who ministered in Roslin from 1918 to 1936; Mrs. A. S. Duncan, of Kingston, Ontario, now 90 years old, the widow of the Reverend A. S. Duncan, who ministered in Roslin from 1927 to 1930; and Mrs. John Cross, the wife of the Senior Elder of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Roslin.

GUESTS PRESENT

The church was filled to capacity for each service and guests were present from Kingston; Trenton; Belleville; Fergus; Stirling; West Huntingdon; Tweed; Madoc; Port St. John, B.C.; Cannifton; Amherstview; Milford; Moscovyore; Thomasburg; Hallowell; Picton; North Bay; Corbyville; Picton; Ameliasburg; Fuller; Plainfield and Queensboro.

Members were pleased to meet many old friends and to meet new friends who came for the services, and wish to extend thanks to each one who assisted at this memorable occasion.

Friends Honor Couple on 15th Anniversary

SCOSBURGH — Some 50 relatives and friends gathered at Orser Hall on Saturday evening for a surprise party to honor Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Foster who were celebrating their 15th wedding anniversary.

The fine program was mostly musical and those taking part were: Mrs. Henry Salmon, Mrs. McGillivray, Mrs. Gordon; Mr. Arnold Wannamaker and Mrs. Alice Foster. Mr. Gay Welsh and Mr. Vesterfelt favored with several vocal duets. Mrs. McWilliams was accompanist, while Mrs. Stella and Elaine sang several appreciative thanks to everyone for their kindness.

Tables were set up with a grand array of assorted goodies, and the honored couple's table was centred with a three-tier wedding cake beautifully decorated with pink roses and inscribed with the figure 15 on the side.

FIND REMAINS

RENO, Nev. (AP)—Remains of a sixth person were found Wednesday in ruins of the New Golden Hotel, razed by fire April 3. They presumably were the remains of showgirl Carol Maye, 20, of Downey, Calif. Hers was the final name on a list of missing.

Many Enjoy UCW 'Family Night' Program

RAWDON — On Wednesday evening the March and April group of the United Church Women under the leadership Mrs. Herbert Smith, sponsored a "Family Night" at the church hall with a large attendance.

The pastor, the Rev. W. G. Fletcher, was chairman for the program with Miss Grace Pitman, ATCM, presiding at the piano. Mrs. Milford Wrightman, president of the U.C.W., extended a welcome to the group. Sixteen pupils of the Allan School, S.S. 8, under the direction of their teacher, Mrs. G. L. Morton, sang "The Tree My Home and Country," after which they repeated "The Pledge to the Flag," and their second selection was a "Bird Song." Nine pupils of the Wellman School, S.S. 4, rendered "Who Gives All", and "Rejoicing in Thy Creation" with Joan Sharpe playing the solo part. At the close of the program the children rendered four more selections, two from each school.

The pastor introduced Mrs. Alton Hadley who recently visited South Africa with her husband. Mrs. Hadley gave a vivid portrayal of their trip from Malton airport, via New York, to Johannesburg. Her commentary and scenes covered many primitive features, wild animals, elephants, beautiful trees, tropical beauty, a large array of colorful flowers and scenery.

During intermission 4-h-s teen-agers sold popcorn to add to the funds for the evening.

A parade of novelty hats followed and those were fashioned from various kitchen articles and were most attractive. Those in the parade were: Mrs. Earl McAdam, Mrs. Herbert Smith, Mrs. Milford Wrightman, Mrs. Grace Hubble, the Misses Carol Fletcher and Margaret Hommerson. Prizes were awarded for their efforts.

In the second part Mrs. Hadley gave two sets of movies. The first was a trip through Canada's National Park which showed the antics of the bear, a delightful experiment and a visit to a maple farm. She also displayed several souvenirs of Africa such as necklaces, purses, and hand-made items. The pictures showed native huts and Mrs. Hadley told of the great poverty and unhealthiness of the children.

Mrs. Percy MacMullin voiced thanks to all those who had contributed to the success of the evening and made the presentation of a small gift to Mrs. Hadley.

The group served coffee and doughnuts and all enjoyed a social half hour.

MAIL CALL

Question: Must envelopes containing wedding invitations and announcements be handwritten? I have about two hundred of each to send out, and it seems to me the job would be shorter and neater if the envelopes could be typed. — M.V., Trenton, N.J.

Answer: Envelopes must be neatly and legibly written by hand. Since the job is so engrossing, you might ask a few friends and female relatives, in addition to your wedding attendants, to lend a hand. It's a usual request and very much a part of the pre-wedding preparations.

Question: My husband and I will soon attend a benefit dinner, to which we bought tickets to aid the charity involved. We've never gone to one before, and will be sitting at a table with a number of strangers. Should we introduce ourselves, or would that seem forward? — Mrs. A.G., Great Neck, L.I.

Answer: It would be quite proper to introduce yourselves to the others at the table. Your husband would begin by saying, "John Jones," and, if you read aloud your name cards to others on your side of the table, you simply would say "I'm Mary Jones."

Question: I live in an apartment house which has a laundry for tenants in the basement. Often, when I've gone to use the washer, there's a batch of finished laundry sitting inside. Some tenants obviously go shopping and fail to remove their wash from the machine when it's done. A few times I've taken the laundry out and put it carefully aside so I could use the machine. A neighbor recently said I was very rude to touch her things, especially since she had a second wash to do. What etiquette is any, in such a situation? Mrs. M.N., Bronx, N.Y.

Answer: Since the equipment is meant for all the tenants, it's inconsiderate of a fellow tenant to cut a personal claim. Users of the machine should be courteous enough to return on time to remove their laundry when the cycle is completed. In any delay, then it's proper for another tenant to put the laundry out as long as it's set aside neatly in a place where the owner can find it easily when she returns.

Wife Preserves

Easy way to make dry bread crumbs: After drying stale bread in oven, put it in paper bag and crush into crumbs with a rolling pin.

Answer: The best man usually offers the first toast. The groom may then offer a toast to his bride. The father of the bride offers the next toast, and then the father of the groom. Often, the ushers then offer a round of toasts. If any of the guests want to add a toast, they may do so after the men in the wedding party.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Sidney T. — My mother will make me get in trouble at school.

Mrs. T.T. — His teacher is just too snoopy with her assignments.

Sidney T. — I'm in the fifth grade and we're supposed to hand in our composition book twice a month, with all the assignments written out. The trouble is my mother looks over my work and sometimes the subjects are her need, that I don't make them up myself. The teacher writes them on the blackboard and we all get the same ones.

At the beginning of the term they were hard to do — all about the planets and Switzerland and current events. But last time I had to tell my favorite jokes, and what I do in my spare-time, and easy things like that. Now the teacher gave us, "How my father met my mother" to write about, and my mother won't tell me. She says it's none of the teacher's business.

Mrs. T.T. — I'll take this up with the principal if necessary. I'm shocked to think a teacher would be so nosy as to ask such a personal question of each pupil. I'd understand it if she were single herself. She might be looking for pointers. But she's a middle-aged married woman and should have more sense.

I told Sid he doesn't have to write any compositions where the subject might humiliate him or me or my husband. I remember getting sore myself once when the topic was, "How I spent the weekend." I handed in a blank page and told the teacher I did nothing, even though actually I did plenty. She told me to put it in writing which I did, all on one line. She had to accept it. Sid can do the same.

The Council: Aw, come off it, Mrs. T.! Teacher's just been reading her brains for a subject that will make the nouns and verbs and commas flow, so she can correct spelling, grammar and punctuation. Much of the early stuff, what Sid calls hard, was ground out grudgingly because it was dry facts, material already covered under science, geography, social studies. But now the titles are on an easy topic themselves, and that should yield a profusion of eloquent self-expression by the pupils.

If a teacher wants to be snoopy, all she need do is strike up a conversation with a child. Most of them volunteer more than she can handle. Witness Art Linkletter's experience. In return for questions (before millions on TV) like "Who's the boss in your h$ m e?" and "If you could pick two other parents, whom would you choose?" he got enough family secrets to fill two books of humor.

No, the core of successful teaching is the child himself, and good teachers learn to "get to the fundamentals of the syllabus, during projects which are close to the pupil's immediate interests. It's quite possible, Mrs. T., that Sid will be asked how much allowance he gets. This could be a natural lead-in for a study of the federal budget!

Mrs. T.T.'s touchiness should give her pause, as it does us. What is she afraid of? What must she hide? If the answer is "Nothing," then it's her attitude toward teachers and schools that is at fault. Those chips on her shoulder should be examined before they start weighing Sid down.

Two brief reassurances, Mrs. T.: First, a composition is not a legal deposition. Sid can tell how his parents really met (was it taxi-dancing?) or make up a whopper on how he imagines they met. Teacher wants "copy." Second, teachers now make a real effort to know the whole child and, if compositions can yield new insight, bravo!

U.C.W. Meetings

HALLOWAY U.C.W.

HALLOWAY — The April meeting of the Halloway United Church Women was held on Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Embury Hough with 34 members in attendance.

Mrs. Charles Huffman, president, opened the meeting and Mrs. R. Morgan led in the worship service based on Easter, meditating on the fact that Easter is the firm foundation of one's faith. The Scripture was taken from 1st Corinthians 15, 1-11 and read by Mrs. G. Kennedy.

The thank-offering was received interesting items from the book, "Signals for Sisters". Other reading matter was taken home by members.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Hough and her assistants.

MANY SPECIES

There are probably more than 12,000 species of orchids, including a few that grow in the Arctic.

Prayer closed this portion of the meeting.

The business was conducted by Mrs. Huffman. There were 18 cards sent and 33 visits to shut-ins made. A thank-you letter was read from Mrs. Clayton Reid and a thank-you verbally given by Mrs. H. Townsend.

A brief discussion followed on necessary preparations for the annual strawberry supper in June, the date was set for Wednesday, June 26th. An urgent appeal was made on behalf of supply secretary for articles of clothing for sale, especially men's, boys' and children's clothing to be handed in as early as possible.

Mrs. Hough, treasurer, reported the first quarter of the allocation had been met and forwarded to the proper source.

Rev. Robert Reid will be the speaker at the May meeting at the home of Mrs. John Wilson. Mention was made of the rally for the area which is to be held in Madoc United Church on May 30th. Several members expressed their desire to subscribe to the Observer through the Foxboro secretary, Mrs. Rabbie for same. The next Bible study meeting to be on Monday evening at Mrs. Bowers.

Mrs. Freddie Welkman presented a report of the April meeting of the Belleville-Quinte Presbyterial held in Bloomfield United Church.

WOMEN ASK QUESTIONS, WANT ANSWERS ON COIN-OPERATED DRY CLEANING

"JUST HOW SIMPLE ARE THESE MACHINES TO OPERATE?"
The answer is "very". After putting your articles in by dry cleaner into the machine, just close and insert coins. That's all—until you take them out at end of the cycle—bright, radiant, "Sweet-Clean" fresh!

"HOW LONG DOES COIN-OP DRY CLEANING TAKE?"
Only a half hour to "Glover-ize" a full load—but you'll find most other coin-operated equipment, vastly less than regular commercial dry cleaning.

"FRANKLY, I'M WORRIED ABOUT THAT DRY CLEANING SMELL, AFTERWARD. HOW ABOUT IT?"
You needn't worry, because "Glover-izing" automatic all vapors at end of the cycle, floods each load with clean, fresh air. These are the reasons for the Glover term "Sweet-Clean"—and for Glover equipment in our store!

"WHAT CAN I CLEAN?"
You can clean anything in these Glover machines that any dry cleaner can, except, of course, furs, suedes, leather and very fragile formal gowns.

"WON'T I HAVE TROUBLE PRESSING DRY CLEANED GARMENTS?"
No—because "Glover-izing" holds wrinkling to a minimum, often makes pressing unnecessary!

"WHAT HAPPENS TO COLORS IN THESE MACHINES?"
Your colors come out cleaner and brighter! Just clean white and light colors separately from red and darker colored items.

"I'VE HEARD SOME DRY CLEANING MACHINES ARE JUST WORKED-OVER WASHING MACHINES."
Do have no fear. But these Glover machines were specially developed for top quality coin-operated dry cleaning—and by a firm with 40 years' experience in building the finest, most dependable commercial equipment!

"HOW MUCH HANDLING OF MY THINGS IS NEEDED?"
None at all, from the time you put them into the Glover machine until it stops at the end of its fully automatic half-hour cycle.

"HOW MUCH CAN I CLEAN IN ONE LOAD?"
Our Glover "Sweet-Clean" Dry Cleaning machines will clean in one load about ten rayon dresses, or four medium-weight men's suits, or more than two pairs of drapes or a full-size bedspread.

Red Cross Tries To Aid 22,000 Tibetan Exiles

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — She was old. Her long, black, braided hair was thinning. Her worn and, robe was wrapped loosely around her gaunt body.

She rolled on the ground, racked by coughs.

The others didn't notice. They had their own troubles. The old man with a scraggy beard and a high, fever, the wide-eyed child with sores on its legs, and many more.

These refugees from Tibet waited patiently outside a clinic south of Katmandu. As the day grew warmer, their heavy robes became more out of place in this low Himalayan valley than they had been on the Tibetan highlands.

THESE ARE LUCKY

In a starkly relative sense, they were the lucky ones. They were receiving a little food and medical care from the International committee of the Red Cross, the Swiss organization that is trying to help Tibetan refugees in Nepal.

It cannot help them all.

Estimates of the number of refugees in this nation of isolated mountain valleys run up to 22,000. The Swiss are trying to settle 1,000-1,200 of them and give temporary care to more than 4,000 others. Even this is an immense task that strains available resources.

Dr. Feliz Zust of Frauenfeld, Switzerland, the head of the Red Cross group in Nepal, says simply feeding the refugees isn't enough. The people are almost childlike in their dependence upon others since being driven away from their homes in Tibet by Chinese Communist rule.

Successful Living

(A Canadian Social Worker Helps with Human Problems)

Father Calls Daughter Stupid

DORIS CLARKE

DEAR DORIS:—I am sixteen. I don't get along with my father. Tonight I was asking help for a problem in grammar I was having trouble with. They just sat there and refused to help me at all.

Then he started yelling at me about a boy I know. He told me I must never see this boy again as long as I live. I am not a bright student in school at all, but my encouragement came from my boy friend, not my parents. It was through him that I got any help in school.

What should I do? I've tried to be nice to my father but it doesn't work. I end up hating him.—IN TROUBLE.

DEAR IN TROUBLE:—Pop should have admitted he didn't know the grammar. And a few other things.

One is that he is missing some of the best fun in life if he missing out on being a pal to his daughter. Another that to lower the boom on a b. I.—especially one good at grammar—only makes things worse.

Are you carrying your weight at home? What happened to turn your Dad against the boy? Have you shown yourself reliable where you had the chance?

If so, talk to your mother. Someone must see your side of things.

DEAR DORIS:—I have often heard about the thrill resulting from a kiss. I have never yet felt the slightest trace of a thrill. It isn't that I have been cheap with my kisses. I was fully 16 before I allowed a boy to kiss me, as I felt look to be intimate with pessing crushes.

Now I have a real "sweetie." I love to kiss him just to be near him; to show him my feelings, but, as before, there is no thrill. What is wrong? I feel I am missing something.—GEORGINA.

DEAR GEORGINA:—Have no fear. There are thrills in store.

It doesn't always strike like lightning. Earlier you put strong controls on yourself. These are still operating deep down and holding back a full response to affection.

Loving starts best with liking. Is your sweetie on the same wave length when it comes to how you spend the evening? Do you both like the same things? This is what counts most in marriage.

Physical reaction can follow high regard. I am sending you the name of a helpful little book which deals with what love is and with the fact that you must like as well as love.

CONFIDENTIAL TO WOULD LIKE TO KNOW:—You can't stop him from going out with other girls. Just give up on the idea of going steady and take full advantage of your own opportunity to have a good time with everybody. If he is going to call you, he will call you without any suggestions from me.

Labor Annoyed At Plan to Aid Doctors Move

VANCOUVER (CP) — Union members protested Tuesday against an offer by the British Columbia Medical Association to assist doctors leaving Saskatchewan because of the province's plan for a universal prepaid medical care program.

Paddy Neale, a secretary of the Vancouver and District Labo Council, asked a meeting of the council for authority to determine where the money is coming from to back up the offer.

Several delegates charged that funds from the Medical Services Association — a conciliatory health plan — likely will be used to help provide jobs and travel expenses for doctors moving to B.C.

CAMPBELLFORD

R. Banbury Addresses Rotary Club

CAMPBELLFORD — Guest of the Campbellford Rotary Club at their regular meeting this week was Ralph Banbury, Provincial Representative for Northumberland. He stated that governmental assistance to farmers (subsidies) amounted to 3.6 per cent of the federal budget. It is also an assistance to the consumer of farm products in that it keeps the price of the product down. He compared the cost of this assistance to other government spending —defence, 36 per cent, welfare, 33 per cent, debt 12 per cent.

Mr. Banbury said that if the level of the entire economy were reduced by one-third, all would be better off. In order to sell some products, such as machinery, or produce, in foreign lands, there must now be a two-price structure, one in Canada and one for the foreign market as domestic prices are too high. Cheese, for instance, is the best, but is ten cents a pound higher in England than the Danish or domestic product.

In the complex business of producing and selling products of the soil, the weather, a factor over which man can have no control, can produce a famine or an overabundance. It is therefore not entirely desirable not to have farm surpluses (in case of a dry year).

In connection with farm economy as a whole, the speaker said that the population in this area is no longer predominantly agricultural. He said that out of ten 421 members, a club leader would be fortunate if two of these members stayed on the farm. This does not mean that food will be scarce however. Canada will be able to produce enough food for the foreseeable future — a direct contrast to the plight of the U.S.S.R. whose agriculture has not produced enough to eat.

The speaker was introduced by past president Frank Linden, and thanked by past president A. D. Bennett.

Few Issues Are Debated On Merits in UN Says Diplomat With Canadians

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—An African diplomat with the Canadian delegation to the United Nations says "few issues, if any, are debated on their merits here."

Apollo Kaduma Koronde of Uganda, which is scheduled to receive independence from Britain in October, said in an interview the cold war poisons UN debates.

"Perhaps this is as it must be. But one gets the impression that many discussions are bedevilled by the cold war on both sides. If someone from the West makes a proposal, he's shot down by Russia.

"I cannot suggest a solution. But we who are so far from the cold war—we feel very cold about it. We can only hope the UN will function as it should and will achieve its real purpose."

Uganda, with a population of 6,000,000 in an area half the size of Newfoundland, lies astride the equator, bordering the Congo, Kenya and Tanganyika.

Koronde, educated at University of South Africa and London's Middle Temple, is serving in the Canadian delegation here as special adviser under Canada's Commonwealth Arts Assistance plan.

At the same time, the 47-year-old lawyer is preparing a Uganda mission to the UN and, in this connection, is enthusiastic in praise of Canadian advice and assistance.

"We thought it best to link up with an older brother in the Commonwealth rather than the British delegation," he said. "The Canadians didn't stop with just showing me around the UN. They showed me how they make contacts, how they gather information, and how they use it—this along with such things as office routine and filing systems."

"We've learned as much from Mr. Koronde as he's learned from us," said Canadian ambassador Charles S. A. Ritchie, referring to the increasing importance of Africa in UN affairs.

Koronde, a teacher in Uganda for eight years, is related to become ambassador to the United States and the UN after his country becomes independent.

The non-drinking, non-smoking African—a swimming ace in his school days — said he but colonialism is on our doorstep. I'm very optimistic about colonialism, which is a fading problem, everywhere except in South Africa, where the situation is frozen."

Uganda has enjoyed a happy association of 70 years with Britain, said Koronde, perhaps largely because it has only a small white settler population as compared with, for instance, Kenya.

"The possibility of Uganda inclining toward the Communist bloc is out of the question," he added.

Koronde, legs and soft-spoken, takes a moderate view of racial problems—"All that is needed are knowledge and understanding."

CAMPBELLFORD

Rotary Head T.M. Palmer Pays Visit

CAMPBELLFORD — T. M. Palmer, Governor of District 701, Rotary International, was the speaker at the regular meeting of the Rotary Club on Monday. He chose as his subject, "Rotary Is International," stressing the need for Rotarians to be friendly. At Rotary International gatherings where black, yellow and white races are represented, where all religions mix, there is a spirit of understanding promoted by the Ideal of Rotary, "Service Above Self." It is evident that people from all lands are essentially alike, fostering the same hopes for peace and understanding.

Rotary being international in people embraces more than half a million members, all of whom should be ambassadors of its message of good will. "Rotarians have in their hands the tools to change the course of history if they were effectively used," Mr. Palmer said.

STUDENT EXCHANGE

He called attention to the exchange of students sponsored by this district, whereby a student from the equivalent of Grade 13 in Chile will be brought to study here.

Governor "T.M." commended the Campbellford Club for its participation in this project as well as others including the 200 percent participation in the Rotary Foundation, the Retarded Children's school, the foster child conference and the Easter Seal Campaign.

He said that "powerful as the giant 50 megaton bombs are Rotary has a more powerful weapon, the power to destroy fear, distrust and hatred, which separates men from man and nation from nation."

Break for Gold, Paper, Higher Costs for Foreign Debt Payments in Peg

OTTAWA (CP)—A boon to Canadian exporters and manufacturers seeking lower costs for Canadian travellers and investors abroad — perhaps higher consumer prices.

Those are some of the effects expected from the government's move to cut the dollar's exchange value to 92½ U.S. cents and peg it there.

"Delighted," said F. D. Mathers, president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, Calgary. It would help exporters and "there is no doubt that it will be good for manufacturers."

Alberta Deputy Provincial Treasurer F. G. Stewart said it will cost Alberta from $100,000 to $200,000 this year in added costs of paying interest and principal on the province's borrowings in the U.S.

Metropolitan Toronto's finance commissioner, G. Arthur Lascelles, said it will cost Metro several hundred thousand dollars or more "and is unfortunate" but "mostly it will come out of the taxpayers' hide."

Dollar devaluation boosts import prices, but the effect on consumer prices of sorts is difficult to measure.

Obviously the reactions to Mr. Fleming's announcement are mixed.

The satisfaction of Mr. Mathers and other spokesmen for manufacturers and exporters is easily explained.

Dollar devaluation boosts the Canadian dollar price of imports sold on world markets for world prices — generally U.S. dollars. And increasing the Canadian dollar cost of imports. It gives a competitive margin to Canadian producers in their sales competition against imports.

For instance, last June's drop in the dollar value brought a boom in Canadian wheat prices. Ed Nelson of Ponoka, Alta., president of the Farmers Union of Alberta, said farmers have always felt things were better when the dollar was at a discount below the U.S. dollar "but we didn't speculate on it being that far below."

The dollar drop also will mean a break for Canadian gold producers. The price of their gold is fixed at $35 U.S. dollars an ounce, and the Canadian value of a U.S. dollar rises from $1.08 to $1.08 Wednesday's $1.09.

The same increased value of the American greenback will have an impact on tourist travel. It will cost more for Canadian travellers in the U.S. while American tourists will find their dollars go farther in Canada.

The fact that the Canadian dollar is not only being put in value but also is being pegged at the 92½-cent rate likely will have more intangible repercussions.

Alex N. McLeod, chief economist of the Canadian Bankers' Association, said in Toronto the existence of a stabilized rate is "the most important thing" and will allow producers to plan their operations on the basis of a firm exchange rate.

Mr. McLeod also said present indications are that the exchange rate can be changed "if circumstances warrant."

"I don't think this is too far off a good rate. Opinions likely will differ on that," he said.

He added that the higher interest rates now prevailing on borrowings in the U.S. may be more than offset by the fact of the lower interest rates on which have been obtained on foreign borrowings.

In the more complicated field of international financial transactions, the government doubtless will be looking for a reduction in the flow of capital movements deficit incurred in the last 19 years from international trade in goods and services.

Fleming Thinks His Opponent Out for Revenge

Without referring to him by name, Mr. Fleming described Mitchell Sharp, former deputy trade minister and Liberal candidate in Toronto Eglinton, as "a member of the bureaucratic brains trust" with "a personal axe to grind."

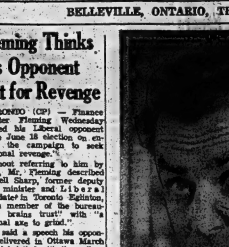
He said a recall slip opponent delivered in Ottawa March 19 had bristled with "scurrilous and defamatory assertions", suggesting that members of the Diefenbaker government might be prepared to set aside Christian ethics in the struggle for political power.

The minister said:

"I will not recall any previous campaign in Eglinton into which any candidate has entered with such a sense of grief, or seeking to make himself as issue or seeking personal revenge.

"That appears to be the mainspring of the present Liberal campaign."

GETS NOMINATION



Mr. Fleming spoke briefly on Mr. Sharp's rise to the major portion of a speech accepting the Conservative party nomination in Eglinton, which the Liberals won by a landslide since 1945. He was unopposed.

He said the Liberal campaign in Ottawa speech said Prime Minister Diefenbaker's treatment of a "hidden" issue — that the economic outlook in 1957 was basically unsatisfactory — "is the only basis the report, signed by Mr. Sharp, was privileged information to which the public has been obtained on foreign account."

The report was the property of the Canadian government, Mr. Fleming said.

"That the candidate appears to think that as a civil servant he had a right to veto the use of that report. This is new theory of copyright."

Mr. Fleming referred to his Liberal opponent as "this candidate who never lived in this riding." Mr. Sharp, a vice-president of Brazilian Traction, Light and Power Company, lives in suburban Forest Hill.

HIS THOUGHTS ARE IN SPACE — Maj. Gherman S. Titov, the Soviet cosmonaut who orbited the earth 17 times in a flight last August, ponders a question as he meets with newsmen in Washington. Titov is in this capital to report on his flight before an international space symposium. (AP Wirephoto).

Top Leaders Of Electrical Union Fight

WASHINGTON (AP). — The two top leaders of the International Union of Electrical workers were reported to have had a fight Wednesday in full view of the union's 30-member executive board.

The two are IUE President James B. Carey, who weighs about 180 pounds, and IUE Secretary - Treasurer Al Hartnett, 62, weighing about 160.

After watching clashes at Wednesday's board meeting, Carey was reported to have lunged and struck at Hartnett, who retaliated and bloodied Carey's nose. Neither man could be reached for comment.

Executive board members are said to have piled in, with at least one of them being knocked out cold.

The meeting at IUE headquarters was then recessed to today and Mrs. Ella Baltz, 50, mother of Philadelphia complained it was more than a week since another female board member, Mrs. Evelyn McGarr of Montreal, had been injured.

Carey held a press conference Wednesday before the meeting and, if he had been injured, didn't show it.

NOT CONCERNED

The Carey-Hartnett feud has concerned AFL - CIO leaders who have been summoned here to mediate it. Carey is secretary-treasurer of the AFL-CIO industrial union department and formerly was No. 2 man in the old CIO.

The IUE conflict flared up again a few months ago when Carey refused to let the union's newspaper, the IUE News, go to press for a column by Hartnett cautioning union members to be on guard against would-be union dictators. The union paper finally was published with the challenged column.

As a result of that situation, the paper's managing editor, James Toughill, was fired by Carey, who defied a writ Wednesday his reasons for ordering the discharge.

Britain's Entry Into ECM Might Place 'Strain' on Commonwealth Says P.M.

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Diefenbaker said Wednesday that Britain's entry into the European Common Market might place a "strain" on the Commonwealth.

Mr. Diefenbaker, currently campaigning in Newfoundland, made the statements in a television address filmed here earlier Wednesday.

Mr. Diefenbaker said trade is "one of the essential links in the bonds of Commonwealth, every member of which had benefitted from the existing system of preferences.

"I believe it is imperative that these trading advantages shall not be done away with. That is the issue presented including the United States which have taken strong objection to the discrimination in trade.

"Preferential tariffs would end unless the six member nations of the Common Market "agree otherwise" on the matter, the British joining."

In the broadcaster's address an election campaign talk, he scheduled to be rebroadcast over seven other television stations across Canada tonight.

CONCLUDES TALK

Tuesday Mr. Diefenbaker concluded his talks with Ike here with British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan, mainly on the Berlin crisis and disarmament.

The Canadian leader said Monday night that Britain has the right to decide for herself whether to join the Common Market.

"However, if she does join, decisions must be taken that will be answered. Would she not have to place a stress on the Commonwealth as she commits her primary allegiance to European organizations or accepts decisions of European institutions of the future?"

Canada had "taken a stand that Britain fully understands," he said. "Before any implementation of the Commonwealth comes first and she will not join "the Six" on terms that would "permanently or detrimentally" affect the Commonwealth trade relations.

The conference ended following Mr. Diefenbaker's talks with Mr. Macmillan "answers once and for all" the charges, even untrue, propaganda that has been circulated about Britain, or have been acting in a way that was unfair to 'British.'"

222 DIE IN TRAFFIC

TORONTO (CP) — A total of 222 persons were killed in traffic accidents in Ontario during the first three months of 1962, according to figures released Wednesday by the transport department. Seven more persons were injured in the period than in the same period in 1961 while the total number of persons injured totalled 6,960 in the first three months of 1961.

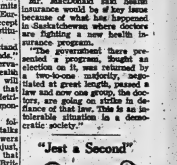
Shifts Leave Chronic Core Of Jobless

— MacDonald

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — The Conservative and Liberal parties are unwilling and unable to prevent such "callous" shifts of industry as Ford Motor Company's moves from Windsor to Oakville, NDP Leader Donald C. MacDonald said Wednesday night.

Citing the recent shift of Ford's parts and accessories division out of Windsor and similar moves of other Ford divisions, Mr. MacDonald said a nominating convention was in session here to choose candidate with a "hard core of chronic unemployment and a foreboding pattern of problems against such action by the whole area."

He said: "Only a massive such action by the old - line parties are "as futile as baying at the moon." The old-line parties were unwilling to act because they believed industry had the right to make such decisions, and were unable to prevent it because such decisions are their main campaign contributors.



He said the only party in New Democrats "have the will to do something about it because we have the will to do economic planning."

THREE ISSUES

Mr. MacDonald said in an earlier interview that the federal election campaign will be fought on three major issues—health insurance, unemployment and foreign policy.

Mr. MacDonald said health insurance would be a major issue because of what has happened in Saskatchewan where workers are fighting a medical health insurance program.

The government there presented a program, fought an election on it, was returned for a two-term majority, negotiated at great length, passed a bill, then one group, the doctors, are going on strike in defiance of that law. This is an intolerable situation in a democratic society."

"Before you start complaining, remember who asked for it to be sleeveless."

Aura of Crisis in East-West Relations Ebbing Away

By CARMAN CUMMING
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Relations between the Communist and Western world have been marked in recent weeks by a relaxation of tension on both sides—a tendency to look back and examine positions and issues.

Some observers are calling it "cold war thaw."

But the most curious part of the pause—if the term is justified—is the fact that the crisis which have stirred Communist capitals, disarmament, Laos, Viet Nam and Berlin.

While South Viet Nam remains a hot spot, reports tell of crisis in East-West relations that prevailed last fall has largely passed away.

The decline in belligerence has been matched by negotiations in a number of Communist capitals.

While conferences were brought out and ratified at the imperial Kremlin, observers noted there were indications that the real concern was with production.

Even Soviet Defence Minister Malinovsky, while making a routine denunciation of the West in Moscow's Red Square, stressed that the great task of the Soviet Union was to show the "irrefutable advantages of the Soviet system" — and for that peaceful coexistence was the only answer.

CBC Willing to Handle TV Debate if Leaders Agree

OTTAWA (CP) — A CBC spokesman said Wednesday the publicly-owned corporation has offered time on its national TV broadcast to the party leaders in the four party leaders in the June 18 election campaign. The form of debate would be up to the leaders themselves.

This was the first indication that the CBC stands ready to show Canadian TV viewers charges of breaking military discipline and order by benching involved in smuggling by Canadian personnel in Indochina.

Cpl. Hector Joseph Noel of the Saskatchewan signals troop will stand charges today on the prejudice of good order and discipline."

The military trials arising from smuggling of gold and opium by men attached to the international truce supervisory commission are expected to reach their climax later with the trial of an officer, identified so far only as Major X.

Wednesday, a court headed by Brig. N. R. Ross of Fredericton deliberated for two hours before sentencing Cpl. Gerald Albert West, 33, of the Royal Watch Regiment, to be cut down to a private and sent to an army jail for 30 days.

The army had charged that Cpl. West and Maj. Platt's quarry-carried a parcel from Vientiane to Saigon, though he believed it contained gold, and later picked up a trunk from customs for Cpl. Noel, while still suspicious that there was opium in the trunk.

The army prosecutor, Maj. James Fay, said the corporal's suspicions proved correct.

Second Canadian Corporal Faces Court Martial

OTTAWA (CP)—A second Canadian Army corporal faces a court martial here today on charges of breaking military discipline and order by benching involved in smuggling by Canadian personnel in Indochina.

Fear Children Have Stolen Deadly Acid

TORONTO (CP)—Police are making a door-to-bone search in west-central Toronto today for two gallons of deadly acid they said they feared children had mistaken for apple cider.

The liquid could burn through flesh if spilled and a few drops taken internally could be fatal.

The acid, used to remove chrome from car bumpers, disappeared from a private garage.

Lesage Chosen To Open CNE

TORONTO (CP)—W. P. Fleming, president of the Canadian National Exhibition, announced today that for the first time in 84 years, a Quebec premier will open the fair this year.

Premier Lesage will do the honors this year that have been handled in the past by such persons as Governors-General, the Queen, the Duke of Kent and Earl Mountbatten.

A. O. Drysdale Asks Better Road Ambulance Service

TORONTO — One of the most urgent tasks ahead of Ontario is to provide "adequate ambulance services to match present highway needs, A. O. Drysdale, Belleville, president of the Toronto Chamber of Commerce, said today in outlining the annual presentation of the Ontario Chamber to Premier Robarts and his cabinet. The present situation in which highway casualties are often given slow or inadequate care must not be continued," Mr. Drysdale said, and pointed out that the 290 provincial Chambers of Commerce and Boards of Trade had been urging a complete study of ambulance services for a year. Although in some areas ambulance services exist, Mr. Drysdale said that the overall situation was utterly inadequate for this province and it is still possible for injured persons to be intended on the highways in some parts of the province for long periods of time.

Mr. Drysdale's delegation expressed strong support of the Ontario Economic Council and its efforts to achieve harmonious and productive management-labor relations in Ontario industry. He suggested that co-operation similar to that achieved at the provincial level should be extended to the individual communities of the province wherever possible.

Similar harmony is badly needed in Ontario's agricultural and agricultural processing industries, the delegation stressed. Present efforts to impose marketing schemes on primary producers without reference to the needs of the processing and merchandising of the finished product are bad for both the province and could only result in rising costs and mounting inefficiency. The efficiency which is being striven for in commerce and industry must be applied also to agriculture if the province is to prosper, Mr. Drysdale said.

The delegation also urged the government to stress the needs of municipalities in regard to expressways and rapid transit in future programs. It expressed approval of the improvements recently made in regard to the inspection of meat from dead animals, and said that the Ontario Chamber has emphasized for a number of years.

Labor Minister Says Jobless On Decrease

GUELPH (CP)—Labor Minister Michael Starr said Wednesday night that Liberal Leader Lester Pearson predicted last summer there would be an increase in unemployment.

But since Mr. Pearson's prediction unemployment had decreased 20 per cent and the government had created 600,000 new jobs.

Mr. Starr was speaking at a Progressive Conservative convention here for Wellington riding MP Alfred D. Hales, 43-year-old Guelph merchant, who was nominated to contest the June 18 federal election.

Mr. Hales has held the seat since 1957.

Mr. Starr said the only issue in the forthcoming election is whether the Progressive Conservatives will be allowed to complete their program, or whether Canada will be turned back to bureaucrats or planners.

Great Future Says Minister

BRIDGETOWN, N.S. (CP) — Labor Minister Starr of Hamilton said Wednesday night that the last four years have been "the greatest" industrial expansion Canada had ever known and the forecast for the future was even brighter.

He spoke at a Digby-Annapolis Progressive Conservative Constituency nominating Convention which nominated Prime Minister George Nowlan as candidate for the party in the riding.

Premier Stanfield of Nova Scotia said that without industrial aid from Ottawa his government would have been forced to reduce its education program and would have been unable to go along with federal programs of old age assistance.

ENVOY RESIGNS

PANAMA (Reuters) — The Panamanian foreign ministry Wednesday confirmed reports that Dr. Roberto Arias, husband of British ballerina Dame Margot Fonteyn, has resigned as ambassador to Britain. Arias gave personal reasons as the basis for his resignation.

Real Estate, Businesses Going at Bargain Rates

ORAN, Algeria (Reuters) — Real estate and businesses are going at bargain rates in this Algerian city of unhappy Mediterranean city.

Europeans engulfed in a flood of panic are selling out for what they can get.

"Would you like a hairdressing business? I can let you have my shop for 20,000 new francs ($4,000). Two years ago, it turned down an offer of 100,000 new francs ($20,000)."

A photographer with a neoflourishing business said "As soon as I leave, I shall just abandon my shop. Who is going to buy it."

These attitudes reflect the wave of pessimism among the nearly 1,000,000 Europeans in Algeria since the Algerian ceasefire agreement between France and the Algerian insurgents. The ceasefire was signed in a nation governed by the native people of the French Algerian territory.

At present, they assume the Algerian Moslems of the National Liberation Front will not honor the cease-fire agreements and will expropriate the property of French nationals.

For this reason, they support the terrorists of the Secret Army Organization, hoping some miracle may yet overturn the agreements and enable them to continue in a dominating position.

Only a few of the Europeans in Algeria are rich landowners or industrialists. The majority are bus drivers, plumbers, shopkeepers, modest farmers or civil servants.

Some of them clearly will of the British Empire.

Coins Phrase To Describe Four Liberals

INGLESIDE, Ont. (CP)—Public Works Minister Walker Wednesday night coined a phrase to describe four Liberal frontbenchers in the last Parliament.

He labelled Liberal Leader Pearson, Paul Martin, J. W. Pickersgill and Lionel Chevrier the "four horsemen of the eclipse—the eclipse of the Liberal party."

Mr. Walker spoke at a nomination meeting for the newly-eight miles west of Cornwall. Grant Campbell, who has represented Stormont for the Progressive Conservatives since 1949, is expected to be the party's candidate in the June 18 federal election.

Board Reserves Decision on Major Point

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario Labor Relations Board reserved decision Wednesday on a major point at issue in the fight between the CBC and Local 857 over the rich prize of the labor force in the CBC's Toronto television studios.

It will hand down decision later on allegations by the national office of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers that it has rebel-lious Sudbury Local 598 conspired with the United Steelworkers of America to transform the local's 17,500 members over to the Steel union.

The decision will go part-ly the way to determining whether the Steelworkers will be elected by the local members in a vote among the contending unions. Confirmation of the charges could invalidate the vote.

Still to be heard are further Mine-Mill accusations of fraud on the part of Steel in the signing of membership cards members during a long and tumultuous raiding period. These were in the Sudbury May 14-15-16.

HEAR OPPOSING CHARGES

At the last of three days of hearings on the conspiracy charges Wednesday, Mine-Mill head lawyers for the national office of Mine-Mill contend that Steelworkers and the Sudbury practised in Steel's attempted takeover, while counsel for Steel and the dissident Sudbury local denied the charges and called for a prompt vote of the voters in the locked ballot boxes.

"With about time the workers of Sudbury know where they stand," Steel counsel David Lewis said.

Mr. Lewis contended it was improper to criticize the local leadership for holding out hope to the members that a Steel victory would give Canadian Labor Congress-which they wanted-without becoming absorbed into the Steelworkers union.

CANCELS REWARD

LONDON (AP) — An insurance company cancelled a reward worth $1,000 worth of missing diamonds turned up in the customs department at Paris' Orly Airport. The gems disappeared on route to an exhibition at the Louvre and the company offered a reward of $1,000. The company said it thought the mixup came about because the two packages arrived during a French national holiday.

Guevara pleaded with Cuba's peasants to "produce, produce, and produce more each day" to meet economic needs.

"He also warned of eventual imperialist aggression, but the current war on problems of food distribution and the lack of coordination between workers and government.

Poland's Communist chief Gomulka, while attacking resumption of atmospheric nuclear tests by the United States, called for a "marked increase in export production."

Khrushchev, taking brought the usual threats to "Marxist-Leninist" parties, reports tell us Communist China is chief preoccupation now is with its agricultural problems.

The celebrations offered a sharp contrast to last year's May Day observances, when the Cuban invasion was still fresh, and in the days following May Day of 1960 when the U-2 spy plane incident suddenly raised international tensions to the boiling point.

The current spell of relative quiet, the last is an open question, could be changed at peace is refreshing.

Quebec-Labrador Boundary Line Appears Closer to Solution Than Ever Before

By JOE DUPUIS

MONTREAL (CP) — A problem as old as Canada itself, the Quebec-Labrador boundary, appears closer to solution now than ever before. But don't be too sure.

Labrador has changed hands six times since 1763 when France gave up her Canadian possessions to Britain. The question of its exact boundary remains unsettled despite a 1927 decision of the judicial committee of the Privy Council in London, which drew a wispy, theoretical line giving Newfoundland 113,000 square miles of Labrador territory.

Today, with the lure of mineral riches and vast hydro resources in the developing Canadian mainland, the laying down of precise boundary markers "on the land" is considered vital.

Newfoundland, struggling with two small an income from too few people on too vast a land, looks to mighty Labrador for its economic salvation. Hinher Quebec is anxious to tap its industrial muscle in the north country but finds that development is stalling for lack of a physical demarcation line. French Canada's reluctant to proceed with development that could unknowingly spill over into Labrador.

The big question remains: How to make on the ground a visible boundary running along a twisting height of land in country barren and treeless but covered with thousands of lakes, many with no outlet? It's like trying to paint a line on the choppy Atlantic.

The dividing line is not at all easy," says Newfoundland's Premier Joseph Smallwood in understatement. He and Premier Jean Lesage of Qebec have had at least one private discussion about it. Mr. Smallwood said he and the Quebec premier agreed to recommend to their cabinets that engineers from the two provinces get together to "spell out the border on the ground."

Premier Smallwood maintains that only a four- or five-mile strip of the Labrador coast, at Schefferville, Que., site of one of the richest iron ore deposits in the world—is in dispute. Premier Lesage has declined to commit himself on this point. But Quebec's surveying office disputes the contention.

In geographical parlance, the boundary runs true north from the eastern boundary of Quebec at Anse Sablon as far as the 52nd degree north latitude. It follows the 52nd latitude west to the Eagle Hawk River, then northward along the east bank of the Romaine to its headwaters. Between that point and Cape Chidley far to the north it follows the crest of the watershed of the rivers flowing into the Atlantic.

Both governments agree the problem might have been solved more easily before the rush to exploit the area's mineral wealth. Now, thorny situations exist such as at Schefferville where mining pits of the Iron Ore Company of Canada straddle the undefined border. The company pays arbitrary royalties to both provinces. As the border now is drawn, the lion's share of the iron range is in Labrador.

Quebec government sources say demarcation can only be done by surveying, cost of which has been estimated between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000.

Georges Cote, a boundary commissioner who heads Quebec's lands and forests surveying service, says only solution is friendly negotiations but "both sides will have to be ready to give and take."

James D. Higgins, prominent St. John's, Nfld., lawyer and authority on the boundary, says the only way the problem can be permanently resolved is through outright sale of Labrador. Premier Smallwood estimates Labrador would be a bargain at $1,200,000,000 but adds that "it's not for sale."

Mr. Smallwood says Newfoundland's position was set forth by the Privy Council and confirmed in the British North America Act when Newfoundland joined Canada in 1949.

Louis St. Laurent, prime minister at the time, said that when discussions began on Newfoundland's entry, Ottawa didn't offer to make a contract about the hinterland of Labrador. "We merely made a statement of something which was a fact at the time."

Quebec insists it has no ambitions about acquiring Labrador. A spokesman said what the province wants is to have the border drawn precisely so that there will be no argument over who owns iron and hydro resources.

The late premier Maurice Duplessis refused in 1946 to allow the Labrador line, as drawn by the Privy Council, to be shown on Quebec maps because it wasn't precise. It's still not shown although it appears on federal maps.

Quebec, it seems, wants the boundary moved further east. It would like the southern boundary pushed north so that Quebec has an unbroken control of headwaters of potential power sources.

Newfoundland, hard - hit by the Depression in the 1930's, offered to sell Labrador to Quebec for $100,000,000. During the 1939 and the 40s Premier Joseph de Champlain, visited Newfoundland a number of times trying to promote a sale. His usual price was $100,000,000. It was never clearly established what he included.

A 1946 study of Newfoundland conducted by eminent educationists said the cause of the boundary dispute was the "obscure and ambiguous phraseology of the imperial statutes and proclamations back in the second half of the 18th century and the first half of the 19th century" tossed Labrador back and forth like a shuttlecock between the two colonies.

Britain, faced with the task of administering the vast land ceded by France, entrusted Labrador to Capt. Thomas Graves, governor of Newfoundland. He was to rule over "all the coast of Labrador, from the entrance of Hudson Straits, including to the River Romaine, which empties into the sea, the Island of Anticosti to the west and the Island of Madelaine in the Gulf of St. Lawrence."

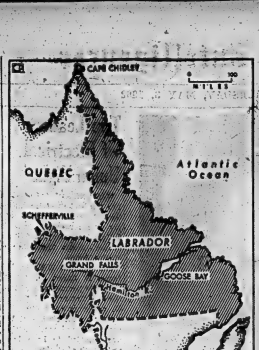
Ten years later Graves' successor, Hugh Palliser, determined to create a fishing monopoly on the coast, closed Labrador to Quebec fishermen.

The howl of protest from Quebec forced Britain a year later to turn Labrador over to Canada. It was a mistake. Quebec neglected the fisheries. Americans moved in on the coast to collect illicit trade.

Appeals from an enraged Newfoundland prompted Britain in 1809 to re - annex Labrador and Anticosti — but not Madeline — to Newfoundland. The settlement didn't satisfy Quebec.

In 1825 a compromise satisfactory to both sides was reached in the passing of the British North America (Seigniorial Rights) Act which created a no - man's land of Labrador where neither Canadians nor Newfoundlanders had jurisdiction.

The issue lay dormant for 63 years until 1888 when a Newfoundland judge, Sir Robert Pinsent, protested about administration of justice on the coast, asked the British government to define a boundary.



His appeal was placed before an 1892 Halifax conference on Confederation. Nothing came of it because the conference decided "it was of little importance."

The whole problem was tossed into the laps of the Privy Council for a final solution. Arguments were still incomplete when war broke out in 1914. It wasn't until 1927 that the Privy Council finally had all the facts and was able to make its decision.

Newfoundland presented three main arguments. First was the commission to Governor Graves and the Seigneurial Rights Act. Canada argued that the only reservation in Mr Graves was that he assure "open and free fishing" on the coast.

The Graves proclamation was perhaps the most crucial argument. Canadian claims that Newfoundland was merely "a fishing station" at the time and not a colony were offset by the phrase "our governor or Newfoundland" in the proclamation. This clearly indicated Britain considered the island a colony. Newfoundland also produced maps of the Labrador peninsula published before 1854 which gave her as much territory as the now owns. Canada contended the maps were the work of "uninformed individuals."

Finally, Newfoundland outlined acts of administration and occupation historically performed in Labrador by the Newfoundland government. Canada described these acts as "so few, so trifling and so outlines boundary as established in decision of the judicial committee of the Privy Council in London in 1927 and as it's shown today on federal maps.- (CP Newsmap.)

BORDER IN DISPUTE — The old problem of locating exactly the boundary between Quebec and Labrador has flared again. Apparently in dispute is a four or five-mile strip of the 2,000-mile border—around the mineral-rich area of Schefferville, Que.

widely scattered in time as to be of little essential value."

The Privy Council decision of March 1, 1927, was put forth in eight massive volumes of more than 4,000 pages.

The judicial committee supported the height-of-land theory advanced by Newfoundland because it was consistent with international law which assumes that "the occupation of a sea coast carries with it the right to the whole territory drained by the rivers which empty their waters into it."

It accepted Newfoundland's case except for one claim that the boundary line should be continued west across the Romaine River to the height of land. This would have given Newfoundland part of recognized Quebec territory.

Canadian Teacher Says Congolese Shifting Toward Tshombe as No 1 Leader

By BERNARD DUFRESNE

LEOPOLDVILLE (CP) — A Canadian teacher from Trois-Rivieres, Que., says Congolese in the wild interior of The Congo are shifting towards acceptance of Moise Tshombe of secessionist Katanga province as the country's No. 1 leader.

Roger Garceau, 37, director of a boys' high school at Kikwit, 250 miles southeast of Leopoldville, says the change is occurring even in areas, such as Kikwit, that were solidly in favor of the late Patrice Lumumba, the Communist-leaning ex-premier who was Tshombe's sworn enemy.

"The Congolese in the interior," said Garceau during an interview here, "are hungry and see no prospect of better things.

"They know that in Katanga province Tshombe's people are working and earning money and are well-fed.

"They consider Tshombe as a great leader who is taking care of his people. And because the United Nations is doing nothing for them, their support is going to Tshombe in the hope of a better deal."

WITNESSED BLOODSHED

Garceau, who witnessed the demands of the Congolese in 1958 and 1959 for independence from Belgium, the post-independence riots, bloodshed and flight of Belgian settlers, made this flat prediction:

"Unless the UN does something quickly to improve the conditions the same thing will happen to it and its personnel as happened to the Belgians. They will be driven out. Then the Belgians will be welcomed back, stronger than ever."

The slightly - built, plain-spoken teacher said the UN's armed intervention in Katanga affairs last Autumn to oust foreign mercenaries from the army did much to drive the Congolese generally into Tshombe's camp.

In the eyes of people in the interior, Tshombe's recent stay in Leopoldville to negotiate a reconciliation between his secessionist province and the central government's Premier Cyrille Adoula stamps him as a man trying to help all Congolese.

LAY MISSIONARY

Garceau, a bachelor and lay missionary of the Roman Catholic Church, came to The Congo four years ago at the invitation of Roman Catholic missionaries. Before that he had helped establish a system of schools in Israel from 1948 to 1956 and was a teacher in Egypt for a couple of years.

He seems to have become strongly attached to the Congolese in the bush. He has learned two of their dialects—Linguala and Kilongo—and has devised a simplified method to teach them to new missionaries. When he speaks of people of the interior he uses the pronoun "we."

"I am one of them," he explains with a smile.

Garceau came to Leopoldville to seek help from the UN for his school. The Kikwit Hospital run by nuns, and the 50,000 population now facing famine.

He said there will be no manioc crop this year. Manioc, a root that natives pound into flour, is a staple of the Congolese. It takes two years to grow.

"In 1960," he said, Lumumba promised the Congolese that tractors would come down from heaven to help them grow manioc. So they did not bother to sow for another crop. Of course, the tractors never came and now they have nothing."

The normal Kikwit population of 30,000 has been swelled by 20,000 refugees from Kasai Province and from the Portuguese colony of Angola, putting further strain on available food supplies.

RUSSIAN FOODS

Until recently he was able to feed his 170 pupils—all boarders—and his mixed staff of European and Congolese teachers with Russian flour and dried fish, gifts made during Lumumba's short-lived reign as boss of The Congo in 1960.

In Leopoldville he obtained a promise from the central government of enough rice, bread and dried fish to feed his students until the end of May. He hopped other sources for meat, eggs, poultry and jam for his teachers.

"What we really need are medical supplies," he said. "There isn't a drop of iodine or a single aspirin in Kikwit. Baraboli Congolese must walk on their footsores because the hospital has no bandages or medicine for them. The hospital isn't taking any more patients because the platers have nothing to treat them with."

Garceau said "appeals have been made to the UN here but they were turned down because, officials said, they had received no orders from New York."

Apart from the missionaries and teachers and four or five Portuguese traders, all other whites have left Kikwit, once a prospering centre of the palm oil industry. The palm plantations are rapidly returning to jungle because there are no whites to organize the work and no market.

Garceau said he plans to visit Canada this summer, for the first time in three years, to seek assistance from friends.

Speaking Of Baseball Managers

'Uneasy Lies The Head'

NEW YORK (AP)—The baseball season is less than a month old but already there are mumblings of impending managerial changes.

According to the grapevine, two big league managers are on shaky ground while two others have decided to pass the job on to others at the end of the current campaign.

The unassist of all 30 major league pilots must be Mickey Vernon, the soft-spoken gentleman who runs the Washington Senators of the American League. The alarmists would have you believe that only a big victory over Boston Red Sox Tuesday saved Mickey's job. They think it's only a short-term reprieve since the Senators are bound to fall into another four losing slump, similar to their recent 13-game debacle.

The same skeptics insist that Sam Mele of Minnesota Twins is feeling the hot breath of club owner Calvin Griffith on the back of his neck.

A usually reliable source said Casey Stengel already has informed George Weiss, president of the National League New York Mets, to start looking for a prospective manager for the Mets for 1963. From Boston it's reported that Mike Higgins, the popular American League Red Sox manager, has decided to take off his uniform at the expiration of this season and move into the club's front office.

Buffalo Suns Tied For Lead

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Buffalo has used the home run punch and Jacksonville the sharp pitching of Joe Schaffernoth to move into a tie for the top in the International League.

Schaffernoth, who didn't win a game last season, fired a sharp four-hitter to bring Jacksonville a 3-1 victory over Toronto Wednesday night. Home runs accounted for all the Buffalo runs in the Bisons' 6-4 triumph over Atlanta.

Atlanta, which had taken first place only the night before, dropped to second place, a half game behind Jacksonville and Buffalo. Rochester, which entered 4-2 before 14,739 in Rochester's home opener and Columbus took Syracuse 8-6 in the others.

Schaffernoth, who had a combined 0-3 record with three teams last season, struck out 10 and retired 18 men in order in fashioning his victory over Toronto.

STRIKES KEY BLOW

Norm Gigon, Jerry Reimer and Wim Frey each stroked a two-run homer off loser Harry Fanok to provide Buffalo all the runs. Bob Burda's two - run single was the key blow as Atlanta fell to a 3-0 lead in the first inning, then lost it to the Buffalo power.

Rookie Ray Youngdahl drove in two runs with two singles and Sam Bowens had two doubles to lead Rochester past Richmond. Sixth inning doubles by Bowens and Pete Ward and Youngdahl's second single provided the winning margin.

Bob Bailey's two-run single clinched Columbus' three-run uprising in the sixth. It was all the 6-to-5 Silverbout Smith needed in picking up the victory, but Will Stargell and Gary Rushing hit homers to build the margin. Frank Jackie had a homer for Syracuse.

The Trots

MONTREAL (CP)—A muddy track held down Lord Dares' winning time to 2:13 3-5 for the mile, Wednesday night in a $1,500 feature for 3-2 pacers at Richelieu Park.

But the six-year-old bay horse was still 2¼ lengths ahead of Roy McGregor with Meadow Bucky two more behind.

Lord Dares returned $18.60, $7.20 and $5.50.

Lisbon Wins Soccer Cup

AMSTERDAM (AP) — The Benfica soccer team of Lisbon, fighting back after trailing 2-0 defeated Real Madrid 5-3 Wednesday night to retain the European Cup of Champions.

A crowd of 65,000 was treated to a dazzling display of goal shooting by the two teams.

Real led 2-0 at halftime. Benfica roared back in the second half as Da Silva Eusebio, the 19-year-old star from Mozambique, scored two goals.

As the game ended Portuguese fans swarmed onto the field. They tore off the red shirts of the Benfica players as souvenirs and carried their heroes shoulder high and bore from the waist-up to the touchline.

Ference Purkez of Real, former captain of the Hungarian team, cracked home three goals of a dazzling display in the first half.

Joe Aguas, Domiciano Cavim and inside-left Mario Coluna got the other goals for Benfica.

Memorial Cup Finals

Wants Home-Home Series

HAMILTON (CP) — Kenneth D. Reddy, owner of Hamilton Red Wings, suggested Wednesday night that the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association should consider changing the Memorial Cup final to a home-and-home series between the junior hockey champions of Eastern and Western Canada.

The series at present alternates between East and West.

Reddy was addressing the seventh annual Memorial Cup dinner attended by 1,000 enthusiasts, Edmonton Oil Kings and the Red Wings, players from 28 previous Memorial Cup teams and officials from professional and amateur hockey. An estimated 500 attended the affair.

Describing the present series setup as archaic, Reddy said: "It's unfair to ask a group of boys to travel 2,000 miles from their homes to compete for hockey's top amateur prize.

"The present series is tough on not only the players but the fans, as well," he added.

MAY LACK FUNDS

"If this series gets the limit, it will mean the teams will have to play seven games in 12 days. I've a hard on the working man—the average hockey fan who quite often finds that he hasn't the money or the time to attend the games.

"I respectfully request that the CAHA consider a home-and-home series, one here and one in Guelph have attracted a total of fewer than 6,500.

Britons Upset by Soccer Ban

TORONTO (CP) — England's top soccer players, impressed by the treatment given their colleagues in Canada last year, are upset by the ban prohibiting English players from playing in this country.

Tommy Younger, Scottish international goalie, said Wednesday he had an international team signed up for Toronto City of the Eastern Canada Professional Soccer League.

However, when the ruling came out those players making their living at the game "shied away" from coming here, he said.

Younger, himself a victim of the ban, arrived here with seven players.

"I was warned that I couldn't play for a team in Canada, but I'm hopeful of getting permission to play in some substitution games," he said.

He said the English League probably ignored the ban because many teams there are paying top wages now and don't want to risk having their stars injured playing in the off-season.

But the players themselves have been eager to come to Canada for the better pay. The average wage of a player here is $100 a week, compared to about $75 in Britain, Younger added.

Snead Seeks Second Win At Vegas

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—Veteran Sam Snead sets out today in quest of his second straight victory in the Tournament of Champions and a major share of its $38,000 purse.

He was slated to tee off with Jay Hebert in the first twosome of the initial round over the 7,000-yard, par-72 Desert Inn Country Club course. The 72-hole event ends Sunday, with the winner collecting $11,000.

Just behind Snead and Hebert were Mike Souchak, the 1959 winner here, and the "man most everyone thinks will win this one, Arnold Palmer.

Harvey Undecided On Future

MONTREAL (CP)—Time has just about run out, but Doug Harvey still hasn't decided whether he will return as playing-coach of New York Rangers next season.

Harvey, who lives in Montreal during the off-season, said Wednesday he is taking a few more days to ponder the decision, although his contract stipulates he must inform his New York employers of his plans by May 1.

Harvey has a three-year contract. In his first year with the Rangers last season he led the team to a playoff position and a record showing at the gate. He also was voted to the National Hockey League's first all-star team.

ELECT OFFICERS

MONTREAL (CP) — Mrs. J. H. Wilson of Hudson, Que., Wednesday was elected president of the Ladies Curling Association of Canada at an apparent heart attack and crashed through the inside rail in the ninth race at Suffolk Downs, Royal Birth, a six-year-old gelding, died minutes later.

Totem Star Named M.V.P.

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP)—Bill MacFarland, team captain of Seattle Totems, has been named the most valuable player in the Western Hockey League for the 1961-62 season, it was announced today.

He led the league in goals and has averaged 32.8 goals a year in six seasons in professional hockey.

Yesterday's narrow, rock-hard high-pressure tires were fastest in the centre.

Today's smooth-riding, road-gripping, low-pressure tires went fastest along the edges.

THAT'S WHY YOU NEED

NEW B.F.GOODRICH SILVERTOWN TIRES

BIG EDGE!

IT PUTS EXTRA RUBBER WHERE THE WEAR IS—ON THE EDGES!

Years ago, tires had to have extra rubber in the tread's centre, where the wear was toughest. But with modern, low-pressure tires, the tire-punishment is on the edges. Most tire makers still pack rubber dead centre. But BFG concentrates extra rubber on the outside edges of their Silvertown tires. It's THE BIG EDGE . . . extra rubber where the wear is. Extra safety; extra mileage, extra economy.

Another exclusive! NEW TREAD RUBBER! Making the most of new-car suspension, BFG worked with car engineers to develop "soft rubber" tires. They smooth bumps beautifully, they're tough yet bounce-free, give a safe, soft, new-car ride.

And they cost no more than other first-linetires! DOUBLEGUARANTEE! BFG Silvertowns are guaranteed a lifetime for workmanship and materials, guaranteed 24 months against blowouts, breaks caused by road hazards of normal driving. Ask your BFG dealer about this DOUBLE GUARANTEE.

TV Viewers Get Chance To See Emmy Show May 22

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — What kind of a yardstick can be used to decide whether The Judy Garland Show, Victoria Regina or Biography of a Bookie Joint was the better television program?

Is it fair to judge the week-in - week - out performances of Carol Burnett on The Garry Moore Show and Perry Como in the same terms and in the same category with Judy Garland, Edie Adams and Yves Montand who starred in one-shot variety specials?

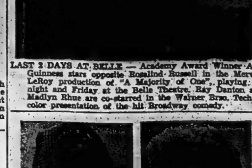
Who gets the short end when voters must say whether the best television drama of the season was a series (Ben Casey, The Defenders, The Dick Powell Show), one program in an anthology series, (People Need People in Premier) or an adaptive of a Broadway hit, Victoria Regina?

The above are among the nominations for Emmys, the little statuettes that are television's equivalent of motion pictures' Oscars. Five nominees have been made in each of 27 different categories—result of a massive effort to reduce the total number. But the big problem—pitting programs and performers of widely varying types against each other — still remains to be solved.

Between now and May 22—when the Emmy Show will be presented on NBC — 4,000 members of the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences will be balloting for the winners.

Recommended tonight:

Sing Along with Mitch, NBC, 10-11 EDT—tribute to composer Irving Berlin;



CBS Reports, 10-11 — Birth Control and the Law, pros and cons on a controversial subject.

AT THE PARK — Leslie Phillips and Joan Sims star with Kenneth Moore, Charles Hawtrey and Ted Ray in the riotous comedy "Carry On Teacher", opening tonight at the Park Theatre. On the same program "Whistle Down the Wind", starring Hayley Mills, Bernard Lee and Alan Bates.

LAST 2 DAYS AT BELLE — Academy Award Winner Alec Guinness stars opposite Rosalind Russell in the Mervyn LeRoy production of "A Majority of One", playing tonight and Friday at the Belle Theatre. Ray Danton and Madlyn Rhue are co-starred in the Warner Bros. Technicolor presentation of the hit Broadway comedy.

AT THE BELLEVILLE DRIVE-IN — Troy Donahue and Connie Stevens co-star in Warner's Technicolor hit "Susan Slade", opening tonight at the Belleville Drive-In Theatre. 2nd new Warner hit also in color features George Montgomery in the action-packed story "The Steel Claw".

'Day of Wine and Roses' Good Movie Says Lemmon

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "It's not enough for a movie to be merely good nowadays," reasons Jack Lemmon. "It's got to be more than that."

That's why he's picking his pictures with even more care than he has in the past: Good isn't good enough.

"By the time a guy lines up a sitter, takes his wife out to dinner, fights traffic, pays for parking, sees a movie and gets home, he's gone through $15 and a heck of a lot of trouble," said Lemmon. "You can't get him to do that with just another movie. It's got to be a West Side Story.

"What I'm looking for is not just a comedy, a drama or a romance; it must be all three. I found it in The Apartment. I think we've also got it in this picture."

This picture" was Days of Wine and Roses, and Lemmon had just finished the last scene. While waiting for the post-production party to begin, he expounded on his hopes for the film.

"Of course, everything always looks rosy on the last day of a picture," he admitted. "But I think we've got a good chance with this one.

"There are no compromises, no concessions. It's realism and it's pretty strong stuff. We just run five-six minutes, just the way people talk. This picture we could show in Europe with no apologies. We use European realism with Hollywood know-how in production technique.

"This role was the biggest challenge I've ever had. Bigger than Mister Roberts. Bigger than Some Like It Hot. Yes, even bigger than The Apartment. If it comes off the way we hope it will—watch out!"

Lemmon described Day of Wine and Roses as "a triangle — a girl, a guy and a bottle." It's the story of how a young businessman uses booze to bolster his confidence, induces his wife to join him in drinking, then both of them become alcoholics. Lee Remick plays the wife.

AT THE PARK — Hayley Mills stars as Kathy in "Whistle Down the Wind", opening tonight at the Park Theatre for its first Belleville and District showing. She plays one of a group of children who find a murderer on the run and hide him in the barn. Bernard Lee and Alan Bates also star. On the same program the riotous comedy "Carry On Teacher" starring Kenneth Moore and Joan Sims.

Kentucky Derby

'Yer Pays Yer Money---?

It doesn't figure to be any different Saturday when a field of three - year - old horses break from Churchill Downs' barrier in the 88th running of the $125,000-added turf classic.

If you like horses tall and rangy with plenty of muscle in the hind quarters and with a broad chest, then your derby choice should be silver Mr. Moody Jolley Eddie or Fred Turner Jr.'s Sir Ribot. They are built and fed to go to the Derby distance of 1¼ miles.

C. T. Chenery's Sir Gaylord, the 5-2 favorite, is not as heavy as either of these two, a wise choice, or the well – liked Sir Ribot.

Sir Gaylor's stablemate, Citeras, may not be in the starting field.

Trainer Casey Hayes said he planned to drop the name of his sire filly in the entry box today but that she will be a Derby starter only if something happens to Sir Gaylord. Otherwise, Citeras, by Mr. Friday's $35,000-added Kentucky Oaks fix fillies with 13 entries and 17 starters the Derby will have a gross value of $184,650, with the winner picking up $132,150.

Suggests Return to Bare Fists

MT. VERNON, N.Y. (AP)— A return to bare-knuckle fighting might cut down on boxing injuries and deaths.

That was one of the suggestions today of a panel of doctors who make a close study of sports injuries. The panel reported in Medicine in Sports, a newsletter issued by the Rystan company.

Two of the six doctors on the panel called for abolishing professional boxing. The others recommended changes.

Allan J. Ryan, vice-president of the American College of Sports Medicine, came out for eliminating gloves entirely! He said the thick, wrapped layers of bandages and covered with an eight-ounce glove, "assure some of the weight and rigidity of a hammer."

The panel's split on hand, he said, could not "be used with impunity against the head."

Dr. Ryan also called for outlawing professional boxing and concentrating on the amateur sport.

Harry A. Zaplen, a physician associated with the New York commission, said the knockout in boxing may actually be even less damaging to the brain "than the pummelling and ejection sustained in a 15- and 12-round bout."

By DENNIS ORCHARD

VANCOUVER (CP)—It took a large measure of self-confidence to jump at 39 to hockey coaching—to a new career in investment.

Gus Kyle did it, and his venture has been a huge success, but there's a catch.

He wants back into hockey now, too.

The onetime cop, National Hockey League defenceman and sporting goods dealer titled last year of saying "yes" to his boyhood in the Calgary Exhibition and Stampede board.

He quit as manager-coach of the Calgary Stampeders of the Western Hockey League and took a turn at selling suits and hats out of Saint John, N.B. He has since moved to Vancouver as branch manager and he's the golden boy of his young company.

He thinks he can stay in the work and if a nearby WHL club is interested, grace a coaching bench with his 240 pounds this fall.

BATTLED WITH DUTTON

Kyle resigned over a battle with Red Dutton, who insisted on running Stampeders from his presidential spot on the board, just as he runs his construction empire in western Canada.

Kyle would like to have stayed in Calgary, possibly in a double role as coach and area representative for the company. He had been studying the investment business for three years and negotiating with the firm for a job.

Dutton kept a tight hold on the club's purse strings, vetoed Kyle's plans to hire and fire players, and as Gus says, left his team with the impression Kyle was a "company man at the bell with the players."

Out he went — apparently through with the game after three banking seasons with New York Rangers and Boston and Bruins, a few more as captain of the Stampeders and four as player-coach.

He had won two league championships, a Memorial Cup and two to the playoff final, and sent a raft of players up to the NHL, including Bill Hicke, Red Hay.

If he can get back in now, he would like it on his terms. The coach's job only and power to buy and sell players as he chooses. He would like to move to one boss and not seven or eight. He would keep it his if club had a close tie-in with one from the NHL.

He would settle for less, if necessary, and would have to if he wanted to be with Vancouver Canucks. When Coley Hall left Vancouver and sold Canucks to the Pacific National Exhibition the club was left owning a few old veterans and a tenuous link with Eddie Shore, boss of Springfield Indians. Canucks certainly finished last in the league's northern division.

Kyle reports "two or three" coaching offers from the American League, but that's too far away for his liking.

He says he knows players and has the ability to get the most out of them.

Make him an offer this fall, and he'll take another swing at it. After all, it's grist for the mill.

He went cold into Saint John and quickly won a company contest for sales that sent him to the world series. Last winter, after he garnered investments that pushed beyond six figures, he was awarded for a trip with his wife to Hawaii.

A coaching job would add to his list of contacts.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor.

If perchance you drop by a local baseball diamond some of these balmy evenings or Saturday afternoons you might hear the P.A. system announce something like this:

"Keller now pitching for Keller; Keller will run for Keller; Keller replacing Keller in right field; Keller batting for Keller; Umpire Keller calls Keller out at the plate and ejects Coach Keller from the game."

Don't change your brand or check the hearing aid. Don't examine yourself for mental illness symptoms or rive up smoking filtered cigarets. There is nothing wrong with you. There IS an all-Keller baseball squad.

Yup, right here in the city the Keller Klan can trot out a complete baseball team, all nine of 'em. They can add a coach, an umpire and three pinch-hitters or utility players, all of whom would answer "Here" should somebody sing out "Keller" in a roll-call.

You won't mistake any of them for Mickey Mantle or Roger Maris, Willie Mays or Stan Musial. But when they get together and jell their baseball talent they have a heluva lot of fun. They are organized within themselves and occasionally a bunch of the boys of the district team up to give the Kellers a chance to play ball.

In ages they range from 32 to 21. Eight of them are brothers. Fathers and sons play on the squad. Cousins and uncles help round out the roster.

Here is the lineup as given me by the Keller Baseball Team's public relations manager: "Cozy" Keller will pitch. Cecil will catch. On first is Ron; Irvin holds down second and Harold is at shortstop. On third is John and in left field is Terry. Elrie is the right fielder with Pug in centre.

"Nib" Keller is the head of the clan and chief umpire. Norm is the coach who has three reserve players on hand: Fred, Herb and Bud. All can field and hit.

The total brothers are: Nib (51), Norm (42), Fred (39), Bud (36), Cozy (33), Cecil (48), and Harold (53). They are the sons of the late Walter Keller.

The 53-year-old Harold who cavorts around shortstop keeps a watchful eye on his two sons, Pug in centre and Ron at first.

Catcher Cec at 48 doesn't favor his left fielder offspring Terry. Umpire "Nib" doesn't give sons John on third, Irvin on second and Elrie in right field any breaks when they come sliding into the plate.

It seems like the Keller clan has a lot of fun, and if they have any troubles, baseball-wise, they keep them in the family. I do not know what would happen if any trouble started but I imagine it it did the top chairmen, Harold and Nib, would sound the "Charge" and the whole Keller Kavalry troop would come arunnin'.

I believe the Keller baseball team is the only one of its kind in Ontario, if not in Canada. As I said the Kellers will never be mistaken for the New York Yankees but I imagine if any other family can produce nine baseball players, the Kellers would be happy to take them on in a Family World Series.

Howard Throttles Yankee Runaway

Homer Nips White Sox

By Jim Hackleman
Associated Press Sports Writer

"They can't get me out." That's Elston Howard's credo.

The rangy New York Yankee catcher doesn't say it with cockiness, but with quiet confidence. It was his simple explanation last year when he was a prominent member of the all-star Yankee cast with his dazzling .348 average, and again this spring when he started off the season in rapid-fire style.

Now, after a slight skid, Howard is hot again. He powered the blazing Bombers over Chicago White Sox 4-3 Wednesday night with a ninth inning homer—his second in as many games and fourth of the season.

By bringing the Yankees from behind, Howard keyed them to their seventh successive victory and the runaway may be on. The streak has carried the Yanks 3½ games in front of the American League with the season still in the shakedown stage.

In the other AL night game, Kansas City Athletics cut loose in an extra-base extravaganza against Detroit Tigers and outscored them 13-8. Prize rookie John (Boog) Powell smashed a pair of two-run homers for Baltimore as the Orioles beat Minnesota Twins 6-5 in the afternoon. Bad weather knocked out the other games on the schedule—Boston at Washington and Los Angeles at Cleveland.

THWARTED ROOKIE

White Sox rookie Joel Horlen (1-2) turned back Howard in his first three times up and held the Yanks to five hits as he took a 3-2 lead into the ninth. Then Yogi Berra opened up with a single and Howard promptly cashed in on his last chance with an opposite-field homer into Comiskey Park's right-field seats.

Yankee starter Ralph Terry doled out only three hits but trailed 3-2 when he gave way in the seventh to Jim Coates (2-0), who checked the White Sox on one single over the last three innings.

For Howard, the win-up was a typical case of from-goat-to-hero. He bounced out with two on in the first, struck out in the fourth, and fanned again in the sixth with two aboard. But Horlen went too far with a good thing in the ninth. Howard explained that point later:

"I got the homer on an outside pitch—the same one he struck me out on before."

CIMOLI SPARKLES

The Athletics whacked left-hander Don Mossi (2-3) and reliefer Sam Jones for 11 hits and 13 runs in four innings, and wound up their barrage against Ron Kline. Gino Cimoli opened their seven-run second with a single, climaxing it with a two-run double, and adding another double later.

All told, Kansas City banged out 15 hits — including homers by Norm Siebern and Wayne Causey, two triples and five doubles. Al Kaline and Dick Brown had a homer plus two singles each for the Tigers, while Bill Bruton also hit a homer. Rookie Johny Wyatt (2-1) picked up the victory in relief.

Almost lost in the slugging was Detroit's fifth straight pinch hit, tying the league record.

Powell, the massive 20-year-old blonde with a big reputation and the muscles to match, bombed his first two major league homers and decided the Orioles' close one over the Twins. The much - publicized newcomer poled a 370-footer against southpaw Jim Kaat (1-3) in the third and gave Baltimore a 4-0 lead with a 340-foot homer off right-hander Ted Sadowski in the fifth.

Minnesota Bruno Haney Brown (1-2) was the winner.

Grab 3-1 Cup Lead

Trail Smokies Whip Olympics

TRAIL, B.C. (CP) — Late-game swariness hit Montreal Olympics again Wednesday night and sent Trail Smoke Eaters a step closer to the Allan Cup championship.

The Olympics were on their own ice but the Smokies scored three third-period goals for a 6-4 victory and a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven series for the Canadian senior hockey crown.

Trail could wrap things up in the fifth game Friday night. The sixth and seventh games, if needed, are set for Saturday and Monday.

The absence of forward George James and a match penalty to left - winger John Mentis hurt Montreal, but coach Maurice Filion said the big army was Trail's altitude. The Smelter City is much higher than Montreal and the difference in wind left the Olympics gasping in the late stages.

DIE IN THIRD

"It's the third period that kills us up here," Filion said. "The guys get to the bench and they're just dying."

The Olympics had held their own 2-2 before the Smokies struck for three goals in an eight-minute span in the third.

Adolf Tambellini, Cal Hockley, Dave Russell and Harry Smith scored for Trail. Roger Picard scored early in the second period for Montreal.

Tambellini opened the scoring at 3:26 of the first period by shooting in a rebound after Montreal netminder Andre Hebert kicked out Russell's drive. Smokies were a man short on a penalty at the time.

Tempers flared into a stick-swinging duel seven minutes later and referee Hugh McLean finally ordered Mentis and Ed Pollesel out of the ice dressing room with match penalties. Most of the men on the ice were involved in the skirmish.

Mentis and Pollesel were hit with automatic $10 fines. Their case will go before officials of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association for review. The CAHA can suspend them, impose further fines or let them off with a reprimand.

The brawl also resulted in Noel Picard of Montreal and Hal Jones of Trail getting five-minute major penalties.

Early KO Boasts Liston

By Jack Hand

NEW YORK (AP)—"Big men usually make big talk. In the ring it may be a little different."

World heavyweight boxing champion Floyd Patterson made the comment Wednesday after challenger Sonny Liston of Philadelphia said he would knock out Patterson in three or four rounds when they meet—somewhere—in September. Liston opened his training camp in the Catskill Mountains Wednesday.

"It's a strange thing about a person's outlook," Patterson said in a telephone interview. "When I meet a fighter at a weigh-in, or some place else, like when I met Liston at the boxing writers' dinner, they seem to me to be twice my size.

"Then, when I get in the ring with them, I feel twice their size. I've had this happen to me since my amateur days. It's always the same.

"Liston can say anything he wants but he's not going to scare me. Talk is cheap and means nothing. What happens in the ring is what counts. We'll see then."

Patterson is more concerned about setting up a return fight, which New York turned down.

Chicago has the edge, with Washington and Baltimore next in line. Talk is cheap, and who has the final say on the city.

SOUTH FALLSBURG, N.Y. (AP)—It was a raw, damp day in the Catskills, A cold rain splashed against the windows of the plush country club - hotel where Sonny Liston is camping out.

The challenger for the world heavyweight boxing title arrived here Wednesday. His entourage included six men identified as trainer, cut man, gym helper, sparring partner, secretary and attorney. The attorney helped him answer some of the more troublesome questions from reporters.

Jose Torres, a Puerto Rican middleweight who has been—and still is, as far as is known here—a stablemate of heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson, was on hand to interview Sonny for a Spanish language paper.

Did Liston consider Torres a "pro"?

"I know Jose for a long time," said Liston. "Look, I box in the gym! Sometimes I'm going to fight."

After a short pause, he added, "Patterson can come up here too, if he wants to."

Patterson is training some 30 or 40 miles down the road. Is Liston going for a knockout?

"That's my plan," said Sonny. "I'm going to cut it short. One way or the other, the fight is going to end short."

Liston recently was turned down by the New York State Athletic Commission when he applied for a license. He said he wasn't surprised.

"I don't care where we fight," he said. "I don't feel bad about being turned down in New York."

ENTERS RACE

TORONTO (CP)—Dan Gurney of Riverside, Calif., will drive in the 200-mile sports car race at the Mosport track June 9, it was announced Wednesday. Gurney, who will drive a Lotus 19, finished in a third-place tie with Stirling Moss of England last year in the world drivers' championship.

Cardinals, Cubs Win

Mays Homer Gives Giants 8 In Row

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

San Francisco Giants have come up with a formidable three-at combination — Mays, Marichal and marriage—that's got them sitting atop the National League with their longest winning streak since the club moved west in 1958.

The Giants stretched their string to eight games Wednesday, whipping Pittsburgh Pirates 3-2 on a homer by Willie Mays that snapped a 2-2 tie and provided Juan Marichal with the run he needed to post the sixth consecutive route-going performance by San Francisco pitchers.

It was home run No. 8 for Mays, who has hit four in the last seven games while swinging away at a .400 clip, and the second game in a row he won for Marichal. He lagged a homer when Marichal started the route-going cycle last Saturday.

Marriage has been even more of a help to Marichal. The 24-year - old fireballing righthander, who broke into the majors by hurling a one-hitter, settled down domestically before the season started and has settled down on the mound since.

TOP GIANT STAFF

The victory over the Pirates, sending them to their sixth loss in eight games, was Marichal's fourth in six decisions, and his third complete game. He was 13-10 for the 1961 campaign, but has been the No. 1 man on the Giants staff this season.

In the other NL games played, Bob Gibson hurled a five-hitter for St. Louis Cardinals that throttled Houston Colts 4-1 and Bob Buhl and Don Elston combined for a three-hitter as Chicago Cubs defeated Los Angeles Dodgers 3-2. The Cincinnati-New York and Milwaukee - Philadelphia games were rained out.

Marichal gave up the two runs in the first inning on a single against Ken Francis (1-3) in the fifth on a single by Felipe Alou, Jose Pagan's double and a single by Jim Davenport. Mays won it in the sixth.

STREAKS IMPRESSIVE

The Giants' extended three streaks besides those for wins and complete games. Mays' homer was the 15th consecutive in which the Giants have hit at least one. Francis' failure to last the distance was the 22nd straight game in which an opposing pitcher has failed to go nine innings and Giants' fielders now have handled 30 chances without an error.

Gibson (3-1), who limited the Colts to two hits last week, allowed a run on Jim Pendleton's homer in the second inning. The Cardinals then went ahead to stay in the fourth with three runs on Bill White's homer, a single by Ken Boyer, a two-base error by Al Spangler on Minnie Minoso's line drive, a fielder's choice and Julio Gotay's squeeze bunt that went for a hit. The victim was Ken Johnson (0-4).

Buhl (1-1), making his first appearance since the Cubs acquired him in a trade with Milwaukee, allowed the Dodgers only two hits for six innings, both in the first. Elston came on when Buhl appeared to tire. The Cubs, snapping a seven-game losing streak, wrapped it up on Andre Rodgers' two-run double in the fourth and added an insurance tally in the seventh on Jim McKnight's run-scoring single. Wally Moon's homer accounted for the lone Dodger run.

Defeat Trenton 2-1

Crawfords Win Title

Belleville Crawford Metals captured the Bay of Quinte Basketball League championship and the Labatt trophy before a large crowd in Trenton last night, edging last year's champion Trenton Wilson squad 67-65.

The win gave Crawfords the titular series two games to one after losing the first game of the series.

The Wilsons went down fighting last night. Belleville led by 12 points with just over four minutes left in the game but the Trenton club battled back and kept the outcome in doubt until the final whistle.

Trenton ace Bob Burleigh tipped in the Wilsons' final basket with just seven seconds left to play to make it 67-65 but they were unable to get the equalizer.

The game was hard-fought but clean most of the way with the Crawfords holding a 33-27 lead at the halfway mark. Foul shooting made the difference for the Belleville cheerups as they made good on 18 of 22 free throw attempts compared to 12-for-25 for Trenton.

Belleville lost the services of Bert Frokiner with about three minutes left in the game when he was ejected for roughing Burleigh. Warren Whitney of Trenton fouled out midway through the second half.

Once again Teddy Batchelor was the big scoring gun for the Crawfords. He potted 25 points for the second consecutive game. Bill Green also played a strong game for the winners and hooped 15 points.

Bob Burleigh led the Trenton attack with 17 points. Will Borden and Gil Bambers each had 11.

Trenton Wilsons (65) — B. Burleigh 17, C. Crews 3, W. Borden 11, E. Clarke 4, G. Bambers 11, M. Jeffrey 8, J. Theriault 7, W. Whitney 2.

Kuenn Out For Week

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—San Francisco manager Alvin Dark said Wednesday it may be next week before injured outfielder Harvey Kuenn can return to the Giants' lineup.

Kuenn, spiked in the big toe last Wednesday at Pittsburgh, was one of the Giants' leading hitters with a .352 average for 15 games.

DESERONTO
Grass Fires Plague Fire Department
DESERONTO — The plague of grass fires continued to be a menace to the local fire department last week. On Friday they were called to Lonsdale where a fire had gotten beyond control of the family of Brooks Allen and was spreading across the field toward the home of Claude McRae. The firemen, with the assistance of a number of men from the Lonsdale vicinity, controlled the flames before it could reach the McRae home. A good many feet of cedar rail fence was destroyed but no further damage was done.
On Saturday afternoon they were called to Waddingham's bridge in the Lonsdale area where the plank flooring of the bridge had caught fire. A passing motorist saw the flooring blazing as he crossed the bridge and notified Arthur Waddingham. Mr. Waddingham called the Deseronto fire department and then proceeded to the bridge to combat the fire. Fortunately because of his prompt action only about two planks were destroyed before the fire was put out, but the fire not been noticed the complete destruction of the bridge would have burned in a very short time as the wind was blowing at the time and fanning the blaze.

Fog Disrupts Diefenbaker's Newfie Program

By JIM NELSON

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Prime Minister Diefenbaker, confronted with fog and traditional Newfoundland Liberalism, carried his June 18 election campaign into Newfoundland Wednesday.

Making his first visit of the campaign to this Liberal stronghold—Liberals held five of the seven Newfoundland seats in the last Parliament—Mr. Diefenbaker had to log some unexpected road miles and pass up some of his original program.

Fog and low - hanging rain clouds forced the prime minister to put short his St. John's visit today, just as it delayed his arrival. He was due in the afternoon but land here and he planned an early - morning departure by road for the 88 rough miles he drove Wednesday from the United States to Argentia.

He dropped some dockside handshaking and calls on church and civic leaders, but will speak as scheduled in Corner Brook, Nfld., before returning to Ottawa to prepare for the big formal opening speech of his campaign in London, Ont., Saturday.

Mr. Diefenbaker, in peak oratorical trim, drew 1,000 to the Church Lads Brigade Armoury here despite the fog and rain, the crowd was about the same size he turned out a year ago to hear Liberal Leader Pearson.

CITES PC RECORD

Mr. Diefenbaker's hour-long speech and a 15-minute local television appearance before it were built on the theme that the achievements of the Conservative government in the last five years have been inadequately acknowledged by the people and that they have laid the foundation of future economic achievements if the Conservatives are re-elected.

For Newfoundlanders, he said the first since his government took office in 1957, federal payments to the province have risen to $66,000,000 from $25,700,000 and Premier Smallwood's Liberal government must have been able to provide the services it has without the increase.

"That doesn't look as though we have failed to meet the needs of this province," he said. "We didn't have to do it. It wasn't the first time we were getting from this province. It was done to strengthen confederation."

ITALIANS LEAD

OTTAWA (CP) — The immigration department said Wednesday that during the first three months of the year 11,- 000 immigrants arrived in this country, down from 11,839 a year ago. Immigrants continued to make up the largest since group of newcomers, totalling 2,360, up from 2,174 last year. Newcomers from the U.S. rose to 2,000 from 1,022 in 1961, while those from Britain increased to 1,673 from 1,354.

Pearson Calls Common Market Stand Sterile

By ARCH MacKENZIE

CALGARY (CP) — The government's response to British overtures to be European Common Market has been "petulant and sterile obstruction," Liberal Leader Pearson said Wednesday.

Under Progressive Conservative rule, trade policy hinged on diversion and then dislocation.

A British tree - trade offer, made in response to proposals to divert 15 per cent of Canadian trade to Britain from the United States, had been rejected. Then, when Britain turned toward the Common Market, the government indulged in childish behavior before it recognized that its attitude was out of step with Canadian opinion, Mr. Pearson said.

He spoke to an audience of about 800 filling a high school auditorium, summarizing the election campaign arguments he has emphasized since launching his bid for a June 18 victory a week ago in Prince Edward Island.

SHOWS WEARINESS

He displayed weariness at the end of a day begun in Victoria and continued by charter plane flights over the Rockies and Cranbrook in interior British Columbia—then Lethbridge and Calgary.

He is to make his first major address in Saskatchewan in Weyburn, Sask., tonight, as part of a non - stop circuit. The constituency is Assiniboia, where Hazen Argue, 17 years a CCF member, is the candidate, and now Liberal candidate, seeks re-election.

All 17 Alberta seats were Progressive Conservative after the 1958 election and 14 of Saskatchewan's 17—Mr. Argue excepted.

A small crowd of 100 at Cranbrook in the East Kootenays heard him pledge a new Liberal government to re-examine the Columbia River treaty with the U.S.

The Columbia River treaty allows Canada one of the prize examples of government mismanagement, he said.

A Liberal government would not be opposed in principle to the export of electricity or to the sale of Columbia River power but there must be U.S. for water-storage benefits, he said, but each case must be judged on its merits.

TRY FOR TOO MUCH

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Kraft Foods Ltd., one of the top U.S. rocket experts, Wednesday blamed a tendency to "stretch the rocket to the limit of their capabilities for many U.S. failures in various space ventures. "It would be better to try to get a little bit less than a high probability of failure," the German-born scientist told a press conference at the conclusion of a three-day national meeting on manned space flights.

Wants Govt. Representing Producers

SELKIRK, Man. (CP)—T. C. Douglas put forward again Wednesday the New Democratic Party theme in the election campaign—that Canada is in the grip of an economic dictatorship and that an NDP government would turn it into an economic democracy.

It is time Canada had a government "to represent those who produce the wealth," the NDP leader told a rally of about 500 persons in this town 23 miles north of Winnipeg. He said a few large companies control all major part of the Canadian economy.

Much of the income of the factory, of 8,500 comes from a steel rolling mill. It also is a farm and Lake Winnipeg fishing area. Selkirk and the border point between the federal constituencies of Springfield and Selkirk.

Bob Ridings were won by the Progressive Conservatives in the 1958 general election.

Jake Shilt, a farm leader who once before held Springfield for the CCF, is running again in Springfield and Vakil Arnason, from the Icelandic centre of Gimli on the west side of Lake Winnipeg, is the NDP nominee in Selkirk.

Madoc Junction

MADOC JUNCTION—Miss Valeria Wilson of Brockville, spent the Easter week-end at the home of their grandmother, Mrs. Frank Smith.

Mrs. Harry Clarke left last week for Centralia, where he has been appointed to the O.S.U. Mission staff.

Billy, Eddie and Gerald Stapley visited last Wednesday afternoon at the home of Lloyd Clancy.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Seeley of Ashville, N.Y., spent part of the Easter week with their sisters and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Murney Kirkby.

The farmers have been busy in this district with the spring seeding.

Mr. Harry Clarke was among the members of the Stirling Horticultural Society who journeyed to Brighton last Thursday night, where they were guests of the Brighton Horticultural Society and assisted on the program.

Mr. Gordon Clarke attended the funeral of the late George McMurray on Saturday afternoon. The service was held in the chapel of the Duffin Funeral Home in Stirling. Interment was made in St. Thomas' Church Cemetery in Marysburgh Township.

The regular meeting of the Eggleton U.C.W. is being held next week, May 10th, at the home of Mrs. Warren Harlow of Stirling.

A number from here assisted in fighting a grass fire, which got started west of the Madoc Road on Saturday.

Miss Audrey Stapley visited Mrs. Maurice Clancy on Thursday afternoon.

Stirling

STIRLING — West Hastings District Women's Institutes will hold their annual meeting on Friday, June 1st at Bisbee's Hall, Stirling Church. There will be two sessions and a luncheon picnic will be served at noon by the hostess branch, Canterbury W.I. in the church hall. Sportsmen Discuss Rod, Gun Club

DESERONTO — On Monday night a group of sportsmen from the town gathered to discuss the formation of a Rod and Gun Club for the town and vicinity. The general feeling of the meeting was that the formation of such a group would do much to prevent hunting violations as well as provide supervised sport for the young men of the town.

Some of those present stated that they would be glad to have their sons join a properly supervised club. The group decided to appoint a committee to investigate the formation of a club and discuss the matter with the Boating Club which had tried to organize such a group some before. The committee is composed of Jack Berry, and Ralph Taylor, who will be assisted by M. Detlor. A further meeting will be held at a date later this month.

Present at the meeting was representative of the Carling Club which sponsors a conservation program throughout the province. This gentleman showed an interesting film re self preservation in the woods and on fishing for brook trout.

Field Security Police In the Congo Commanded By Retired Canadian Capt.

By BERNARD DUFRESNE

LEOPOLDVILLE (CP) — A new kind of international police force, designed to protect the many interests of the United Nations in The Congo, is taking shape under the command of a retired Canadian Army captain.

The Field Security Service, once little more than a collection of 60 blue-uniformed guards at headquarters, is expanding its work to many other fields under its director, George R. Tomalin, 46, of Toronto. He hopes soon to triple the size of the force.

Recruiting for former police officers and investigators who speak French is going on wherever they might be found, from Montreal to Beirut, from La Martinique to Hong Kong, La.

An example of the need for such a tough and uncorrupted force can be evided with widespread but whispered reports of wholesale looting in Elisabethville, capital of Katanga province of 1½ members of the Indian UN contingent. Some of the loot reported taken was UN property, some civilian property.

TOOK REFRIGERATORS

During the recent rotation of the contingent through Dar-es-Salaam, Tanganyika, there was talk that the Indians left for home by ship with, among other things, 100 refrigerators, a large quantity of plumbing, expensive furniture and even a couple of doors lifted from a hotel.

The war souvenirs the Indians were engaged in bitter fighting against mercenary-led Katanga troops last autumn were reported shipped from Elisabethville to Dar-es-Salaam by UN chartered aircraft and placed aboard the vessel General Stalcherd for India.

Informants said the shipments included three cars large enough to contain an automobile and added that a Cadillac was reported missing from the garage of Katanga Premier Moise Tshombe.

Tomalin refused to comment on the reports. However, it was learned he made a trip to Dar-es-Salaam recently and that his right-hand man, Victor Bourque, former Montreal harbor policeman, has been sent to Elisabethville on "a special mission."

Possibly the most important quality needed for a job with the security service is the kind of ingenuity that one of Tomalin's men showed when he had to deliver a $15,000,000 shipment of gold.

USED FRUIT TRUCK

He used the back of a truck loaded with fruits and vegetables and driven by a Pakistani soldier to transport the gold from Ndjili airport to UN headquarters here, a distance of about 18 miles.

The guard, a former New York bartender, had been assigned to accompany the shipment by air from Rome to Leopoldville, but due to a mixup in communications there was nobody at the airport to meet him. So he just hitched a ride in town for himself and his precious cargo.

Among the 10 Canadians in the service is Rene St. Louis, 41, former Montreal postal clerk who joined last year and was personal bodyguard for Tshombe during his stay here, under UN protection, for political reconciliation talks with Premier Cyrille Adoula.

St. Louis' experience for that kind of work was a 14-month course with the British Army's Field Security Service, an intelligence unit, during the Second World War.

Then there is a former Argentine soccer player who was stranded, broke and jobless in New York when his professional club folded while on tour. A German, who does a lot of office work in the Security Office, was a member of the Gestapo during the war, was captured, and served four years in a United States prisoner-of-war camp.

TRULY INTERNATIONAL

Tomalin's police force includes 14 Irish policemen, loaned to the UN from Ireland for a three - year period, a former member of the French Surete, and policemen from Spain, Scandinavia, Martinique, the Philippines, the United States, Haiti, Switzerland and the Malagasy Republic (Madagascar).

Tomalin said that after six months he is beginning to iron out the difficulties of bringing these varied police elements to work together along the same lines.

Tomalin retired from the Canadian Army last October to join the UN. During his army career, the former Toronto policeman twice rose from the ranks to officer—once during the Second World War, when he was taken a prisoner by the Germans, and once during the Korean War.

When he arrived here six months ago, there was no administrative procedure at the Security Office, just a list of names of those on the force.

The six-foot-six giant started from scratch, building up records and uniform procedure, and planned operations along the lines of a military police force.

"It has all become quite effective now," he said.

CONGO SECURITY POLICE — A retired Canadian army captain, George R. Tomalin, 46, of Toronto, is director of the Field Security Service, an international police force in The Congo to protect United Nations personnel and equipment. Tomalin (in white shirt) reads a report to three other Canadians (left to right): Jean Latulippe, Montreal; Rene St. Louis, Montreal, former personal bodyguard to Katanga Premier Tshombe; Rene St. Michel, Montreal. Judge Reverses Decision of County Court

TORONTO (CP) — Mr. Justice D. W. Roach Tuesday ruled that alienation of affection is unknown in Ontario law and reversed a $10,000 county court judgment against Clifford Biggs of Burlington, Ont.

The Ontario Court of Appeal decision concurred in by Mr. Justice Arthur Kelly and Mr. Justice J. L. McLennan, was based on an April 24 ruling by the Supreme Court of Canada that there is no separate cause of action for alienation of affections in Ontario.

Biggs, 51, was sued for $30,000 by Ernest Hurley, 46, an Oakville accountant, who claimed Biggs alienated the affections of his wife, Rosina, also 46, of Burlington.

Last Oct. 30, Mr. Justice D. F. J. Kelly ruled, in a 13-day Halton County court action at Milton, Ont., that Biggs should pay $10,000 and costs for alienating Mr. Hurley's affections.

Mr. Justice Kelly said during the trial no evidence had been submitted to prove adultery between Mrs. Hurley and Biggs and that it was not necessary to prove adultery in an alienation of affections suit.

Five Arrested After 154 Killed In Train Wreck

Japanese Engineer Said To Have Misread Signal

TOKYO (AP)—A train engineer and four other railmen involved in Thursday's three-train wreck which killed more than 150 persons were arrested today on suspicion of criminal negligence.

Both houses of Parliament scheduled extraordinary Sunday sessions to begin investigation of the tragedy.

Police, ordering their casualty figures, listed 154 dead and 165 injured. The fire department listed that 152 died and 356 injured, 144 seriously.

The engineer of a freight train involved in the wreck, 38-year-old Horifumi Manakami, was arrested when he made his arrest and told reporters he might have misread a signal.

Arrested with him was his conductor and the engineer and conductor of a commuter train leaving Tokyo which hit the derailed freight, and a station signal man. The three train involved was an inbound commuter train.

"I don't know how I can apologize," Minakami said.

Asahi Shimbun reported later, Shoichi Kimura, chief police investigator, declared:

"We are determined that a green signal light was an important point."

Minakami's freight train jumped the tracks minutes before 9 a.m. (midnight EST) on Tokyo's north side and sideswiped a commuter train filled with Japanese, homeward-bound after a day in the capital celebrating Constitution Day.

Injured, stunned survivors poured out of the passenger train's windows and doors and huddled in the darkness on a nearby track. Then another commuter train roared into the wreckage, killing many. Some of survivors, jumped the tracks and plunged to their embankment into a row of houses.

NO WESTERNERS IN WRECK

It was Japan's second worst train disaster since the Second World War. No Westerners were reported among the victims.

Minakami said he was sure he could "prove good-as-bad" and about 1,150 feet from the collision point "but it might have been my misunderstanding because the accident took place at night and could never have occurred if the light was not green."

He insisted that never before in 18 years of railroading had he passed a red light.

Deny Report Nasser Shot, Perhaps Dead

CAIRO (AP) — A well-informed source denounced as lies today published reports that President Nasser had been shot and wounded by an assassin.

He said the president is "sound and well" and declared "such assertions, all other reports on the United Arab Republic by Radio Israel or pro-Israel newspapers—are baseless and devoid of truth."

The report of the assassination attempt was published in Britain today by the Daily Telegraph, which said the Russell radio Monday "quoted strong reports of an assassination attempt, following this with strong reports that president Nasser had succumbed."

The Telegraph said "at least one Arab state has received the same account. The official word that the assassin was Ali Amer, brother of Field Marshal Abdel Hakim Amer, commander - in - chief of the U.A.R. armed forces.

Sources in Cairo said Lt.-Gen. Ali Amer is chief of staff of the armed forces, but is not the commander in chief's brother.

Kennedy Cuts Orders for More Warheads

NEW YORK (AP)—Pentagon sources have disclosed that President Kennedy has directed the military to cut orders for nuclear warheads by several thousands, the New York Times says today.

A Washington dispatch to the newspaper said that the reduced rate of acquisition would affect mostly the small, battlefield type of weapons, and existing stockpiles would not be altered.

The story also says:

• Pressure on the president's action was taken partly because the nation already possesses more than enough nuclear weapons of certain types.

But the order also coincides with growing concern in the administration over the spread of atomic weapons among the United States troops down to battalion, platoon and squad level as well as to units serving with Allied forces.

The fear is that the profusion of these weapons increases the chances of accidental explosion or, in the case of conflict, their unauthorized use.

Dutch Report Fighting Rages In New Guinea

THE HAGUE (Reuters) — Fighting has broken out in Indonesia-occupied Dutch - ruled West New Guinea and a communique will be issued shortly, the defence ministry said here today.

The ministry gave no further details except to say the communique would deal with "the armed action now going on in Dutch New Guinea."

Charges False Says Bishop

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israel (AP)—The Catholic rabbi of Jerusalem, Moshe Rosen, charged Thursday that Roman Catholic Bishop of the Russian Orthodox Church in the United States is an escaped war criminal.

At a press conference called by the Israeli section of the World Jewish Congress, Dr. Rosen said Bishop Valerian Trifa had been tried by a Romanian military court and sentenced in 1941 to life in prison.

(In Grass Lake, Mich., St. Trifa said the charges against him are "absolutely false" and were invited "for political purposes.")

Twenty Crew Members Quit Ship Claiming First Officer Too Rough

VANCOUVER (CP)—Twenty crew members walked off the Canadian Navigator Sunday and it was about to sail for Pakistan. Thursday and were declared desertion by the Canadian immigration department.

They refused to say what they called rough treatment by the first officer. They said they made no specific charges but complained that when they signed on the ship in Liverpool they were promised they would be back in the home port within four or five months.

Captain J. W. Gardiner and first officer Keenan declined comment on the dispute.

The ship moved out from essential pier into mid - harbor where it is expected to wait while arrangements can be made to replace the striking crew members.

Stewards, stewards and cooks walked off and began parading along the dock. They carried placards saying "on strike" and "carpenter nervous breakdown" because of the first officer.

The carpenter was one of three men discharged from the ship because of illness and taken to Shaughnessy Hospital.

The pickets prevented longshoremen from loading refrigerator units to the deck.

Police were called to the dock to watch the situation and the captain asked them to arrest the striking seamen.

Police refused unless the captain swore out an information. The captain did not do so.

SASKATCHEWAN MINISTER QUITS POST AND PARTY

Doctors Reject Plea To Test Health Plan

REGINA (CP) — Public Works Minister Walter Erb of Saskatchewan quit his portfolio and the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation party Thursday in a move linked with the province's controversial medical care insurance plan.

Premier Woodrow Lloyd received the 52-year-old minister's resignation an hour before addressing an emergency meeting of doctors on the medical care program and said Mr. Erb's timing was "extremely unfortunate."

Mr. Erb, who as minister of public health was instrumental in the passing of legislation for the medical care plan last fall, was the second major politician to defect from the CCF-NDP group. Hazen Argue, the group's House leader in Parliament, quit in 18 and later joined the Liberal party.

Mr. Erb, who will sit as an Independent until the present legislature ends, said the CCF party as such has ceased to exist. He said he could not agree with union participation in the New Democratic Party. When Mr. Argue resigned he said the NDP was controlled by a small labor clique.

ONCE APPROVED

Mr. Erb's farmer, former concert singer and teacher, once called the medical care legislation the only method of providing Saskatchewan with a comprehensive universal medical care.

But his letter of resignation said the present plan does not fulfil the principle that such a plan must be acceptable to both physicians and patients. He said he did not think the doctors were bluffing in their threatened refusal to co-operate.

Premier Lloyd told a meeting of the Saskatchewan College of Physicians and Surgeons a full trial of the plan is the "only ultimate test of its acceptability."

The government would implement the plan July 1 despite objections of the 904 - member

Reverberations Felt Across Land From Dramatic Move To Peg Canadian Dollar

OTTAWA (CP) — Reverberations were felt today in business offices and on the election hustings across the country from the government's dramatic move to cut the Canadian dollar's exchange value and peg it at 92½ U.S. cents.

Stock market prices spurted ahead Thursday, especially on big export industries. Wheat prices went up six cents a bushel. Tourist officials applauded.

But some retailers talked about possible price increases resulting from the higher cost of imports. And provinces and municipalities with foreign-held bond debt complained it will mean added cost in interest and principal payments.

Premier Jean Lesage of Quebec said the pegging will have only a negligible effect on Quebec's finances.

Mr. Lesage, also provincial finance minister, said that since his government took power all loans have been floated on the Canadian market and will not be affected.

The dollar stabilization will cost the city of Montreal $200,000 during the next 12 months, Lactance Roberge, city finance director, said Thursday. The

New Pegged Dollar Value May Be Election Issue

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Getting from point to point on the hustings in the 1962 general election campaign can still be tough, Prime Minister Diefenbaker found out Thursday.

So much went wrong with the Progressive Conservative leader's travel plans in Newfoundland that it 10 hours on the road and he the set he had the chance to campaign during the day. He arrived in Corner Brook and one big welcome reception at Corner Brook.

Things started out more seriously for Diefenbaker at Gander when he spoke to Liberal leader Lester Pearson, campaigning by chartered plane and car in Saskatchewan. He made appearances in Yorkton, Melville and Weyburn.

The travel timetable also posed little problems for Prime Minister Diefenbaker and Pearson and Douglas were heading for rallies in Manitoba.

Mr. Thompson was scheduled to make his first major address in a week at St. Malachie, Que., where Social Credit's 70th and final Quebec candidate is to be nominated to stand in Dorchester riding.

Thursday's campaign activities saw the new pegged value of the Canadian dollar form a big an issue in the June 18 election. Public opinion on the apparent differences over the government's surprise announcement Wednesday night that the dollar is being lowered and stabilized at 92½ cents in U.S. funds.

Further developments associated with the election scene included the sudden resignation of Public Works Minister Walter Erb from the Saskatchewan government and the CCF party's decision to end its affiliation with the NDP was announced the chairman for the election.

Ottawa, Chief Electoral Officer Nelson Castonguay announced that he has ordered changes in the laid against an occupant of an apartment in Toronto's Parkdale riding for obstructing and impeding an enumerator in the performance of his duties.

The dollar change held the spotlight as Finance Minister Fleming challenged the Liberals to make it an election issue.

Mr. Diefenbaker took up the challenge in a speech at the pulp and paper community of Corner Brook. As a result of pegging the discount on the Canadian dollar, he held out the prospect of vastly increased exports and a big growth in Canada's favorable balance of payments.

The move would create more jobs and more prosperity for every part of Canada.

CORPORAL GIVEN NINETY DAYS, RANK REDUCED

Guilty of Smuggling In Indochina

OTTAWA (CP) — Cpl. Maurice Victor Joseph Noel, 41, of Regina, was sentenced by a court martial today to 90 days in an army jail and was reduced to the rank of private for his part in the smuggling of gold and opium in Indochina last year.

The five-member court deliberated 2½ hours before pronouncing sentence.

Earlier, Cpl. Gerald Albert West, 33, was given 30 days detention and ordered down to a private for his role.

Noel, father of two children, showed no emotion when the sentence was read.

He was charged with a breach of military discipline and order, and not with any criminal offence. The charge was laid under the National Defence Act which provides a maximum penalty of dismissal with disgrace.

Cpl. Noel, father of two teenaged children, originally pleaded not guilty to the service charge but Thursday suddenly switched to a guilty plea after consulting with his defending officer, Maj. F. A. Leger of Quebec City.

His unexpected move ruled out the admission as evidence of a lease handed to the document Noel had given provost officers. The lease, which was seen as the judge advocate ruled the statement admissible after a voir dire, set out terms of the

MAKES DELIVERIES

The army prosecutor, Maj. James Cleary, Ottawa, said Noel while serving in Laos and Cambodia as Red Nose supply commission made two opium deliveries himself—"not package, but delivered to contact himself"—and arranged for two other deliveries.

Total amount of opium involved was 121 pounds.

The gold Noel was paid $6,000 pistares and $6,000 piastres and was to receive $12,000 himself, the larger amount being exchanged for $1,150 in United States currency. The total equivalent was given for the smaller payment in piastres.

The prosecutor noted that the Canadian delegation to the truce commission has a fixed exchange rate of 75 piastres to the dollar, but that the rate for the exchange value of the piastre on the open market varies.

No mention was made of Noel's commission, if any, for the deliveries he arranged.

To Start Sgt. W. J. H. Hockman told Sgt. W. J. H. Hockman that he was a friend of Noel's.

Gasbel previously was identified by Detective Inspector Hess as one of three soldiers fined $500 each and severely reprimanded by a military tribunal in Indochina. Two unidentified soldiers and one Sparrman men also have been suspended pending dismissal.

Hockman's trial resumes here Monday. Also to appear before the court martial next week in connection with the smuggling are Sgt. Francis G. Johnson and Maj. William J. Platt, the only officer implicated so far. Others have not been identified them further.

Liquidate OAS Algerian Rebel Govt. Demands

Urges French to Ignore Sentiment, Legalities

TORONTO (CP)—A battle between the Canadian government and international speculators has resulted in the government raising a standard of 92½ cents over the Canadian dollar and pledging its full force behind that position.

If more help is needed, presumably the International Monetary Fund can be called upon, though there is no indication that the government expects to need any such help.

These conclusions may be drawn from Finance Minister Fleming's statements at a press conference here Thursday, following Wednesday night's announcement in Ottawa that the Canadian dollar is pegged at 92½ cents, instead of being allowed to fluctuate with the variations of the market place, or pegged one way or another by use of the foreign exchange fund.

PLUG AT QUESTIONS

Newspaper men kept plugging away at two questions particularly.

One was why the seemingly sudden decision to peg the dollar when previous statements had indicated there was no hurry in this direction. Speculators' appears to be the answer to that one.

The second question, in effect, was "How do you know you can hold it at 92½ cents if speculators still believe the currency is overvalued and keep up their attack?"

No definite answer was given However, Mr. Fleming said:

ALGIERS — The Algerian rebel government called on the French government Thursday night to wipe out the underground European Secret Army, ignoring sentimentality and legalities.

The sharp demand from the provisional government in Tunis was coupled with a warning that the situation in Algeria is getting worse and there is the risk of "unforeseen consequences"—a hint of retaliation from the Moslem masses the nationalist leaders have so far held in check.

After an emergency meeting in Tunis, leaders of the rebel regime "The Provisional Republic of the Secret Army demands radical measures excluding all sentimentality and transcending legality."

The European extremists have launched daily attacks with guns and plastic bombs since France reached a truce with the rebels seven weeks ago to put Algeria on the road to independence. The extremists have been trying to whip up hatred to keep the North African territory French.

MUST EXPATRIATE

France is responsible for the maintenance of order until the conditions take over after a referendum confirmation.

But the Algerian rebels say these elements must be crushed even before the referendum. They demand that the European fire agreement "can establish order by liquidating the Fascists of the Secret Army." This security force is slowly being formed to operate under the interim provisional government, but so far it has not been turned loose in Algiers and Oran, the chief theatres of Secret Army menace.

The French government meanwhile pressed its crackdown on the European terrorists. High Commissioner Christian Fouchet, the administrative chief in Algeria, told the French Foreign Legion paratroopers and settlers in a radio - television speech that he had issued rigorous directives to police and resistance to the commanders of the security forces.

Fouchet denounced "cowardly" terrorist attacks on Moslem civilians and on members of European settlers to choose to support law and order "or tomorrow, but today."

At least 14 persons were killed and 25 wounded in acts of violence throughout Algeria Thursday. Thirteen were killed and 17 of the wounded were Moslems, military officials said.

Jayne Goes Shopping After Tiff Fails to Say It Is for Divorce

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actress Jayne Mansfield had her first big fight with her husband Thursday, stormily hold him she was going shopping — but didn't tell him she was shopping for a divorce.

"I still don't know she did it," said her stunned muscle-bound husband, Mickey Hargitay early today. He spent the night under the same roof with his estranged wife.

That togetherness, unique in Hollywood divorces, left observers to believe that the divorce won't take.

And Jayne's own words, breathlessly delivered, accented that belief. Said the 29-year-old press agent's dream:

"Our differences are really minor but maybe because they are the only ones we have ever had even though we say them they are.

"I'm sure we'll work it out."

Hargitay first learned of the divorce suit from reporters.

"Jayne's out shopping; why we're waiting supper on her," said Hargitay casually not the last one to know.

By suppertime, Jayne indeed had come home, marched in a back door of her huge pink-and-white home.

Then she secluded herself in her pink-and-white bedroom, with its pink-and-white, heart-shaped bed and first called her press agent, Harry Friedman. He was pink-faced when the door was finally opened.

Then she summoned Hargitay. He was both pink and green when he came out a few minutes later.

"She won't say much," said the 33-year-old mass of muscle. "I guess she doesn't want to talk with me. I love her very much. I'm going to make me madder than hell."

Then the press agent ushered in a group of reporters and photographers.

"Will she talk to us?" one asked.

Before long Jayne appeared on an air balcony of the big house.

She wore a gold lame slack outfit that looked as if it had been sprayed on that famed 40-24-35 frame. Each reporter got a friendly handshake as she called each by name.

"I'm no different from any married woman," she told them. "I really believe in a happy marriage and Mickey and I have been deliciously happy. We hope we can work it out."

Police said the boat was inside Mr. Graham's boat house, which had been broken into during the past two weeks.

Anyone knowing the whereabouts of this boat is asked to call the Ontario Provincial Police office at Belleville, WO 8-5067.

Police said this morning there is a possibility the boat could be floating somewhere along the bay shore.

Farm Workers In Short Supply Says Official

A total of 1,900 persons in the Belleville and Hastings district have been job seeking at the end of April but there is a big shortage of experienced farm workers in the district, it was noted yesterday by the Belleville workers of the national employment service.

Office manager Mr. Cecil Gordon said he was handling domestic workers to live in were in short supply while locally there was a heavy demand for a drug store clerk, a chef and pantry man, cook.

On the whole the local employment picture is considerably better than the same date last year when at the end of April there were 2,506 unplaced applicants.

This year the peak in unemployment will be a month later as there has been a steady drop since that time. The April drop in the number of job seekers was the greatest this year.

There are still at the end of the month (that is the number receiving unemployment benefits) was 1,772, as compared with an even 2,400 at the same time a year ago.

The greatest number of job seekers are in the unskilled occupations, such as labourers, and 154 females falling into this category.

C. A. Milligan, PC Member Past Five Years, Again Seeking Riding Nomination

PICTON — Member of Parliament representing Prince Edward-Lennox for the past five years, Clarence A. Milligan will be a candidate at the nomination at the convention to be held in Picton June 16. In the election of June, 1957, he had a majority of more than three thousand.

"I feel that my experience, and the contacts I have made, can prove of value to the riding and as long as I am accepted to devote all my time to these duties," Mr. Milligan said. "It is not an easy task to spend so much time in Ottawa and at the same time to keep in personal contact with the electors, but I have attempted to meet the public as often as possible and to report to them through the press and radio."

"The campaign will necessarily be a short one and will call for a great deal of energy on the part of candidates and workers and I hope that the generous support given me in the past will not be lacking."

Mr. Milligan, who has spoken a number of times in the House of Commons, is noted as one of the most energetic members of the Agricultural Committee. He has been a keen backbencher in opposing any measure which he felt would be detrimental to the needs of agriculture. He was one of the four Members who, just before the by-election, staged a battle which resulted in the government withdrawing announced stand regarding payment of bonuses on milk and cream. Under the proposal factory patrons would have received the bonus on their milk under the plan, but now cheese support price is to remain at 32 cents per pound, but the 32 cent pay hundredweight subsidy would be lost. Mr. Milligan, speaking in the House, urged salesmen abroad to promote sale of Canadian cheese.

Other agricultural legislation influenced by Mr. Milligan is Ottawa's interest and support and his has been one of the few voices which has been Canada's heard in the legislative halls in the interests of diversified agriculture.

During Mr. Milligan's term as member, two post offices have been built at Wellington, Bloomfield and Consecon, while other public buildings have been improved. A new dock was built at Consecon, and at Prince Edward Yacht Club, dredging at Point Traverse and Salmon point and breakwater works secured.

"We are assured that Canada Pickon will be back at normal strength this fall and we must endeavor to secure a permanent military establishment there," said Mr. Milligan. "Changing methods of training resulted in reduced strength at the camp. Efforts are continually made to keep the Dept. of Defence aware of the facilities at Picton and the important part a military camp plays in the economy of town and county."

Mr. Milligan and his sons own a 600-acre farm at Napanee, where recently a disastrous fire started with 260,000 loss. For some years they operated a dairy farm there.

The greater part of Mr. Milligan's life has been devoted to public service. He served as councillor, deputy reeve, and reeve of Ernestown and Addington, was county warden in 1951 and also served as mayor of Napanee.

He represented Zone 4 as director for ten years on the Ontario Department of Agriculture and served as president. He was also active in the executive member of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture for 8 number of years, making many contacts with government officials, department heads and others. He has been a strong promoter of marketing legislation.

Mr. Milligan represented the Canadian Federation at the Coronation of Queen Elizabeth and the same year attended the International Federation of Agriculture in Rome, Italy.

Long interested in politics, he served five years as president of the Prince Edward-Lennox Conservative Association.

(Second in series on candidates for nomination.)

Enters Home To Give Baby Dry Diapers

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—The hour of 1:45 a.m. is an odd one for mother to be awakened in your home by the persistent strange voice singing.

But that's what happened to Mrs. Zelma Brewer of Omaha Thursday.

This is what Mrs. Brewer told police:

She awoke to hear a man singing. She followed the sound to her kitchen. There she found a young man changing the diapers of her one-year-old daughter.

Quickly the young man explained he had heard the child crying as he passed by and had knocked on the door. When there was no answer, he entered in a window.

Then, he said, he began singing as he changed the baby.

With that he handed the child to the mother and left via the kitchen door.

Man Acquitted On Charge of Impaired Driving

A charge of impaired driving was dismissed against Carl Lawrence Hazlett, Deseronto resident, Benedict Wm. Powell this morning in police magistrate, after hearing the evidence, said there was too much doubt involved to warrant a conviction.

Evidence in chief was that on Sunday, April 15th, a car was proceeding south on Charles street when it was followed and as he tried to stop at Dundas Street.

The car proceeded through the intersection and struck a vehicle proceeding west on Dundas driven by Mr. Alex Mervey Longhurst, of Belleville.

As a result of the impact the Longhurst car was spun around and into the path of another car proceeding east on Dundas Street, being driven by Mr. F. Van de Vooren, also of Belleville.

Magistrate Wills said there was not sufficient evidence to prove the man was intoxicated. Mr. Clirtwill pleaded not guilty to the charge and was represented by L. Marsakas.

TORONTO (CP) — A Detroit detective said Thursday that Harold Crater, 42, was to have been used as a witness in a narcotics prosecution.

Det. Paul Gyetval of the Detroit Narcotics Bureau was giving evidence at the trial of Arthur Lord, 46, of Toronto, charged with capital murder. Panel Debates Subject 'How to Spend Lord's Day'

TRENTON — How should one spend the Lord's Day?

Last night, Trenton and Belleville ministers, Rev. J. A. Peyton, Rev. T. R. Downey, Rev. Roderick Palmer and Rev. Hope Smith debated this question in the lower auditorium of Bethel United Church. Rev. Ronald Reid, Bethel pastor, acted as moderator and presented the panel with questions.

Mr. Reid said that there had been drastic changes in the observance of Sunday, since Grandma's day. Then, it was considered a serious matter if one were heard whistling on "the Sabbath". Now things have gone to the other extreme and there is a strong effort throughout the province to introduce commercialized Sunday sports.

"Commercialized sports" on Sunday are a dishonor to God" said Mr. Palmer.

"Sunday sports are the thin edge of the wedge for people who are continually trying to do away with the Lord's Day", said Rev. Peyton, "it has been given by God, we want to get rid of God, get rid of Sunday."

General conclusion reached was that if groups who are trying to introduce commercialized sports on Sunday were sincere in their desire to provide something for young people to do on Sunday, they could provide such sports free.

"There something wrong with the church" asked Mr. Reid, "Aren't we providing the right type of interest for young people?"

"Jazz your sermons up a bit", said one teen-ager from the audience, "We hear the same sermons over and over again".

"If the things we do on Sunday are considered sinful, why aren't they wrong for the rest of the week?" asked another teen-ager.

"You shouldn't blame the church", replied Rev. Jack Cockrane who has been transferred to the Carlton Trenton to western Canada.

Group Captain Williams described his experience as an exchange test pilot with the United States Air Force at Strategic Air Command headquarters and showed a film demonstrating the fighter tactics of modern aircraft.

Group Captain Williams was introduced by Mrs. Adams and thanked by Dick Burnett.

Cpl. Weese was elected vice-president to replace Lt. Col. Cockrane who has been transferred to the Carlton Trenton to western Canada.

Need Bombers For Seven Years Claims Speaker

TRENTON — Group Captain D. J. Williams, commanding officer at RCAF Station Trenton, was the guest speaker at last night's meeting of the Trenton Kiwanis Club.

Group Captain Williams compared the merits of manned bombers with ballistic missiles. He said, that in his opinion, manned bombers would be required for the next five to seven years. He said that the manned bomber was more accurate and cheaper than a missile. You get your "weapon" back, for one thing. In another sense, should the button be pushed by mistake, we have delivered this splendid Canadian "No Fault" product. Missiles have been known to have been helped over the border by a push from a well meaning woman."

—A Fellow Canadian.

BINE — In loving memory of Mary Bine, who died one year ago today, May 4th, 1961.

Sweet was the love I often stand,
Kind was the heart that ceased to beat,
But in the silence, the years roll on,
Not lost, but gone before.
Time flies by, year after year,
His counts the tears I shed,
But memory keeps you always,
Dear one, you're not dead.
So I'll be true to the end of my days,
And when He calls me home to rest,
Your smile will guide the way.
Sadly missed and always remembered by his wife Janet and family.

GODDFELLOW — In loving memory of our dear mother, Hannah Goodfellow who passed away May 4th, 1956.

In our hearts your memory lingers,
Sweet, tender, fond and true,
There is not a day dear mother,
We do not think of you.
Sadly missed by daughter Cora and son-in-law Clinton.

CARDS OF THANKS

We would like to express our appreciation to our many friends, good samaritans, and neighbors who helped during our recent fire. A special thank you to Sister Mary Ann, Sister Mary Rose, Sister Mary Gerard, and Reverend Smith who discovered the fire and did such a commendable job. Especially mixed by daughter Cora and son-in-law Clinton.

IN MEMORIAM

KERR — In tribute to that bright and brilliant daughter of Ontario, Jean Hope Kerr, who was promoted away May 4th, 1959, at Kingston.

Sweet memories of a loved one, devoted wife and loving mother, Jean Hope Kerr, who left us three years ago today, May 4th, 1959.

Her smile, she "crowded the universe with" and her memory, "world of distance run." In the record of the years she has proved this splendid Canadian: "No fault" product. Her years have been helped over the hurdles by a push from a well meaning woman."

—A Fellow Canadian.

BINE — In loving memory of Mary Bine, who died one year ago today, May 4th, 1961.

Sweet was the love I often stand,
Kind was the heart that ceased to beat,
But in the silence, the years roll on,
Not lost, but gone before.
Time flies by, year after year,
His counts the tears I shed,
But memory keeps you always,
Dear one, you're not dead.
So I'll be true to the end of my days,
And when He calls me home to rest,
Your smile will guide the way.
Sadly missed and always remembered by his wife Janet and family.

GODDFELLOW — In loving memory of our dear mother, Hannah Goodfellow who passed away May 4th, 1956.

In our hearts your memory lingers,
Sweet, tender, fond and true,
There is not a day dear mother,
We do not think of you.
Sadly missed by daughter Cora and son-in-law Clinton.

Need Bombers For Seven Years Claims Speaker

TRENTON — Group Captain D. J. Williams, commanding officer at RCAF Station Trenton, was the guest speaker at last night's meeting of the Trenton Kiwanis Club.

Group Captain Williams compared the merits of manned bombers with ballistic missiles. He said, that in his opinion, manned bombers would be required for the next five to seven years. He said that the manned bomber was more accurate and cheaper than a missile. You get your "weapon" back, for one thing. In another sense, should the button be pushed by mistake, we have delivered this splendid Canadian "No Fault" product. Missiles have been known to have been helped over the border

Paving of New Section Of Madoc Road and 62 To Be Completed Soon

Paving of that section of the Madoc county road rebuilt last summer and also the section of the 62 highway north of Stirling Junction, regraded last year, will be completed by early summer, members of Hastings county council were told yesterday.

Clarke T. Rollins, M.L.A. for Hastings East, has announced that the tenders for paving for the over five miles of the Madoc road have been called and that should mean completion of the work by mid-summer.

Also he said tenders for the second extension of the Madoc road re-building program from Ivanhoe to a short distance north of Eumsey would be called within the next week, while this year's project of regrading the 62 highway in the Bass Lake area would be called shortly.

Purchase of the right-of-way by the county on the third extension of the Madoc road from Halloway to Foxboro was urged by Mr. Rollins at the county's earliest convenience.

PURCHASE NEEDED

Purchase of required rights-of-way north of Foxboro was needed to tie in with proposed installation of 14 highway between Foxboro and 401 highway.

Mr. Rollins told council that to enable the county to take full advantage of the highways department road development program, planning at least three years ahead was necessary.

The East Hastings member said the contract for highway improvements at Millbrook had been let and that pre-engineering for the Marmora causeway was going ahead.

Reconstruction of the Madoc road and bringing No. 62 highway up to standard would mean a 60-mile road leading from Belleville to the north end of the county and would do much to benefit both areas, according to Mr. Rollins. Both tourists and industry would benefit, he said.

The county road committee reported read by committee chairman Reeve Elmer Wilson also recommended control for the first three months of this year was double that for the same period in 1961.

BUDGET OVERSPENT

This amount, along with $11,000 overspent last year, had to be made up in this year's budget, Mr. Wilson said.

Damage to gravel roads during the spring break-up was less than normal this year, the report noted, while there was slightly more than normal damage to surface treated sections and some pavements.

Improvement work on the Tweed-Sulphide county road now being carried out will see a new entrance to No. 37 highway north of Tweed.

The roads committee has adopted the policy of not retaining road employees who have passed their 65th birthday.

ABILITY TO HANDLE MEN

Mr. Harold Crosby of Coe Hill was appointed by the county as supervisor of roads maintenance operations. Before leaving to be handled men, Mr. Crosby was said to be an experienced machine operator.

Councillors took no action on Dundas, Norwood and Asphodel county resolution asking the subject of the purchase of chemicals for dust and snow control be increased from 50 per cent to 60 per cent.

Reeve Harold Hamilton of Tudor and Cashel said 50 per cent subsidy was "fairly reasonable" and suggested that if the percentage was raised to 60 per cent, there would be a tendency for more chemicals —possibly needlessly.

FIVE ARRESTED

Japan National Railway was as he told reporters the accident was caused by "the carelessness of two officials." One of his assistants said the freight train went through a red light.

"It rained people," said one man who lived near the wreck.

IT WAS HELL'

"It was hell and I had to close my eyes," said Kazuo Miyano, another witness.

Most of the train's seven cars piled like the embankment, rushed outside when he heard the first crash.

"While I watched, I saw the second train come rushing into the scene," he said, "I saw a coach go tumbling down the embankment and smash right into my house. The roof flew off and the whole house crumpled like dust."

Ironically, the death toll probably was boosted by safety features instituted after 106 trapped Japanese died in a burning train in Yokohama in 1951. The Japan National Railway installed switches in all its cars to enable passengers to open the doors in emergencies. The passengers Thursday night used these switches to leave the first two cars of the train as it piled into the path of the second.

Japan's most recent pre-war train disaster occurred in February, 1947, when 184 persons were killed and 404 injured when a derailment outside Tokyo. The worst train wreck record is in the Alps in 1917, involved a French troop train and 600 or more persons were killed.

Cannifton — Corbyville boy scouts and cubs will plant approximately 1,000 trees Saturday on the Corby farm at Corbyville.

The tree planting is part of a long term project which will see at least 25 acres planted by next year. Two thousand trees were planted last year by the Scouts and Cubs.

The planting project is under the direction of Ralph Plumpton, public manager at Corby's.

Mr. Plumpton said a suitable gift would be presented to the Scouts and Cubs for their efforts.

General County Levy of 10 Mills, Down 2.25 From Last Year, Set by Council

A 1962 general county levy of 10 mills — down 2.25 mills from last year — was struck by members of Hastings county council Thursday as they moved toward the end of their annual budget session.

The session will be concluded Friday when the by-law to set this year's mill rate will be up for approval.

In addition to the mill general rate to be paid by all member municipalities in the county, township and village in the county roads system will pay a county roads rate of 8.5 mills up one -mill from last years road rate. The road rate includes the supplementary by-law.

And debentures on the Hastings county home will add another .395 mill to the general rate.

One mill on the general assessment raises $30,586 for the county.

This year's estimated for the county budget is by the finance committee chairman Reeve Thomas Burnside of Madoc village and included county expenditures for the 1962-1963 term.

ROAD BUDGET HEAVY

The county roads system will take an estimated $485,-000, which is the sum the committee was getting awfully close to one-half of the county's total budget for all purposes.

Public welfare costs, including the operation of the county home were estimated at $295,-900. County home costs alone were placed at $232,000.

Law enforcement will cost the county $164,437, while education government, including teachers salaries, was set at $23,000.

This year's tax rate was reduced by nearly one mill, but with an amount of $39,-000 being taken from the county surplus to apply against the county's share of the cost of the new county court house building. Council earlier in the session had voted an amount of $50,000 to be taken from the surplus for this purpose.

For the past two years the county has been levying three mill for capital costs of the new county building with members council decided to pay the county's share of the cost out of current revenue.

In contrast the city of Belleville and the town of Trenton are debenturing their share of the cost.

$258,167 SUBSIDY

On the reverse side the general mill rate of 10 mills will return $305,860 and the road levy of 8.5 mills will bring in $203,-305.805. Road subsidy from Queen's Park government will amount to $252,767.

The city of Belleville will be called upon to pay 30 per cent of the over-all law enforcement bill of $164,437, and the town of Trenton will pay $18,000 for the same purpose.

The municipal home and farm is expected to show a revenue of $11,937,944, including $16,000 in Dominion government and $10,000 in revenue from the county registry office.

Liberals Hear Candidate And President

Robert Temple, Liberal candidate for Hastings South, told assembled Liberals in Trenton Wednesday night that the contest in Ontario would be a "a hard election . . . a close election but a victory for the Liberal party."

Mr. Temple promised the Trentonians that when the Liberals came into power, he would work tirelessly to provide a second bridge for Trenton.

The candidate, together with Roy Sills, president of the South Hastings Liberal Association, criticized the record of the present Progressive-Conservative government.

Wednesday night's dinner-meeting was held in the CPR recreation hall and was attended by upwards of 60 Liberal party members. Guests were introduced by Trenton Liberal Association president Bob Ransom.

"Five years ago, Canada was the world's third largest trading nation," said Mr. Temple, "now we've come down to fifth place. Canada has lost her prestige abroad.

"Unemployment is at record," said Mr. Temple. "It's more than double since 1957 and government took office. Unemployment insurance fund has been raided and we've had six successive deficits.

"As a farmer, I'm interested in agriculture," said Mr. Sills. "I condemn the present government for the way it has handled farm problems. A surplus of food is money in the bank to any government. Recently, we shipped 100 tons of wheat to Red China in return for a small amount of money. There may come a time when we'll wish we had that wheat. The crop situation is ideal to hook food in the west. Ontario will be a bad wheat crop last year. Our farmers need demand assistance, not handouts. The farmers were always more prosperous under a Liberal government."

Seeks Backing For More Talks On Berlin Issue

By JOSEPH E. DYNAN

ATHENS (AP) — U.S. State Secretary Rusk appealed for the backing of the smaller NATO powers today for further talks with Russia on the Berlin issue.

Rusk spoke to the foreign and defence ministers of the 15-nation North Atlantic Alliance at a closed-door meeting following the public opening of the Western Council's annual spring meeting.

The ministers also will examine conditions of a new U.S. plan to give all the NATO allies a voice in the employment of nuclear arms against a Communist onslaught in Western Europe.

A conference source said Rusk outlined to the Berlin talks he has had in Washington with Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin and his plans are to discuss them, implicit in his report was a bid for the support of the smaller allies.

The three big powers are France, West Germany and Britain — Thursday gave him their backing to continue the talks seeking to determine Soviet willingness to reach at least an interim arrangement on Berlin.

Music Is Great Leveller Appealing to All Classes

By EUGENE LANG

Music is the prime common denominator of all the accepted forms of human culture. Race, color, creed, status, vocation, avocation or politics, this great universal language of the arts can bring together persons of the most diverse tastes or opinions who otherwise might clash, but here in the enjoyment of good music they find that great leveller that enables them to meet whoever or wherever they may be. This feeling of togetherness is present at symphony concerts, recitals or operas where through the communication as those who attend come from all walks of life in Belleville and district but spend two hours of sitting in the enjoyment of glorious artists and ensembles appear here through the sponsorship of the Belleville Community Concert Association.

The three big concerts next season — and perhaps a fifth—who knows? Two of these have already been definitely booked by the Artists' Consultants. One of these is the Canadian 14 dancers, Flamenco singers and guitarists called "Ximenez-Vargas" and the other is the Canadian Opera Company which will perform the complete opera, "Cosi fan Tutte" in an English version. To see either of these musical attractions in person would cost about three dollars a seat but here they are heard for a cheap seat at that), while the entire series of four concerts that will be presented can be enjoyed for the now price of seven dollars and single tickets or three dollars for students.

The annual campaign of the local Community Concert Association is closing this weekend. The campaign chairman Beechgrove in the downstairs auditorium of the Corby Public Library with a membership from 10.00 a.m. to 5.30 p.m. Telephone WO 2-5581.

There may still be many persons who read this short article who have not joined Community Concerts — who have not renewed their membership from last year and it is to be determined whether or not a second number is asked.

Good music is no longer a luxury in present day living but a necessity, and it is this necessity that Community Concerts fill for Belleville and district — for those who like the finest both in music and those who perform it. Support the Community Concert Association — it will certainly support you in return.

Tenders for Two Final Projects Are Opened

Tenders for the two final projects in the initial phase of the city's forward-sewage disposal program were opened yesterday.

These two projects covered main from the Fireman's Park pumping station now under construction to the sewage plant in Foster Ward, and the outlet line from the new sewage plant property.

Tenders for both projects were lower than engineer's estimates, according to Aldermen Ellis, chairman of the special council sewage project committee, as all eight tenders were submitted.

Lowest tender for the forced main from the pumping station to the sewage plant was submitted by Lightbody Construction of Belleville. Their bid of $64,-252.50, was approximately $5,000 lower than the estimate.

Tenders for the outfall from the sewage plant property into the bay saw most bids in the $90,000 to $100,000 range although the lowest tender from Grant-Mills Ltd. of Montreal, was for $58,572.50.

TWO QUICK TENDER.

Alderman Ellis said that as this bid was so much lower than the others, the tender would be checked out by consulting engineers to see if there was an error before the contract is awarded.

The engineering estimate on the cost of the outfall was $75,000.

Expected completion date for both these above contracts is from 12 to 14 weeks following awarding of the contract.

Aldermen Ellis said that the $60,000 tender for the outlet into the bay was ultimately accepted, the entire cost of the initial phase of the sewage disposal project could be well below the estimate.

Expected completion date, are early enough that the sewage plant should be in operation before the year end, he said.

Ready to Meet Liberals on Dollar Issue

CALEDONIA, Ont. (CP)—Finance Minister Donald Fleming Thursday night challenged the Liberal party to make an election issue of the government's move in setting the Canadian dollar's value at 92.5 cents in terms of United States currency.

Mr. Fleming, speaking at a Progressive Conservative nominating convention in Brant-Haldimand, said the Conservatives are ready to meet the Liberals on the dollar issue.

John A. Charlton, a member of the last House, was nominated to contest the riding.

Mr. Fleming said that since his announcement Wednesday night, pegging the dollar at the new level, the Liberals had been trying to steer people into believing that it would mean an increase in the cost of living.

During the last two years the consolidated index had varied by only two points while the external value of the Canadian dollar—in terms of U.S. money—ranged from 91.06 to 96 cents.

He told the 400 supporters at the meeting that recently showed the Liberals had provided cover for the greatest decrease in the buying power of the Canadian dollar.

Church-Goer Missed Union Meet, Fined $5

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Mrs. Mary Ellen Benson, who skipped Sunday morning union meetings to attend church services, has agreed to pay a $5 fine assessed by the union.

Mrs. Benson agreed to pay the fine after a special conference Thursday. The suit was brought by the 326 of the United Papermakers and Paperworkers Union, which said its bylaws provided that each member missing three out of five meetings must be fined.

Mrs. Benson admitted missing the meetings, but said she considered church more important. Judge Orbert Meich dismissed the case, but said that past court decisions made it clear the union had the right to assess the fine.

Suggests New Tax System

William Allen, Metropolitan Toronto's new chairman, successor to "Big Daddy" F. G. Gardiner, has suggested that a new method of tax system which would base all real estate taxation on the assessed value of land, with no tax being imposed on buildings.

This system is used extensively in the Antipodes, both Australia and New Zealand having found that it is an effective means of eliminating slums districts in the heart of big cities and encouraging investment in fine buildings.

Real estate taxation as we know it here punishes an owner who improves and extends his property. It also encourages land speculation.

Of course, a tax on land alone would not automatically eliminate these evils. If the land were assessed on the basis of the use to which it was being put, it is difficult to see how any great good would spring from the system, since the land assessment would, in effect, depend largely on the type of building erected on it.

But if we were able to divorce our thinking from this matter of actual land use, and base assessment on potential land use, such a new system would exercise great influence on the future development of our cities, both large and small.

Zoning regulations would provide a ready-made guide. Land zoned as industrial or commercial, for instance, would, we presume, automatically be assessed at a higher value per unit than land zoned as residential. But there would be difficult problems. What, for instance, would be the yardstick in areas zoned for multiple dwellings? In almost all such areas single-family units already exist. Would it be fair to assess all land in this zone at the same rate, when some land had on it large apartment buildings and other land just a small home? To avoid undue hardship to some, or a virtually tax-free ride to others, it would appear that some consideration would have to be given at first to actual land use. Eventually, though, if the full benefits of the system were to be enjoyed, land similarly located would have to be assessed at the same rate, providing an incentive for all owners to erect thereon the most remunerative type of building. This would effectively discourage the growth of slums. The land tax for a lot on which stood a ramshackle dwelling would be the same as for a neighboring lot of the same size on which stood a modern business building. The system would, of course, most effectively discourage speculators holding vacant lots for lengthy periods, hoping that land values would rise, since the land tax would be much, much higher than at present.

Of course, there are almost certainly objections to be made to such a tax system, features which are not immediately self-evident, but it does appear as if it were worthy of serious study.

The New World?

What price the New World now?

That question is not prompted by the fact that it is now 470 years since Columbus discovered America and that some may consider this calls into question the appropriate nature of the word "New."

That word is under much more serious attack, more serious by 1,499,999,530 years.

Fossils, which may be those of tiny plants or of animals, were found in a flinty iron deposit on the north shore of Lake Superior.

This week Dr. Elso S. Barghoorn, professor of biology at Harvard University, told the New York Academy of Sciences that the fossils were estimated to be 2,000,000,000 years old. The earliest previous known animal fossils are a mere 500,000,000 years old. So here is evidence of animal life in the New World a whole 1,500,000,000 years before it can be proven to have failed in the Old World—until 1,499,999,530 years before Columbus crossed the Atlantic.

Warm, Wasn't It?

One of life's minor mysteries is why the water of the Bay of Quinte should be warmer on April 28, just a couple of weeks after ice has disappeared, than it is in mid-September, after a whole summer simmering in the sun.

But it is. Ask any of the many fishermen who bounced around on the high swells set running by Saturday's stiff wind and who positively enjoyed the wet feet and spray-drenched clothing which accompanied their opening-day excursion. In September they would have run for shelter, shivering, without even bothering to wet a line.

The biographer has this problem set before him: to delineate a likeness of the earthly pilgrimage of a man.—Thomas Carlyle.

Moments of the Soul

Montreal Gazette

One of those who knew Dickens says that one of the very last times he saw him was on the West Pier at Brighton. It was a miserable day blowing hard and raining. But on walking round to the head of the pier he was surprised to find Dickens standing there:

"He had his coat collar up. Quite heedless of rain and flying spray, he peered through the mist and gazed upon the tossing billow rolling in. He seemed like a sturdy pilot who was steering the pier through a very difficult bit of navigation. I passed slowly, very slowly, by him, raised my hat and went away . . . ."

It is a memorable glimpse.

For it pictures Dickens, not far from his life's end, in a moment of loneliness. Yet out at the head of the pier, heedless of rain and spray, he stood as one with all time to find there himself because he stood alone.

There are moments that come to everyone, for plan or prediction, when a person is lonely, perhaps more because the world seems to remove its pressure and grant him more and time to find himself.

One July evening in 1855 Alexander Macmillan was out on a visit to the country secretary near Beverley, in Gloucestershire, to see Rev. Charles Kingsley, whose books he was publishing. The scene was out of the village of Eversley, down a path lined with oak and Scotch fir, to where the church and rectory stood.

It was eight o'clock in the evening when Macmillan arrived. The servant told him that Mr. Kingsley was out but would be back before long. Macmillan walked on into the gathering dusk about the garden and the churchyard, and then leaned against the gate.

"I sat just subsided on a gate," he wrote in a letter, "and lit my pipe and enjoyed the exquisite quiet of the evening twilight. A great white owl came flapping over my head, and again all was still.

"It was now close to nine and my lodge was gone. I descended from my perch and began strolling towards the village again in the direction of voices in the distance, among which I promptly distinguished the parson's well-known alto . . . ."

That leaning on the gate at twilight, smoking a pipe in the stillness of the garden, was only a brief pause in his business as a publisher. But the moment was something of nothing of peace after more than a hundred years.

It is not only that this sense of being alone liberates a person so he can find himself. Great is the sense of freedom felt that the memory of it lingers. That is why distinguished men sometimes escape from magic or mood. It helps a person to face with fresh vision the things. In becoming more himself, he becomes greater than himself. The larger world admits him into its company.

Arthur Conan Doyle has used to say that he felt this liberation most on the deck of a ship at sunset. Work was finished and might be awarded, he could be alone by watching the grey clouds gathering on the horizon, with the shafts of sort golden light streaming between them, here and there. In the sombre majesty of that gathering of the elements, he said, he felt an awareness of the meaning of life, not spoken in words but deep and overwhelming.

This liberating aloneness most often comes with a touch of surprise, as something unsought, a sort of gift. It takes a person unawares. He who seeks may not find. But when the moment comes, the world loses all its hardness, and what lies beyond comes forward.

In his diary for 1880 Stopford Brooke wrote on his visit to Longstaff Hall in Perthshire, Irish lake country. He had entered a desolate valley. For miles around nobody was to be seen. The sound of streams was everywhere. Only now and then a sound except at times a curious cry far up in the mountain.

"It sat down upon me a great dropped cray," his diary reads, "which had been splintered by the lightning into a pillar. It seemed to me as if the whole world were mist and dream and nothing else. The solid mountains, rocks and hills were as unsubstantial as a ghost . . . . Life did not seem a dream, though the earth was one."

What are the moments to be called? John Masefield called them "those moments of the soul when it turns to its Maker and him they seemed those moments of aloneness when the earth seemed to its demands before a power greater than itself. It withdrew to let the moment be.

'Legitimate' Crime Has Bad Influence

By SIDNEY J. HARRIS

The people who are "against" pornography are like the people who are "against" crime. All they can see is the obvious — but the obvious doesn't do nearly as much harm as the obscure.

For instance, I attended a movie last week. It was a Hollywood production of a sophisticated comedy. There was a part of it in which a censorship, in a sneaky, arch, and vulgarly coy, manner, "censored" a love scene. This ambiance, I submit, is much more a "bad influence" upon young people than the feeble dirty passages in books.

Likewise, any crime by avowed criminals does not influence adolescents, nor does it undermine the moral code for law and society. What is really subversive is the crime of the "legitimate" crime — the payoffs, the favoritism, the slick deals, the evasions by big-time operators.

No One Is Shocked

As a small but potent example, consider how marriage and divorce laws must be ignored by youngsters when they read that an ugly woman walks into a Reno court, swears that she's a bona fide resident of Nevada when she isn't, remains there, and walks out a few minutes later a free woman.

She has broken no law, consumes later, a free woman. She has broken no law, consumes no time, but she has lost place in Nevada rather than elsewhere. It is a procedure that fools no one; but it nevertheless makes a mockery of U.S. divorce laws, and the cynicism the cynical conviction among youngsters that anything with money can buy his way out of anything.

It is the atmosphere in which our social order is permeated that destroys the respect of young people. If our attitude toward sex is sly and hypocritical, young people come to regard and treat sex as a base commodity. If our whole forward law-breaking pays tribute to the sharp operator who can get away with it, then we have only the small-timer who fails, and he is the only preservation of aspiring sharpies.

A boy is not shocked when he reads about a "bad girl" breaking into a bank; but his moral sense begins to be corrupted when he learns that his father has bent the law, or evaded it, or has failed to practice what he preaches. Such lessons are not lost upon the young. We pay much more head to our hypocrisy than they do to dirty postcards or shows of violence.

Rotary Club Minstrels, Fun and frolic for all with more laughs per minute than one thought think possible, made the 1932 minstrel show presented by the Rotary Club of the Collegiate Auditorium one of the highlights of the entertainment season in Belleville. Dancing choruses of fifty voices, splendid solos by individuals, and the jokes made by the zealous endmen at the expense of many prominent citizens provided varied entertainment that was received enthusiastically by the crowded house. Three veterans of local minstrel shows, Jack Lill, Bert Findlay, Ab Wheeler and Charlie Dickinson, were assisted by a fine local audience again with their fun.

Under the direction of Reg. Hooper, the musical part of the program was a splendid success. The chorus included the outstanding singers of the city and their ensemble work was remarkable. Those taking part were the following: First tenors: Chris Holmes, Jack Clarke, Fred Bass, Lloyd Cavey, Bert Monck, Tom Barrett, Alfred Evans, Leon Bennett, Jack Fahey, Ernie Mouck, Fred Mitchell. Second tenors: Cyril Howard, Bill Colclough, Charlie Dickens, Bill Bursbyne. Second bass: Fred Sprague, George Foster, Harry Moorman, George Wisbert, Sid Hector, Bruce Martin, Harry Stanley, Morley 'Dutt', Fred Hitchon, Harry Hill, Fred Smith, Ross Hunter, Jim Corder, Leo H. Bigg presided at the piano and the orchestra was composed of the following: Marvin Young, Gem Jobbs, Joe Wermark, Bill Hart, D. Hall, Harry Greenlead, Albert Wonnacott, Bill Lockyer, Walt Aselstine, Bill Grant.

Charlie Dukes was a big-tone interlocutor, and the end men, Eddie George, Ernie Scott, Joe Shortt, Everett Smith, Dan Turner and Ab Wheeler were per excellence and kept the audience in chuckles all evening. A pep dance by Bruce Mac and Bill Cazard was a good feature of the program.

The ballads brought to the limelight a group of Belleville's foremost singers: Harold Barrett was heard in "The Bells of St. Mary's", Ed Moorman "Where the Silvery Colorado Winds its Way", Ab Burke contributed "Bells of the Sea", Bert Monck sang "In the Village by the Sea"; and Jimmie Bankier gave the favorite "Sands of the Desert" and "Ten Thousand Years". Harold Barrett, Ed Moorman, Ab Burke, solos, and Jamie Clarke provided stirring music on the piano. A xylophone solo by Bill Grant was warmly received. DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

THE SUGAR BOWL

Why do we crave sweets? . . .

For the most part this craving is an indication of insecurity. At any rate, I have to experience a different type of life than the type we are actually living. We long for romance after the days of romance are past. We count the lines in our faces as we stand before the mirror and think with regret of how we looked many years ago. We think of the successes we might have had and didn't. We look with envy upon those people who move with ease among their companions and seem overwhelmingly popular.

Then we reach for the sugar bowl. If we can't have in these big things in life at least we can put an extra teaspoon of sugar in our coffee. We can gnaw away at a piece of hard candy or gulp down a few chocolate creams.

Some people crave sweets because they have a definite taste for sweets. For most people, however, this craving is a psychological matter.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Only a curtain divided the grill room from the main dining room. One or those ceiling-high, corrugated curtains or partitions that are used to close off one big hotel chamber from another.

I had ordered my dinner twice in the grill room, because it was a little less formal than the dining room. It was cozy, I had numerous small tables for two, which were handy for a man wanting a table for one.

But the third night, a party of family guests required me to take them into the more pretentious dining hall. It was very showy.

I had more or less memorized the menu in the grill. The only difference I could see in the menu and the dining room menu was in the prices, and, of course, in the fancy art work on the menu cards.

"Yes," said the head waiter after he had been called from the same kitchen, and is identical in quality and quantity. The difference in price is entirely due to the setting, the surroundings, and the service. It is like the difference between a discount store and a regular store. It isn't what you get; it is how you get it. That means a lot to a good many people."

Lump Occurring in Breast Not Necessarily Malignant

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: What can be done for glands that flare up in my neck, armpits and groin? — Mrs. C.S.

Dear Sir: Last year I noticed three little knots or lumps just below my left ear where the neck joins the shoulder. The doctor said they were lymph nodes and nothing to worry about; they might last a week, a month, a year or forever. If they don't go away is there a chance of malignancy?

To be real honest: I can't help but wonder. — Mr. A.P.

Let me go the long way 'round to answer these questions. When we mention circulation we automatically think of the blood — but there's another, and important, type in our bodies: lymph circulation.

Lymph is something like blood plasma plus some useful variations, and it circulates through fragile channels, here and there reaching nodes, whose purpose is to filter out materials accumulated by the blood in its important job of fighting infection.

Suppose you have a badly infected hand and see ominous red streaks going up the arm. Those are infected lymph channels. Next, when the infection is halted, lymph nodes at the elbow and then the shoulder become swollen and painful.

Nodes in the groin protect the legs; those in the neck and jaw. Colored Women Clubs in Wyoming Burke contributed "Bells of the Sea"; and Bruce Mac and Bill Cazard were a big hit in "The Village by the Sea"; and Jimmie Bankier gave the favorite "Sands of the Desert" and "Ten Thousand Years". Harold Barrett, Ed Moorman, Ab Burke, solos, and Jamie Clarke provided stirring music on the piano. A xylophone solo by Bill Grant was warmly received. Where swollen glands accompany some known illness forget them. But where the reason isn't obvious, and your doctor can detect some other suspicious glands, it'll be worth while to have the relatively simple checking done on the node itself.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have a dear friend whose doctor tells her she has tuberculosis of the lymph glands. Is that the same facts that I can give her so she will realize this is wrong. — E.A.B.

The tubercle bacillus (that's the name of the germ that does the mischief) seems quite to have a predilection for the lung, but it can, on occasion, attack other parts of the body, including the stomach. For instance, you've heard of tuberculosis of the bone, haven't you? It's the same germ, in a different area. So please don't try to tell your dear friend anything except that her trouble is rather unusual but far from unknown. It may take, too, that the germs are covered from stomach washings rather than the sputum. That does not mean tuberculosis of stomach but rather that the germs have swallowed instead of expectorated. This happens with active tuberculosis of the lung, and is one means of making the diagnosis.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have occasionally noted a milky color in my urine, but when I have a medical examination the urine specimen has always been all right. — Miss A.C.

Such cloudiness can result from setting certain fruits (the cloudiness is from phosphate crystals which form), or from various drugs. Standing of the latter, however, would have been shown in urine tests.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

"YESTERDAY ENDED LAST NIGHT"

I read the above maxim in a little magazine one day which was given as the favorite of a great American publisher.

What better maxim for every one of us?

"Yesterday ended last night" We should think this over when we get up in the morning and our minds revert to some particular worry of the day before.

If we could only school ourselves to take up our worries and problems to be solved — even when they involve our own foolish mistakes — then we would soon find our strength increasing and there would be an increased desire upon our part to build upon the ruins of our past mistakes.

The first distinguishing mark of a really big man is shown in the way he treats a problem that has pushed him right up to the wall.

Large interests are so easily handled in small interests, providing you use the same proportion of courage and patience.

T.C. CLUB

The 58th meeting of "Meet-in-the-Manse" was held recently at Ida Waterhouse's by the Amelissburg Town and Country Club.

A discussion took place on the ways of cooking different cuts of beef. Also on the sections of a pig.

A form of beef stew with dumplings and liver was served, both of which were prepared earlier in the meeting.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

WHAT'S YOUR E.Q.?

Many women seem confused about how they should sign their correspondence. Using the same letter Enidcott who marries a man named John Smith, let's see if we can clear up the following questions concerning usage.

1. How does an unmarried woman sign her social mail?

2. How does she sign her business mail and letters to acquaintances?

3. What is the proper legal signature for a married woman?

4. How does a married woman sign her business mail and letters to persons who may not know her well?

5. When is it unnecessary to write her full married name in parentheses under her signature?

6. Is it ever permissible for a married woman to sign her name with Mrs. in front of it without using parentheses?

7. May a woman ever sign a note with just her initials?

8. How does a divorcee sign her mother's name?

9. What form does a widow use?

10. If a widow has the same name as a daughter-in-law, should she make a change in her signature?

ANSWERS:

1. With her first name, if it's to a close friend, or with her first and last name, Mary Endicott, if the person she's writing to wouldn't recognize her by "Mary" alone.

2. To clarify her status, she should sign Mary Endicott. If there's to be return mail, her correspondent then will know how to address her.

3. A married woman usually has her given name, middle name and married name: i.e., Mary Endicott Smith. This is the form most often used on checks and other legal documents, as well as on much of her correspondence.

4. She may sign her name Mary Endicott Smith or simply Mary Smith, then underneath write in parentheses (Mrs. John Smith).

5. When her married name, Mrs. John Smith, is engraved or imprinted at the top of the page. Writing it again in parentheses is redundant.

6. When she signs a note to a tradesman or sends a business telegram cancelling an order, for instance, she may prefer the signature Mrs. John Smith, since recipients know her only by that name.

7. A brief note giving instructions to a maid or telling the dry cleaner how to press a suit may be signed M.E.S. or Mrs. Smith, as long as there is no salutation or closing.

8. A divorcee signs a social mail Mary Smith or Mary Endicott Smith. When parentheses are used, however, she signs Mrs. Endicott Smith, coupling her maiden and married names instead of Mrs. John Smith as formerly.

9. A widow continues using the same signatures as when her husband was alive.

10. If her daughter-in-law is also Mrs. John Smith she will make said "senior" to her name to avoid confusion, but this is done only if they live close by and are apt to have mix-ups over mail and phone calls.

Readers' Friday Column

by Mary Moore

QUESTION: . . . I enjoy your columns immensely but find sometimes it is almost like getting a letter from home. How do you make sesame and poppy seed rolls on rolls? I brush my rolls with beaten egg and tablespoon water just before putting in oven and sprinkle on seeds then after roll cool and are jostled around they fall off. Thought you might have a method. Am interested in snacks, etc. that can be frozen. I always urges to cook and bake and often spend a couple of days at it putting things in the deep freeze . . . Would you please have a go at the cream filling that is used in puff paste and cake rolls? . . . Mrs. M. J.

ANSWER: . . .

The standard cream filling recipe I like is . . .

CREAM FILLING:

½ cup sugar, 4 tablespoons flour, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1½ cups milk, 2 egg yolks, slightly beaten, 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Combine sugar, flour and salt in top of double boiler; add milk and egg yolks, mixing thoroughly. Place over boiling water and cook 10 minutes, or until thick, stirring constantly. Cool; add flavoring.

To make the seeds adhere to sore buns, try brushing them with either slightly beaten egg white without water added or beaten egg yolk without water, but with ½ teaspoon sugar added.

As for snacks to freeze, I have sent to you a recent column entitled Pizza. Please see. Wednesday, May 2nd column for 3 different ways to make Sausage Rolls. Freeze these before baking.

LETTUCE: . . .

Some time ago Mrs. A. B. wrote asking for a recipe for Dad's cookies. This recipe from our church cookbook is slightly different from the ones I've seen in your column. I think it is very good. . . .

Dinner Menu

FRIDAY

Salmon Loaf; Tomato Sauce; Parslied Cauliflower; Harvard Beets; Cabbage Hearts; Sweet Pickles; Prize-Winning Apple Pie (see Thursday); Old Cheddar Cheese; Coffee.

DAD'S COOKIES (courtesy E. G.):

2 cups oatmeal (quick cooking), 1 egg, 2 cups flour, 1½ cups white sugar, 1 cup shortening, 3 teaspoons baking soda, 2 teaspoons ginger, 2 teaspoons cinnamon, 1 teaspoon allspice, 2 tablespoons golden syrup, 1 cup hot water, 1 cup raisins.

Beat sugar and shortening well, add egg, then syrup and sifted dry ingredients and cocoanut and raisins last of all. Roll in small balls. Flatten with floured fork. Bake on greased cookie sheet at 375 deg. Fahr. for 10 minutes. Makes 120 to 150 cookies.

ANSWERS: . . .

I am sorry you did not include your name so I could write you personally. Please, however, I am grateful for this popular recipe.

St. Margaret's Afternoon Guild Holds 'May Time' Tea

Little white-covered quartet tables, some embroidered in spring flowers; one exquisitely done on white nylon with yellow embroidered while daisies, while others were lace-edged, and centred with tiny crystal holders containing spring flowers, of rose-pink tulips, and little sprays of lacy veil, white and blue flowers, formed a pleasing picture for the "May Tea" yesterday afternoon in St. Margaret's-on-the-Hill, under the sponsorship of the Afternoon Guild. Complementing this were bowls vases of pussywillows, the long tea table, with its white cloth, its centrepiece of gold-potted pink hydrangea, and the silver service and the tall pale-pink candles.

Presiding at the tea table were: Mrs. G. B. Barnett, Mrs. W. Shepherd, Mrs. W. D. Saunders and Mrs. H. Wickham, while serving the guests at the quartet tables were: Mrs. C. Brown, Mrs. G. Smith, and Miss J. Van de Vooren. Mrs. Hilda Mrs. A. Briens, and Mrs. W. Messer kept the plates of dainty sandwiches and cookies replenished.

Mrs. R. Babcock presided at the "Needy of" cupboard, and smilingly received the tax.

Along one side and across the end were the various booths of merchandise. The apron booth, conveyed by Mrs. W. Means and Mrs. C. Parm, had a bevy of lovely all-over aprons and half aprons in pretty prints, and other goods.

There was delightfully dressed dolls in hand-crochet, some in yellow, others in pinks and blues, and some mauve, with tiny crochet hats, and wearing little frocks embroidered in spring flowers, also in crochet, held the spotlight.

Close by were other embroidered, pillow slips with crochet edges, and also dish towels in blue, yellow and pink, also embellished with hand crochet; blue and white towels in blue bath salts, showing what can be done with empty detergent bottles; wash cloths and soap in turtle shape; as well as embroidered slippers made from washcloths; teapot holders and other fine things were also displayed; pink tumnies, costume jewellery, and a tea cloth.

HOMECOMING

The homebaking booth was a "mecca" for lovers of fine confections. Mrs. J. Redner, and Mrs. J. A. Watkin were in charge of the fancy cakes; sausage rolls with pastry, flaky and tasty; peanut butter cookies; taffy tarts; date, and nut bars; short bread; coffee cakes; apple; raspberry; gooseberry; cherry; and pumpkin pies; strawberry squares; cup cakes clouded in shredded cocoanut and topped with red maraschino cherries; Scotch cake; individual mince pies; fruit and nut caraway breads; graham wafer cakes; sugar-coated swirls; jams, jellies, relish sauce, and loaves of homemade bread.

The country booth, conveyed by Mrs. J. Dobson, were little pepper and salty; several pieces of home jewellery; and many other little articles, including gold-edged juice glasses and little doggie washcloths.

Mrs. W. Colyer had charge of the plants, and little plants, which included, baby's tears; cacti; African violets; potted ivies and some tiny flowering plants. And not to be forgotten were the cups of delicious pea-nutty coffee; homemade chocolates, and bags of popcorn, fudge creams, and boxes of mixtures.

A fishpond, with a fish for each little Isaac Walton, conveyed by Miss A. Docter, was soon fished dry.

A dainty tea pleasingly convened.

Women Make Many Requests At Meeting

GUELPH (CP)—The Federated Women's Institutes of Ontario will ask the attorney-general to make breath analysis and blood tests compulsory in cases when it must be established whether a person is impaired by alcohol.

A resolution to this effect was passed by the FWI's provincial board at Thursday's final sitting of its spring meeting.

The meeting also decided to ask the attorney-general to consider raising the maximum fines and sentences for persons convicted of driving under the influence of liquor.

A motion opposing the relaxation of laws regulating Sunday sport and recreation was given full support. It was said any relaxation of the laws would have a detrimental effect on the moral life of the country, and particularly of young people.

Other resolutions passed:

That it be made compulsory for all minor hockey players to wear helmets.

That the provincial hospital insurance plan be revised to include family coverage of children who are over the age of 19 but still dependent on their parents.

That in the case of death or separation of husband and wife the home furnishings should be deemed the property of the wife.

That the original prizes should be marked on goods sold at a reduction in supermarkets.

Clara W. — He makes everyone go to sleep when he gets sleepy himself.

Arnold W. — It's for their own good. They need the rest.

Clara W. — For the past five years it's been pure chaos in our home because Arnie is such a bug about bedtime.

I suppose it's natural when the children were small, but now they're 16 and 17-year-old girls, and our son is 15. Right into their teens, the daughters were expected to retire when their dad said so, usually at 10 o'clock. He's been himself by 9:30 every night, evenings and weekends included. Our eldest got away from it all by marrying at 18. Luckily she loves her husband and it's a good marriage.

But the bickering with the other children goes on and I don't blame them. All would be peaceful if we obeyed him. But I enjoy staying up late, when all is quiet. Most of the time I've got work to end the rascal he makes.

Arnold W. — My father never had a sick day in his life. When he did it was from accident. And he attributed his good health to his early bed time. And brought up by-law a me was.

I know the human body needs at least eight hours of sleep. A night, Mig wife and I usually retire, however, a little before they'd sit around most of the night if I didn't send them all off to bed at a sensible hour. This way, even though they kick they sleep well and get by their classes and work on time. Oh, I stretch the rules at times, even though I can hardly keep my eyes open. When we have company 10:45 is okay. And on weekends, the daughter has until 12:30 and the lad 1 to be out.

Council: Those who last night last track of the time and didn't succumb to drowsiness until the first streaks of a new day told them it had been an awfully short night. Some say a class or two of "monitor" who sees that she and everyone else in the family get to bed early. But others who have solved their own sleep problems rely on her for not being permitted to burn her candle more freely, that at both ends and one in a while, if she'd like!

This is more than a nicety issue, however. We might be able to wrap up a neat answer for Arnold by reminding him that sleep needs differ for individuals, that the number of hours assigned for sleep have no relation to the health-giving quality of the sleep. All depends upon how the waking hours are spent. Some need eight hours. Others sail along fine on less. Col. John Stapp, a physician and engineer in aerospace medicine, says that he gets four to six hours a night of sleep, the soundness of which is determined by how satisfying the rest of the day were.

Still, it looks as though Arnold is using sleep as the vehicle for throwing his weight around, in the guise of doing his family good. The only good it seems to do is to alert them all to his unfairness, and prepare them for further battles. It wasn't just the ironclad curfew which made Daughter No. 1 leave the fraternity after what could have been the "fit. It was a dad who acts like Little Caesar.

But there's hope. Clara and the others are rebelling and it seems unbiased ruling. While too rigid a regulation is oppressive, we do, with Arnold, see the importance of some schedule. Hopefully this is arrived at through friendly, relaxed discussion between parents and children, not by fiat. We propose that a more elastic spread be set up, with differentials allowed between the bedtimes of Age 13, Age 17 and Age 21-plus, according to responsibilities and personal rhythms.

As to Arnold's own sleep needs, they may be inordinate. A physician may find a physiological reason for his somnatic nodding, a disease symptom. A psychiatrist might interpret extensive sleepiness as an urge to shut out worry, to escape from the conflicts in reality. Arnold's family doesn't share his desire to be rested by bedtime, and since this is not the Army, Mr. W., you can't order — only advise — re "flight out."

Scientists Are Dismayed Over Extreme Reactions To Radioactivity Dangers

By ALTON BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Writer

OAK RIDGE, Tenn. (AP) — Outside, rain splattered down. And a frightened mother kept her children home from school. Rain, she believed, would bring down deadly amounts of radioactive fallout.

Other parents at times of nuclear tests, and even long afterward, won't allow their children to drink milk for fear it is contaminated with radioactive iodine that would give them thyroid cancer.

Scientists are generally dismayed over such extreme reactions to real or potential hazards in fallout.

They know what happens to animals given pretty good whoops of radiation, or big doses of Strontium 90, radioactive iodine. They know, for example, that strontium goes to bones, and can produce bone cancer in animals. But it takes 1,000 to 10,000 times the amount of strontium represented so far by fallout to produce the bone cancers in animals.

Still, that gives them cause for caution about what the far more tiny doses from fallout might do to humans over the years. But the scientist's phrase "might be hazardous" sometimes is taken to mean any amount will be hazardous.

U.S. government radiation experts have established what they believe are sound practice limits regarding special-threat fallout atoms. These are the maximum amounts of radioactive strontium, iodine or cesium which they believe a person could take in or be exposed to daily and still not be harmed. Fallout in the air, in milk or food, rarely has exceeded these limits, and then only for brief periods.

But they cannot offer absolutely no bodily harm from test fallout. Full knowledge about such radiation is lacking.

This uncertainty creates an issue in discussions of the need for nuclear testing, the moral right to test and the fear that testing enhances prospects of ultimate war.

New research experiments are aimed at learning what the somatic or bodily effects of low - level, chronic radiation may be.

One project being started here by a team of specialists will involve a colony of 100,000 mice, quite apart from the mice used in genetic studies.

Hundreds to thousands of mice will be exposed to various dosages of gamma rays from radioactive cesium over periods of days to months.

Then they will be observed and examined during their lifespans — normally about two years or so — to see if they live less long or get more cancers, leukemias and other ailments than mice not so exposed, explains Dr. A. C. Upton, a pathologist and physiologist.

Life shortening from radiation has been observed already in mice, Dr. Upton adds. But little information is available about animals larger than mice and about humans.

value would add about $20 to the price of a car made in Canada but $80 to $90 to an imported car.

"The trick is not to import," he said, "we're going to swallow it, we're not going to pass it on. What we lose in profit, we're going to pick up in business taken away from the imports."

A spokesman for General Motors of Canada Limited said: "It would be safe to say the move won't have any effect on 1962 car prices."

Karl E. Scold, president of Ford Motor Company of Canada Limited, said the move would be an incentive to exporters and could have favorable effects.

Ron W. Todham, president of Chrysler Corporation of Canada Limited, said the stabilization "will greatly add to our Canadian content."

"We hope there will be additional savings for the whole Canadian economy to offset the immediate disadvantages of the exchange deal," Mr. Todham said.

SEES MORE TRAVEL

Lisle Field, director of the Canadian Government Travel Bureau, said he is sure that U.S. visitors will be encouraged to come to Canada and will spend more money.

"There's some evidence to show that in 1961 the lowered value of the Canadian dollar was accompanied by quite a large increase in Canada's tourist income. I also mean, I think, that more Canadians will be encouraged to travel more within their own country."

The devaluation will benefit Prairie farmers mostly, higher wheat prices but their production costs will also increase, Dr. Ralph Hall, president of the Alberta Wheat Pool, said.

In a prepared statement he said the devaluation may result in increases in the cost of goods used by farmers but "this should be small in relation to the improvement in the price of grain."

However, A. T. Brodeur, president of the Canadian Importers and Traders Association, said at Toronto the association deplores the further devaluation.

Mr. Brodeur said the devaluation will result in an increase in the cost of imported goods which cannot be produced in Canada and, in the long run, it will have the effect of increasing the cost of most goods manufactured in Canada.

Premier Duff Roblin of Manitoba of Alberta said the move is "a climax in Conservative mismanagement of the nation's business.

"While there is some justification for a discount," the Social Credit premier said, "the present 7.5 per cent devaluation is excessive. It will cost millions of dollars in increased cost of living and debt service charges."

WAS POSTPONED

The government's comprehensive, compulsory and prepaid medical scheme, designed to cover about 862,000 of Saskatchewan's 930,000 residents, originally was to go into operation April 1 but was postponed for several reasons, chief among them the doctors' opposition.

At the doctors' meeting, Dr. E. W. Barootes of Regina, vice-president of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, opposed that a hit - and - run driver went unpunished if involved in a major accident "just because he has some clue to work with in such cases."

Lieut. Guay cited a recent case solved by one of his subordinates. Police found a piece of chrome trim found at the scene of an accident led to the arrest of a man who had his car repaired at a small country garage 40 miles from Montreal.

LIQUOR IS CAUSE

"It often happens that we catch up with the hit-and-run driver after two or three years after the accident."

Lieut. Guay said most hit-and-run cases happen at night and liquor is a cause in 60 per cent of them.

The number of women who fail to stop after an accident usually was due to shock or ignorance of the law—was increasing, but women were easier to catch than men.

Lieut. Guay stressed that it is up to the motorist to give his name and address or call police in the case of an accident, even if he is not at fault.

"It is not up to the motorist to be the judge in his own case."

If the average motorist is to be sufficiently aware of his duties and obligations, Lieut. Guay said, special classes may eventually have to be given in the schools.

Average Canadian Motorist Breaks Law Many Times Without Ever Knowing It

By JACQUES TREPANIER

MONTREAL (CP) — It happens hundreds of times every day. A law-abiding Canadian motorist, sometimes without even knowing it, makes himself a criminal in the eyes of the law.

It's not some obscure, little-known section of the Criminal Code that is involved here. The provisions of Article 221 are familiar to most motorists.

The article says simply that a motorist must stop and give his name and address when involved in an accident.

What is not so familiar is that an offence does not depend on the amount of damage inflicted. It's still an accident if one car only scrapes another while entering or leaving a parking space, or dents another's bumper at a stop light.

"The law is explicit on this point," says Lieut. André Guay, of the who heads the Montreal Police Department's hit-and-run squad. "The law is simple and makes good sense."

MOST ARE CAUGHT

The hit-and-run driver is not only the type who knocks down a pedestrian and flees the scene without stopping.

"There are 1,001 cases of hit and run unsuspected by the public," the policeman says.

In Montreal alone, nearly 8,000 complaints were lodged with police in 1961. In the majority of cases, damage was done to a parked car.

"We trust that the motorist responsible in 75 or 80 per cent of the cases," said Lieut. Guay, the schools.

"In most of the unsolved cases, the damage is light."

EXPLAINS DOLLAR ACTION — Finance Minister Fleming is shown at a press conference in Toronto Thursday as he again explained his decision to devalue the Canadian dollar. college.

He finished his hour-long speech, all but one of about 550 doctors present vociferously rejected his plea and declared in a standing vote that they would not work under the plan. Doctors declined to say what action they will take after July 1.

The meeting was to continue today. It was closed to the press after Thursday's morning session.

SEDs OPPOSE

The doctors have opposed the plan since it became a political issue before the provincial general election in June, 1960. The Liberal government, then under Premier T. C. Douglas, was returned with a 35-to-15 majority.

Standing in the 61-seat legislature now is: CCF 34; Liberals 19; Independent 1; vacant 1.

Provincial Liberal Leader Ross Thatcher, who said Mr. Erb will be invited to join the Liberal party if the provincial council of the party consents, reiterated his request that the government call an election.

Mr. Erb had been reported keeping company with leaders of the Liberal party and that his resignation showed political opportunism. "We have never been able to associate with Mr. Erb."

The government's comprehensive, compulsory and prepaid medical scheme, designed to cover about 862,000 of Saskatchewan's 930,000 residents, originally was to go into operation April 1 but was postponed for several reasons, chief among them the doctors' opposition.

At the doctors' meeting, Dr. E. W. Barootes of Regina, vice-president of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, opposed that a particularly critical of amendments to the Medical Care Act passed this spring.

The amendments give the administrative medical care commission the power to act as agent for all municipalities—except those who specifically request otherwise — in making payment, setting rates of payment and fighting and taking court action over medical bills.

Dr. Barootes said the amendments "were deliberate, malicious and vicious." He said the act makes it impossible for doctors to practise in the province if they are accustomed and the amendments leave the doctors no recourse if they are sued by some "crackpot."

Ducks Unlimited to Spend $600,000 in Effort to Provide Breeding Grounds

By STAN McCABE

WINNIPEG (CP)—The musical admonition to "be kind to our web-footed friends" will be supported to the tune of $600,000 this year by Ducks Unlimited (Canada) Limited.

The record budget for the Canadian section of the waterfowl conservation organization has already been apportioned.

It comes at a time when DU is preoccupied with the effects of drought in Western Canada, one of the chief breeding grounds for wild ducks.

"There is no doubt drought has seriously affected the breeding grounds in the southern areas of the Prairie provinces," says Stirling S. Adams, president of the American section of DU. "But surveys also have shown an increase of waterfowl in the more northern parts of the same provinces."

He adds, however, that northern production cannot offset losses in the south and waterfowl population is expected to show a decline this year.

SLOUGHS DRY

Thousands of small ponds and sloughs were dried in 1961 and some of the DU projects which hold back water to provide waterfowl breeding areas were dry for the first time in the 20 years since they were built.

"Ducks Unlimited now has 559 projects in operation, covering some 210,000 acres," Mr. Adams said, "Of this total only 20 are out of commission—due to lack of water.

"When one stops to consider that we have just experienced four years of drought, DU's record is all the more impressive."

In 1961, he said, the only water found in some drought-stricken areas was in Ducks Unlimited projects. And where there was water there were ducks.

This underlined the need for building more projects and the need for conservation measures during drought when crews could work on dry ground.

Fred S. Mitchell-Hedges of the Vancouver Province, has been elected president of Ducks Unlimited (Canada) for 1962. A director of the organization since 1956, he was first elected president last year.

Re-elected named this year were F. S. Sharpe of Winnipeg and Peter Bowden of Calgary.

Waterfowl have already started to move across the border into Canada on their way north but spring surveys still have to be made.

DU in Winnipeg said prospects for the 1962 nesting season in southern Manitoba have deteriorated since early March.

"At that time, winter precipitation was normal or considerably above normal for most of southern Manitoba. Light snowfall during March, however, resulted in reduction of total winter precipitation."

In a report from Edmonton Ron McKay, supervisor of the Canadian Wildlife Service there, said conditions for ducks are "pretty grim" south of Red Deer, Alta. North of this point where snowfall was generally heavy, conditions are "fairly good." But a wet spring would be needed to fill sloughs and ponds in southern Alberta.

Judge Defends Action In Refusing Transcript Of Evidence to Gamblers

TORONTO (CP)—Mr. Justice W. D. Roach said Thursday his reveal commission inquiry into Ontario crime would be discouraged if counsel for gamblers Joseph McDermott and Vincent Feeley were allowed to have evidence given at recent secret hearings.

In a submission to the Ontario Court of Appeal, he defended his action in refusing Toronto lawyer Walton C. Ross a transcript of testimony given by an unidentified "Mr. X" at the closed session.

The lawyer, counsel for Mr. X and the gambling pair, also was refused full counsel privileges at the public sittings. The court is to decide the issue following argument Monday.

Sessions of the one-man commission have been suspended until the court proceedings are over, but are expected to be resumed right after the given judgment.

Mr. Ross, whose statement to the Appeal Court was made in submitting a "stated case" on the issue, said Mr. X was questioned behind closed doors because previous police warnings of "the possibility of his being subjected to reprisals in the event he testified against or either in concert with him or independently were grounds for refusal — acts amounting to crime."

WOULD DESTROY

"It was my view," the justice added, "that the benefit to be derived in my search for the truth in his evidence given in camera, quite apart from the matter of public policy, would be destroyed if a transcript of his evidence was later given to gamblers whose counsel had not yet been given by them."

The commissioner said McDermott and Feeley, "whose names have been appearing as key figures in evidence taken since March 21, have been subpoenaed to testify before the commission.

Dealing with his refusal to allow Mr. Rose to cross-examine commission witnesses and call his own on behalf of his clients, Mr. Justice Roach said the public was properly represented by counsel and the Rose clients, were not entitled to "a special right."

The commission has its own counsel, and the Liberal and New Democratic parties also are represented, the latter two have opposed Mr. Rose's move.

Union Adopts Gag Rule to Stop Leaks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The executive board of the International Union of Electrical Workers adopted a gag rule Thursday to block news leaks on internal troubles in the AFL-CIO member union.

James B. Carey, IUE president, announced the action at a press conference at which he said that reports of a new political alignment involving him and the union's secretary-treasurer, Al Hartnett, were "grossly inaccurate."

There seemed no doubt, however that the two engaged in a scuffle at the IUE board meeting Wednesday, a follow-up of previous unpleasant incidents between the two high union officers.

Carey said the board had unanimously adopted the following motion:

"We condemn and denounce any officer, board members or staff members who issues or leaks or permits issuance or leaks of any statements or news stories to any news media concerning any alleged internal problems of the IUE."

Carey said that at the board meeting Thursday there was discussion of news accounts of Wednesday's altercation and the board members agreed the events that took place were as described in the stories. He declined, however, to explain what had happened.

Union Stores Plan Is Given Cool Reception

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto and District Labor Council Thursday gave a cool reception to a plan sponsored by former Toronto mayor Allan Lamport for a chain of union supermarkets run for union members.

A final proposal calling for three shopping centres, to be known as Union Family Stores, selling at discount prices, only to union families, was referred by the council to its executive for further study.

The plan, sponsored by Mr. Lamport and John E. Pauquier, a former air commodore and flying ace of Ottawa, would supply everything from cut - rate baby carriages to funeral services, at promised savings of $300 to $1,000 annually to a union family.

Mr. Lamport and his associates sought active co-operation of the labor council in the ventures and promised to use union labor and make the stores showplaces for union-made goods.

Some of the unionists said there would be advantages such as incentive to unorganized workers to join unions but they were skeptical about entering the business world.

Murray Cotterill, public relations director of the United Steelworkers of America (CLC), suggested the plan be shelved for later consideration.

U.S. Govt. Using Political Influence as Moral Weapon To Head Off Costly Strikes

By HAROLD MORRISON

WASHINGTON (CP) — The Kennedy administration is pursuing an unprecedented peacetime policy of using its political influence as a moral weapon to head off costly national strikes and inflationary wage settlements.

Behind this pursuit is the president's view that the United States cannot afford rising prices if it is to prevent the flight of U.S. gold and hold its world trade position in the face of increased competition from the European Common Market.

In effect, Kennedy has suggested that both management and labor show more self-discipline in seeking larger slices of profit and wage gains without comparative rises in real industrial production.

Labor Secretary Goldberg has taken a step farther by stating that in future federal mediators will lay down guidelines for major wage settlements, based on what is best for the country as a whole.

While these guidelines cannot have the force of law, the fact that the power of the president is behind them may act as a powerful persuader to both sides to come to terms.

STEEL AN EXAMPLE

The steel issue is an example of how the president apparently intends to proceed.

Well in advance of the June 30 contract deadline, the government invited labor and management to begin negotiations on a new wage contract with the subtle suggestion that both sides make sure decisions reached did not result in inflation.

Steel plays a crucial lead in national wage and price trends. What happens in the steel industry could well set the pattern for other major industries. More than that, steel was a battleground for Kennedy's new anti-inflation approach.

So, while the government gave no indication of dictating settlement terms, federal officials hovered in the background, watching every development in the talks, ready to step in again with suggested "guidelines" if the two sides reached a deadlock.

What finally resulted was considered a success by federal authorities—a non - inflationary settlement, with fringe benefits for workers and the prospect of new wage talks at the end of a year. Kennedy was elated.

BOTH SIDES GRUMBLED

Initially, there was grumbling by both labor and management representatives as the Kennedy policy became clear. George Meany, AFL-CIO president, criticized the government for infringing on the rights of free people and free society."

Yet there also appeared to be a growing awareness that governments must do something more than in the past to prevent a recurrence of such expensive waste as the 116 - day steel strike of 1959.

Business Week, a national U.S. magazine, says it approves of the idea while sounding a warning that as the government moves deeper into labor-management intrusion, it must make sure its genuine devotion to the public is beyond doubt. "The slightest suspicion of playing politics will destroy all hope of real success," the magazine said.

FACTS OUT EARLY

Previous governments have usually tried to remain out of labor - management fights. But when mediation broke down, the usual course was to wait until a strike started before the government aired the facts and figures in the case. Sometimes it would seek an 80-day injunction or "cooling off" period to obtain at least a temporary halt in the strike.

In his 1960 election campaign, Kennedy said all facts and figures should be made known early in any big wage - work battle. This would serve as a form of moral persuasion through public pressure. Added to this should be more flexible government weapons which Goldberg hinted the government may seek from Congress next year.

Business Week says that in a sensitive and complex economy "it is sheer insanity to let such a vital matter as the level of wages and prices in a basic industry to be decided by brute force."

"Perhaps we could afford the luxury of a hands-off policy in the years immediately after the war. We certainly cannot afford it today when the U.S. is running an adverse balance of payments and its markets all over the world are threatened by vigorous, low-cost competitors."

NEW PEGGED

Mr. Pearson, commenting on the dollar pegging during his Wednesday speech in Calgary, said it is clear that Mr. Fleming is "struggling desperately to prevent the dollar's value from sinking to the lowest it has ever been."

He termed the move a confession of the complete failure of the Conservatives' economic policies. Confidence had been destroyed by the government's mismanagement of Canada's economic affairs.

An NDP view of the dollar situation was expressed in Winnipeg by Stanley Knowles, former Canadian Labor Congress vice-president, now seeking to regain his seat in the Commons.

"The extent to which the government has had to devaluate our currency indicates that our economy is in an unhealthy state," said the onetime CCF MP.

BEES COSTS RISE

Social Credit Leader Thompson called it "a desperate measure to prop up a declining economy." Its immediate effect might be to improve trade situation but it was certain to lead to an increased cost of living for Canadians in the long run.

It was also farm day on the Liberal platform. At a curling rink rally in the southern Saskatchewan town of Weyburn, Mr. Pearson promised a minimum of $2 a bushel for wheat in farm position purchases.

The $2 basis, applying to No. 1 wheat in storage at the Lakehead, would extend for three years and cover all wheat—export or domestic—sold by farmers.

Current price at the Lakehead for No. 1 northern, after a six-cent increase due to the pegging of the dollar, is about $1.96 a bushel).

In Petrolia, Ont., Works Minister Walker had this to say about Mr. Pearson's approach to farm matters:

"He is a slick lawyer but he doesn't know the difference between a keg of nails and a bale of hay when it comes to helping the country's farmers!"

Focus on Health

This (the week) A survival booster for a man; a new look at blood fat and help for drug addicts.

SURVIVAL CENTRE

The California hagfish is a primitive creature that has survived the test of time largely because it lives in the icy depths of the ocean, safe from germs that plague mankind.

But the hagfish has no detectable defence against disease, and appears to be entirely devoid of those tissues which make antibodies, the disease - fighting mechanisms of the blood.

Man, on the other hand, has apparently won his battle for survival in the germ-ridden earth largely because of his built-in defences against disease, reports Dr. Robert A. Good, University of Minnesota pediatrician.

In fact, the centre of his built-in defence may be the tiny gland called the thymus, located behind the top of the breastbone, Dr. Good says. Should this theory be proved, Dr. Good adds, such diseases may one day be stored or banked and transplanted to help humans fight off disease.

TWO GROUPS OF FAT

Rochester fighting scientists have spotted two groups of fat in the bloodstream, rather than only one previously believed.

The new discovery could have a bearing on atherosclerosis, the thickening or hardening of arteries which can lead to heart attacks and strokes. It may help doctors learn how the fatty lining that narrows blood vessels is developed.

NUDGING THE HABIT

For those persons trying to break the habit or addiction to narcotics and barbiturates, the process of withdrawal is a nightmare of pain, tension and nausea.

But a strong tranquilizer drug — Promazine Hydrochloride — has eased these symptoms and helped pave the way to recovery, reports Dr. Andre Kolo of South Oaks Psychiatric Hospital, Amityville, N.Y.

"The treatment produced a state of quiescence and calmness from which the patient could be readily aroused to care for his personal needs or to participate in psychotherapeutic procedures," Dr. Kolo writes in the New York State Journal of Medicine.

"Withdrawal was effected easily and without major complications in all cases."

Teen-Age Canada

Necessary to Develop 'Telephone Technique'

By JACK HUTTON

A 17-year-old acquaintance was looking extremely down-at-the-mouth when he halted me on the street the other day.

"I've been on the telephone for a solid month," he complained. "But nothing seems to be going right. I haven't found a job yet."

I hated to say it, but my friend might have been suffering a common teen-age problem—poor telephone technique. Thousands suffer it but don't know it.

A senior telephone executive with whom I checked declared: "No one will ever probably compile the figures, but the sheer waste of telephone hours by Canadian teen-agers must be staggering."

More and more high schools, he said, now include somewhere in their instruction one or two classes on how to use a telephone properly. Telephone companies, he added, are extremely interested in the experiment.

"Well, what advice would you like to see passed out?" I asked. "How, for instance, could my job-seeking friend improve his chances of impressing a prospective employer on the other side of the telephone?"

Here was his advice:

On business calls, make sure you organize what you are going to say. Nothing irritates a businessman more than listening to a babbling caller who takes several minutes to get around to the point.

"Very probably," said the telephone man, "the teen-ager will speak to a company operator first. Ask her which department will handle your call, then state your business and make sure you state your name clearly. Spell it if you have to."

Should the teen-ager speak up, I wondered. My telephone friend winced.

DON'T SHOUT

"Remember, that the telephone has progressed a wee bit since Alexander Graham Bell," he said. "There is no need to shout.

Speak in a conversational tone as if the other person were in the same room, speaking directly into and one inch away from the microphone.

"A great waste of time," he added, "is caused by teen-age girls who feel it is mysterious or romantic to whisper into telephones. How the devil is the poor fellow going to hear what she's saying if she thinks she's Marilyn Monroe?"

What about tone? "It has actually been proved," he said, "that another person can hear you smile. There is a difference which comes across the wire. Remember you're talking to another person and not an impersonal wire."

"I wish more people—teen-agers and adults too—would listen to their own 'hello.' I would wager some people in realize how bored they sound to other people. Imagine saying 'LO' to a friend!"

What about length of calls? "Well, this is something which every family settles" he said. "But I would suggest avoiding quarrels by setting a time limit for personal calls. Think of the teen-agers who put their feet up on a chair and talk for an hour."

"There may be times when your family considers telephone calls taboo. Take the dinner hour, for example. I think any sensible teen-ager could get this simple rule across to friends within a short time."

What if long-winded friends telephone? "We've all got to learn how to handle that some time," said my telephone friend firmly. "Tell them that mother has just called or something like that."

"Remember," he concluded, "what William Shakespeare said long before the telephone was invented: "Mend your speech a little lest you may mar your fortune."

CANADIAN PEACE CORPS

Several of you have written to find out more about the Canadian Overseas Volunteers Corps which is sending young Canadians to help in India and other Eastern countries.

Typical was Nancy's letter which said, "It will be a long time before I can be old enough to become a volunteer but in the meantime there must be many skills to be learned in preparation."

Good for you, Nancy, and the others who have enquired. Basically, the COVC is needing university graduates who are chosen after a course of several weeks in language, history and customs of the country they are likely to work in.

The training and selection is so far taking place only at the University of Toronto, York University and Laval University. But by the time you are ready it is hoped that it will be a national organization.

The overseas countries—India, Borneo, Sarawak and new African nations—need a great many different types of workers. That includes teachers, agriculturists, nurses, doctors, administrators and others.

My advice right now would be to make sure you include at least one language in your studies. For further information, write Canadian Overseas Volunteers, Room 606, 11 Adelaide Street West, Toronto.

Sunday School Lesson

Colonists of Heaven

By ROY L. SMITH

Dr. James McBride, the great the crowd goes to eight clubs for the purpose of reveling in Scottish scholar, hit upon a graphic phrase when he said that "Christians are colonists of Heaven." By this he meant in any place where they happen to be followers of Jesus Christ are expected to take their ordders from Christ's sources. That does not mean that we are to be relieved of the responsibility of obeying the laws of our country, or of being subject to the chief authorities. But it does mean that for Christians there is to be an entirely different moral code.

It was a basic conviction of the Jews that they were a chosen people — chosen of God to accomplish a divine purpose. It is true, of course, that they believed they were to be divinely favored, but one of the insistences of the prophets in every century was that, as privileged people, the Hebrews were doubly responsible people.

The International Sunday School lesson for May 6 is "CHRISTIANS IN A PAGAN SOCIETY." Acts 2 through 5; 1 Peter 2.

This responsibility required that they live according to an altogether different moral code, from that which prevailed among the pagans. And when the Christian Church came into existence, this sense of destiny and responsibility was carried over from Judaism. It is not identity. A Christian who is not different because of his Christianity is not entitled to call himself a Christian.

OWN DISCIPLINARIAN

The first requirement of the Christian is that he set himself up as his own disciplinarian, requiring himself to conform to a higher standard of morals than that which prevailed among the pagans, and a different code than which prevails among modern pagans.

Modern life is extremely hard on the individual. We are voted en masse, we are persuaded to read the same books and patronize the same stores. We are expected to conform to the same styles that appear ridiculous on other people, and we are expected to be loyal to our economic and social group, no matter what the moral convictions of the crowd may be.

In insisting that the Christians shall abstain from "the pleasures of the flesh," Peter was holding up the ideal of Christian morality which Jesus described when he said see "the pure in heart shall see God."

Ours is a generation given over to license. If the crowd drinks, then that means it is perfectly proper to drink. If of today that the Church shall censure and criticism the use of political and economic, is an effort to avoid the charge that it is trying to impost economics and debauching social practices.

It is commonly admitted that alcoholism is one of the four major health problems of the American people, and if that is true, then the Church has a responsibility in the case that cannot be evaded if it is to have its own soul. Alcoholism that is doing nothing to reduce alcoholism and consumers is not doing its duty by either its country or its Lord.

Successful Living

(A Canadian Social Worker Helps with Human Problems)

Sympathetic About Lost Purse

DEAR DORIS:—Despite my rapidly advancing years, I have been a consistent reader of your column ever since it first appeared in the paper.

Your decisions and advice given to those communicating with you are quite refreshing. I'm sure you have helped quite a lot of people.

Tonight "A very disappointed mother" is distressed because of the loss of her purse; for her, this was a tragedy, so I am enclosing a small amount for you to send to her which I trust will help restore her faith in humanity.—SYMPATHETIC.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR SYMPATHETIC:—How nice to have a co-worker. Your contribution is quite refreshing and I am sure the "disappointed mother" will be a little less disappointed in humanity when she receives it.

DEAR DORIS:—All the eight years that I was married, my husband was having a great time drinking and fooling around with women. Many times he came home smeared with lipstick. I forgave him for all of it.

Then I took up with a divorced man. My husband found this out and I was glad, because I wanted to hurt him like he hurt me. We have been separated for three months, but now I have found that it's no life without the man you married. Seeing that we have six children, all under the age of eight, I have begged him to take me back again, promising that I would never be unfaithful again, regardless of what he did to me.

He could not even use up a lot for no reason at all. I say if I had it coming when I was unfaithful to him, but he was also unfaithful. Don't you think he should forgive me and start all over anew?

Please don't ask me to ask him to see a marriage counsellor because he strictly doesn't want anything to do with me and the kids. My age is 23 and his age is 25. I have completed 12½, but I didn't have to get married.—SORRY.

DEAR SORRY:—Are you going back to him because you love him? Because you need financial support? Or because you feel the children need a father? I can't believe that you really miss his regular beatings.

It might seem unreasonable that because you forgave him, he would forgive you. But if you go crawling back to him, you have set the pattern for him to act like an injured martyr and yourself to be treated as a doormat—I might say as usual!

It was wrong to go off with a divorced man, but at least this was a gesture of independence on your part.

You have a right to support from him and if you married him when you were 15½, you have a right to some consideration and forgiveness, especially in the light of the way he himself has carried on.

But my letter will not bring this about. A marriage counsellor is the best kind of help for both of you. If you can't get him to go, go yourself for a start. Men have been known to come round.

DEAR DORIS:—I am 18 years old and know that I am not half old enough to be seriously in love, but at the beginning of this school year I started liking a boy. Later on, about a month ago, I found that I was no longer interested in him. The reason is because he is too babyish.

Then I started liking a boy that my second best girl friend liked. I went to the show with him along with some other friends. He talked and had fun.

I do not want to hurt my girl friend's feelings, but I think that she should know how she stands. Don says to let her find out for herself. And also, my old boy friend thinks I still like him. Please write me and tell me what I should do.—TROUBLED.

* * *

DEAR TROUBLED:—Be friends with all of them. There is no reason why you should not tell your girl friend that the other boy likes you, too. As for the babyish boy friend, he can grow out of this.

For the next few years you are going to like a good many boys and girls. Reach out for new faces and new friendships.

DEAR DORIS:—When I was just a baby my father died and I was brought up by my grandparents. From then on I have been taking my grandparents' name, but I wasn't adopted.

Now I want to get married. My name is registered on my birth certificate correctly, but my driver's licence, Unemployment Insurance, Income Tax, etc., are all under my grandparents' family name. All these will have to be cancelled and changed to my correct name.

I have talked to several people who feel it isn't much of a job to change it, but I think it will be a lot to be done with the aid of proper authority.—WHAT'S MY NAME.

WHAT'S MY NAME—Stop worrying. As long as your name is listed correctly on your birth certificate, nothing else matters right now.

You will have to change everything over to your married name shortly any way. Just be sure your minister knows your right name!

This advice is straight from an official-who-knows.

MEMBERSHIP RISES

NEW YORK (AP)—The Roman Catholic Church membership in the United States now totals 42,878,905, it was announced Thursday. This is 771,765 more than last year, a gain of about 1.8 per cent. The new figures were issued in the 1962 Official Catholic Directory.

Flying Aircraft Only One Of Many Jobs for Pilot

SASKATOON (CP) — Art Davis, veteran pilot with the Saskatchewan Air Ambulance here, has found that flying his aircraft is just one of the many jobs he must be prepared to do on a mercy flight.

In nine years with the service he has been called upon to play nursemaid to a newborn infant, give blood, administer artificial respiration and help with syringes.

His flights, about 700 a year, carry him across the northern reaches of Saskatchewan. He must be prepared to fly in good or bad weather.

Often trips are to isolated settlements where only floats or skis can be used. Many landings must be made at night. The local RCMP detachment may be asked to line cars up on either side of the landing area to provide him with their headlights.

"It's a matter of life and death we will fly anytime," says Davis.

In 1961 the office here handled 686 of the 1,059 mercy flights, the remainder originating from Regina.

The Saskatoon centre is operated by five persons including nurse Irene McKague.

Miss McKague, a graduate of Prince Albert's Victoria Hospital, joined the service two years ago. Her work requires patience and steadiness, especially on a bad flying weather.

Most air ambulance requests are made by doctors in Saskatchewan who have had cases referred to them by a rural doctor. The doctor usually instructs Miss McKague about treatment. In instances where the doctor is unable she must administer pain-relieving drugs and narcotics at her own discretion.

The altitude is often dictated by the nature of the patient's injury. Davis says high altitude is uncooperative and can be discomfort of the flight for those with fractures. Patients suffering from such things as hemorrhages and brain injuries are safer at low altitudes where there is less change from ground pressure.

The service costs the provincial government about $250,000, with patients and relatives meeting additional costs on the rise, Frankford.

SOON

CLEAN IT UP, DON'T BURY IT — Rubbish around the foundation of a new house should be removed before back filling to avoid a cave-in later on. Back filling with frozen earth will also cause surface collapse.

Remove All Brush Before Backfilling

When the foundation is finished a deep pit is left around the outside of the foundation wall. Filling this with earth is known as backfilling. It does not have to be done immediately after completion of the foundation; in fact if the house has a bleak foundation it is not wise to start backfilling until some lateral support has been provided for the foundation walls, since the weight of the backfill may cause the foundation to cave in.

Rubbish should be removed from the pit before backfilling begins as it may cause cavities with consequent surface depressions when the backfill packs down. This may not happen until much later when the landscaping has been completed, and the home owner may be put to considerable expense to repair the damage.

Using frozen earth as backfill may also lead to surface collapse. Frozen soil buried four feet underground takes a considerable time to thaw out. Under these conditions the surface around the foundation has been known to drop a foot or more, months after occupancy of the new home.

Backfill should be free of boulders as these may damage the damp-proofing which protects the foundation. Earth should be packed down as the excavation is being filled. Normally, the weight of the bulldozer will do an adequate job, except near the edge of the building where the treads of the bulldozer cannot reach.

Although the surface is not ready for final grading and landscaping at this early stage, the grounds around the house should be levelled off as nearly as possible while the machinery is still on the site. This makes it easier to clean up the lot when construction is over.

DISPOSABLE PADDLES

Wooden tongue depressors (available at drug stores) make excellent disposable paddles for mixing small cans of paint or other material and also can conveniently be used to spread glues and mastic adhesives.

Lightning Damage To Property Can Be Prevented

Lightning causes over $125,000,000 annual property fire loss and damage in the U.S., according to the Lightning Protection Institute.

Yet, lightning loss to property, can be prevented. With correct materials, properly designed and installed, a lightning protection system rarely, if ever, has failed to carry out its protective function.

A lightning protection installation is not a do-it-yourself job. This is a job for the expert who produces or uses Underwriters' labeled materials and supervises or installs according to the code requirements of Underwriters' Laboratories, Inc., for lightning protection.

In order to be entirely safe, metallic bodies on structures require interconnection with the system or separate grounds for such items as vent pipes, television antennas, etc.

Can Give Even Crowded Houses Privacy

MUCH MORE DELIGHTFUL — Planting can impart the combination of privacy and beautiful living even when houses are close together. Thoughtful "touches" like this provide neighborhood prestige for community homes.

IS YOUR FOUNDATION PLANTING OUTMODED?

The new styles in homes today have been complemented by modern-style planting material. New varieties have been developed which are in keeping with the architectural advances.

Many foundation plantings are overgrown and outmoded. If this should be the case, the planting needs to be renewed with the desirable low-growing more fashionable shrubs of today. The use of low-growing shrubs, selected for modern homes, will never obscure windows or provide an unkempt forest of tall shrubs too close to the house. The Canadian Association of Nurserymen points out that a variety of foliage colors and blooms are available in the new shrubs presenting contrasts that are a delight to the eye. New shrubs can provide a more charming modern setting for the home.

Most old neighborhoods and individual homes could be made to look more modern, merely by changing the foundation plantings to give them the "new look" of lately developed varieties of low-growing plants and shrubs. A new planting in place of an overgrown one can increase the resale value of the home 15 to 20 percent, and at the same time provide an appearance in which both the home owner and the community will take more pride. In the public's eye, nothing modernizes a home more than a renovated foundation planting.

Choose home shrubs to give variety to color to the home grounds throughout the year, advises the Canadian Association of Nurserymen. Color ranges from the brilliant yellow, pinks and reds of flowers; green, yellow, white, gray and purple foliage, and fruits of white, gray, yellow, orange and red, in their successive seasons.

Remove All Glass and Putty

When replacing a window pane all broken glass, putty and glazier's points should be removed from the rebate or groove. This can be done with a knife, an old chisel, or other similar tool.

Before fitting the new pane a film of putty should be spread on the face of the groove parallel to the glass to act as a seal and cushion. This is known as "bedding the glass." On wood sash a filler should first be applied to prevent the wood from absorbing too much of the oil contained in the putty. A light coat of paint will also serve this purpose.

Triangular pieces of tin known as glazier's points are used with wood sash to keep the glass in place. They are laid flat against the pane and wedged into the rail by tapping with a flat tool.

Applying the putty requires a little practice. If the putty is too stiff or if it crumbles, adding a few drops of linseed oil will make it workable. The putty should be rolled into lengths and then pressed into place. A regular putty knife should be used to smooth the putty with a single, long stroke. This is a small, inexpensive square-edged instrument with which a professional looking glazing job can be achieved. Holding it in the proper angle between sash and glass makes the task easy.

To replace a broken pane in metal sash, remove the metal glazing strips which hold the glass to the sash by means of screws. After cleaning the groove a new bed of putty should be applied, the glass set in place and the glazing strips replaced.

Prepared putties recommended for the purpose are available at hardware and paint stores. When dealing with patented devices other than glazing strips to secure glass to metal sashes the maker's instructions should be followed.

CAPABLE DOGS

The collie dog, originally developed as a guardian of sheep, is believed to have first been bred in Scotland.

Lighting Can Make a Home More Attractive, Liveable

You can increase the physical comfort of your home, upgrade its resale value and enjoy better all around living if your house has ample lighting fixtures, well placed to provide proper light balance.

Five functions of light that should be considered in making your lighting decisions:

1. Impression lighting. Used to create dramatic and decorative effects on furnishings, walls and objects in every room and the exterior of the home.

2. Comfort lighting. Lighting for overall personal comfort when reading, studying, playing cards, dressing and working.

3. Convenience lighting. Functional light for the many everyday chores and tasks necessary about the house.

4. Safety lighting. Night lights to guard against bumping into objects or tumbling on stairways and halls.

5. Protection lighting. Used for outdoor safety along driveways and entrances and on the grounds.

Soft lighting is interesting and desirable for the dining room or where flattering light can be used to advantage.

But in the privacy of the dressing room or bath use bright, clear illumination for good grooming. Avoid shadows. Have your light come from several directions. Wall brackets or wall lanterns on each side of a bathroom mirror are very desirable and decorative.

Particularly dramatic effects are achieved by using pendant lights in clusters of three, all suspended from the same ceiling outlet over occasional tables and dining room tables.

Pulldown fixtures, which may be raised or lowered to change the light level, are extremely versatile. Like pendants, permanently wired pulldowns are suspended from the ceiling outlet. They're suitable where general lighting may be desired on some occasions and concentrated light on others. The pulldown may be moved to provide the proper lighting.

Another general category of lighting fixtures is the concealed type. This includes recessed lighting fixtures in the ceiling for general lighting and those used to achieve dramatic or subtle effects.

In large rooms, combining recessed fixtures of both types for general lighting and specific purposes often produces the best effects.

Use adjustable spotlights for highlighting specific accent objects or areas, such as a painting, statue, draperies or furniture.

LAWN BOY
Lawn-Boy gives your lawn the close-clipped, broadloom look of a putting green because it cuts grass properly. Lawn-Boy's blade is part of the secret. It's made of case-hardened spring steel (like butcher knives) to give you a keen, long-lasting edge that cuts, not rips. Each blade has a special stiffener that stops the turning force from bending it, keeps it level to cut level. Blade height adjusts easily. With most models, you can buy a new grasscatcher that works like a vacuum cleaner to clean as you cut! The result is a lawn that's not just cut . . . but perfectly cut. Your Lawn-Boy dealer will show you.

KEEPING 'EM HEALTHY

Best insurance against bugs and disease is a thriving and healthy garden. Keeping the weeds eliminated — they often harbor pests — the plants thinned and the soil cultivated promotes vigorous growth among flowers and vegetables and keeps them far less susceptible to damage. Sometimes, however, in spite of our best efforts in the garden is attacked. On the first sign of a wilted or eaten leaf, or dead stems, discolored worms, aphids or slugs or other enemies one should lose no time in getting out the dusting, sprayer or ball.

It's a lot easier and cheaper to check one of these attacks before they really get underway. And it is not difficult with all the modern materials available.

Every seed house is well stocked with sprays, dusts, and other controls. Very often there is a combination of chemicals, ready packaged, which will handle any bug or garden pest, those that eat holes in the foliage, those that suck the juices or those that attack fruit or roots. Remember that in this case, other, types of warfare, best defense is to attack. Don't wait until the bugs are in complete control before starting the offensive.

COMMERCIAL MULCHES

Among organic mulches peat moss occupies a leading position. It is available almost everywhere at a reasonable price and blends well with the soil. It comes in tight bales, and as a rule is quite dry because it is kiln-dried.

To make ready for use, break up the bale in a hidden garden corner and leave fully exposed to rains or soak with hose.

Shredded tree bark, tanbark and pine needles are preferred for acid soil plants, but acid peat moss serves them just as well. Many gardeners like coarsely ground tobacco stems for mulching roses if they can get such material. This has the advantage of repelling insects and slowly adding a little food to the soil. Sawdust of done wonders for gladiolus and other summer bulbs and it also makes a good mulch for certain kinds of shrubbery and cultivated blue berries. Leaves and chopped up straw or grass clippings can all be used as a mulch. These will keep down weeds and conserve moisture.

LAWN CARE

Very close mowing of the lawn is doubtful business at any time but it is particularly ill advised once the weather starts to turn warm. Most grasses prefer cool, moist weather and after June we don't get much of that in most parts of Canada. As the sun gets hotter we should set the mower higher and leave enough top to shade the roots.

Lawns made of the best grasses for temperate climates are thinner, weedier and more light susceptible when mowed too closely or too often. The typical combination of bluegrass and red fescue should be mowed 2; one and one-half to two and one-half inches. The higher cut is preferred if the lawn is weak.

This is the time to go after the lawn weeds. Dandelion and buckhorn are easy to kill with 2,4-D. This chemical is best applied as a spray. Follow the package directions and be sure to keep the 2,4-D off other plants.

If the lawn seems unusually soft and the sod can be lifted readily, suspect Japanese beetle grubs. They start feeding on grass roots with the arrival of warm weather, and can do great damage. An application of dieldrin, chlordane or DDT plus chlordane will give good control. Heavy watering will also help.

Next, now to fix the garden for the summer so it will look after itself.

Housing Hints

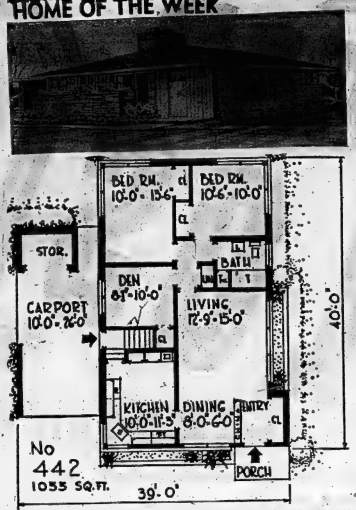
Q. Are there any special features abroad-at in designing a house?

A. Yes there are. A house design should be simple, functional and compact, but not at the point where comfort is sacrificed. Circulation should not be impeded. Every part of the house should be within easy reach. Lighting and ventilation are also important. One of the architect's main concerns is the question of aesthetics — how the house will look in its surroundings when it's completed. This question of harmony, form and color is just as important to the architect as it is to the discriminating homeowner. The house he designs bears his name as well as that of the occupant.

Q. Is there any way an architect can save money for his client?

A. Yes. Often the architect can save the prospective homeowner more than his fee by looking after the building contract. Instead of awarding the contract to the first builder who comes along, the architect puts out tenders. Since he's familiar with the prices of various building materials and the current rates paid to tradesmen, he can make an accurate cost estimate and may obtain a better contract price than the homeowner himself would. The architect is also acquainted with local building firms and can help select the company best suited for the particular job.

BORING HOLES?



To avoid getting a ragged edge on the back side of the board, back the panel with a block or scrap of wood or lay it flat on top of a board. Clamp the two pieces together until after the hole is drilled.

Sunshades and Fences Make Patio Areas More Enjoyable

Terraces, patios and breezeways are three of the more common areas for outdoor living. Dressing them up for greater utility during the summer months is a very popular pastime.

Some of the more practical accessories for pleasant outdoor living areas are permanent overhead sunshades, solid or partially open trellises, arbors and fences. Some or all of them in varying combinations and with attractive landscaping will provide a literal bower for family relaxation and informal entertaining.

Sunshades that are, or appear to be, extensions of the roof are often completely covered to provide an area that is secure from showers. An adjacent area can then be covered with an open sunshade that consists of a decorative wood pattern.

Vertical sunshades also serve a variety of purposes in outdoor planning. They are often used to set off one area from another, or to provide privacy for part of the area.

FENCING FOR PRIVACY

If privacy is an objective, handsome fences in new designs will fulfill this requirement without giving a "fenced-in" feeling. In fact, there are fences that give a measure of protection yet do not completely exclude light and breeze. These are ideal for setting off an area, containing a swimming pool.

A high fence can be made of vertical planks mounted alternately on the front and back of a framework to keep kids and animals out but let breezes through, or with blocks cut from two-by-fours and put up in an open-work design. Vines and shrubs can be trained against this type of fence to fill in during the summer and give an added measure of privacy.

DO-IT-YOURSELF PROJECT

Of course, it is possible to engage a contractor to execute any or all of the plans you make, but most of these improvements can be made by the homemaker who is an amateur craftsman and enjoys wood working.

Selection of lumber is important, and should be done with the advice of your local lumber dealer. Since they are extremely workable and widely available, any one of the 11 woods from the Western Pine region will be a wise choice.

Remember that care in construction and finishing will pay big dividends in good appearance and long life. All parts that are underground should be treated with a preservative, preferably one that contains pentachlorophenol, to guard against rotting and termites.

Sagged ends above the ground should be similarly treated.

When the construction and finishing are completed, don't forget that final touch of landscaping. Trees and shrubs are the answer to that barren look and give a lived-in appearance.

Members Hear Three Winners Warden's Medal

Members of Hastings county council Thursday were given a demonstration in the fine art of public speaking, when they heard three young students — winners in the county public schools speaking contest.

And the consensus was that many of the county councillors would have to take off their hats to the youngsters.

The young speakers were nine-year-old Mary Jairath, a grade 5 student at Madoc public school; 13-year-old Anne Beach of Frankford and 13-year-old Jimmy Wilson of Bancroft. The three students were winners in their respective school inspectorates and had previously been presented with their Warden's medal.

The county council chambers were given a definite cosmopolitan touch as the youngest orator, the daughter of parents from far off India, spoke on the need for world parliament. Mrs. Jairath appeared in the council chamber dressed in a general Indian costume.

TOLD OF HOME TOWN

By coincidence the two other speakers spoke on the same subject "My Home Town."

Miss Beach in her talk outlined the beauties of her native Frankford, while Jimmy Wilson took councillors on a word tour of his home town, far north Yellowknife, only a short distance south of the Arctic Circle.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Wilson came to Bancroft soon after the start of the uranium boom in North Hastings, where Mr. Wilson is superintendent of Faraday Mines.

A desire to see more of the world, coupled with an Indian radio broadcast and a visit to the Canadian attache who extolled the opportunities in Canada, prompted Mr. and Mrs. Jairath and their young family to settle in Canada. Mr. Jairath is English teacher at the Madoc high school.

A former colonel in the Indian Army, he came to Canada three years ago and taught for one year in Quebec before moving on to Madoc. He is from Northern India while Mrs. Jairath, a former member of the Women's Royal Indian Navy Service, comes from Bombay.

WINTERS TOO TOUGH

"They like it in Canada and in Madoc, but Mr. and Mrs. Jairath are not yet decided whether they will remain in this country.

They notice a big change in climate and Mrs. Jairath is not too sure she appreciates Canadian winters.

"I didn't mind the first winter here, but the next one almost got me down," she said.

PLAN LABOR STUDY

OTTAWA (CP)— About 25 editors of international trade union publications in the United States will make an on-the-spot study of current labor conditions in Canada next week. The group, invited by the Canadian Labor Congress, will meet in Ottawa Tuesday and Wednesday, discussing such topics as the Canadian economic situation, the role of organized labor in Canadian affairs, the structure of trade unions in Canada, unions in politics and the activities of the CLC.

VISITORS FROM INDIA — Mrs. Harry Jairath of Madoc, and her daughter Mary, from far-away India, were visitors at Hastings county council yesterday. Mr. Jairath is English teacher at Madoc high school.

Nehru Showing Toughness Against Inroads by Chinese

By CARMAN CUMMING
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Prime Minister Nehru, answered moderate in most things, is proving again that he can be a hard man to deal with where Indian territorial claims are at issue.

Nehru, who shocked many of his admirers with the takeover last December of Portuguese territories on the Indian mainland, is faced this week with renewed demands from Pakistan for a Kashmir settlement and with heightened tension in the border dispute with Communist China.

Both are complex and long-standing problems. Nehru has indicated that his government does not plan to back up an inch on either of them.

In the Ladakh region, a bleak, three-mile-high plateau in northern Kashmir, Nehru has ordered what appears to be a tentative attempt to push back Chinese encroachment.

China is said to control some 12,000-14,000 of the 15,000 square miles of Ladakh claimed by both countries—the two most populous in the world.

In the Indian parliament Thursday Nehru confirmed Chinese charges that India has reaprogrgged advance Chinese positions and set up checkpoints behind them. The Chinese, he observed, were rather nervous about it.

A Chinese note earlier in the week had alleged that two posts had been built "with fortifications which are obviously meant for a long entrenchment" to the southwest and northwest of a Chinese post.

If India didn't get out immediately, it added, "the Chinese guards will be compelled to defend themselves."

Nehru responded with the counter-charge that while India did not want war with China, it had to be prepared for the contingency of war and "we are growing stronger to face it."

For three years China and India have quarrelled over the border. India has been handstrung by a lack of roads into the remote area.

Now reports from New Delhi say India may have sufficient strength built up by airlift and mule train to begin stronger patrolling at least, although not enough for a serious offensive.

Informed sources have been quoted as saying the Indian troops would try to cut off the most advanced Chinese posts, thus forcing the Chinese to fight for their foothold or pull back.

On Kashmir, disputed ever since a Hindu Maharajah joined the predominantly Moslem province of India at independence in 1947, Pakistan is again pressing for UN mediation and a self-determination plebiscite.

The current UN Security Council meeting on the issue was convened on Pakistani charges — called absurd by Nehru—that Indian leaders had threatened violent seizure of the one-third of Kashmir that Pakistan has held since the ceasefire of Jan. 1, 1949.

India has rejected a plebiscite on the grounds that the two thirds it controls are an integral part of India, and a vote would only disturb the stability of the area.

Impaired Driving Will Be Fully Discussed When Safety Council Meets

OTTAWA (CP) — How much liquor is required to impair a driver's ability?

The law says a driver is impaired when the alcohol level in his bloodstream reaches 15 per cent. The average 150-pound man reaches this point after drinking 12 ounces of whisky in a two-hour period.

The Canadian Highway Safety Council's executive director, W. A. Bryce, said Thursday some drivers "might be plastered" at that level.

So next week the council will introduce a resolution at its annual meeting in Regina calling for a reduction in the permissible alcohol level to .05 per cent. It says this will give the 150-pounder a limit of four ounces of whisky in two hours.

Allied with this on the resolution will be suggestions that it be mandatory for drivers to give breath samples when requested at the scene of an accident and that these tests be admitted as legal evidence, Saskatchewan is the only province now requiring drivers to submit to breath tests. If they don't agree, they cannot retain a licence.

There are at least two other resolutions which should provide lively debate for the 250 delegates who will go to Regina Monday from government, industry, transport, police and other organizations.

One will recommend that all provinces require drivers to be 18 years old before getting a licence. Four provinces already do this, but the other six issue licences at 16. An exception to the council's suggestion would be graduates of high school driver-training courses or their equivalent. They would qualify at 16.

The question of periodic medical examinations for drivers is also apt to generate some controversy. Many provinces now do not insist on any medicals, others ask for them after the age of 70, and one, Ontario, requires them after drivers reach 80.

Newsmen Seek Space Facts Titov Spouts Propaganda For Red-Style Disarmament

WASHINGTON (CP) — Cherman Titov, pink - cheeked, curly-haired cosmonaut, stood dramatically before a mural depicting the mariner's flaxen-winged sea-car created by Prometheus and proclaimed the world must disarm — the Russian way.

While U.S. astronaut John Glenn sat by his side, the flush on his cheeks sometimes mounting to match his red hair, the Soviet major, only man to orbit the earth 17 times, kept hammering away at the disarmament theme as frustrated newsmen sought undisclosed details of his history - making flight.

Earlier Thursday, the 26-year-old Titov had polished off his morsels of information to an international press corps symposium: That his Vostok capsule was lifted by a multi-stage, six-motor liquid-fuel booster with a thrust more than three times that of the U.S. Atlas.

LANDS AS SPECIFIED

He told the scientists of his reported nausea; that he had overslept during that amazing 1961 voyage; that his capsule was designed to split into two parts when it re-entered the air envelope and that he landed by parachute in a specified area.

Reporters quietly awaited the press conference that was to follow—perhaps, like Glenn, sitting side by side, swapping tales about their trips. It didn't work out that way.

How many stages did his booster have? How did the capsule actually land? Did a ring around a model of the capsule indicate a point of impact or was it merely a carrying device?

Titov was all smiles. The questioners could be assured, he said, that the capsule was good, the landing was safe and he was ready to go back to early again. If only the diplomats would accept Soviet Premier Khrushchev's plea for disarmament plan, then Titov and Glenn could go to the moon together.

After some time of this, an Italian correspondent pleaded with Titov to give reporters just some hint of the difficulties — just on the capsule's landing system.

Again Titov smiled and said simply public knowledge of the landing system was not important; that the questioner could be assured it was safe and damaged and he, Titov, would be glad to use it again.

HITS CANADA WHEAT

Titov takes a look today at U.S. industry power, then hits the caviar trail at a Soviet diplomatic reception.

He'll probably be car to Baltimore to inspect the country's biggest steel mill — Bethlehem Steel's Sparrows Point plant which has the capacity to turn out more steel in one year than any other plant in the United States.

After the tour, Titov goes back to Washington where he will be guest at a formal diplomatic reception at the Soviet Embassy.

Yesterday the two trail blazers in space seemed to hit it off despite the language barrier while Glenn guided Titov through swarms of tourists on a whirlwind tour of the capital and introduced him to President Kennedy. Kennedy told Titov "I'm very happy to welcome you, as are the American people."

Glenn and Titov even found time to put their heads together to solve—to their satisfaction—the mystery of the space fireflies.

After their chat, Titov replied to an international space meeting that "I believe, and I think Col. Glenn is of the same opinion, that they result from the being ejected. The pilot will have to be checked out by the next cosmonaut."

Macmillan Given Rough Ride In Commons

LONDON (CP)—Prime Minister Macmillan told Parliament Thursday the responsibilities of the European Common Market countries are as heavy as Britain's in negotiations for British EEM membership.

Macmillan spoke after an all-night flight from Canada, which was followed by a cabinet meeting and a Commons session. He was pressed in the House of Commons to expand upon his Toronto statement that if the Common Market countries "want us they will have to make it easy for us." The questioner was Liberal leader Jo Grimond.

Macmillan said the point he had been trying to make was that the outcome of the ECM negotiations at Brussels will depend in effect not only on Britain but on the Commonwealth and the rest of the free world.

"I hoped they would do everything they could to ease our position," said the Conservative leader, "and in mind our commitments, duties and interests to the Commonwealth, and to agricultural problems at home."

QUESTIONED BY LABORITE

Labor Roy Jenkins, one of a group opposing Britain's entry into ECM without the Commonwealth safeguards, asked:

"Did the Canadian prime minister express any view on the serious losses that would accrue to Canadian exports in the event of our entry into the Common Market?

"Would the exports are expected to diminish by 13 to 14 per cent. Would you regard that as a serious prejudice to our huge Commonwealth trade and to our negotiations in Europe?"

Reply: Macmillan: "All these questions are fully discussed with us and have been discussed with others and I have repeated what has been said publicly on the position of the British government."

On nuclear testing, Macmillan refused to discuss any secrets involved in his talks with President Kennedy, but understood that he and Kennedy "are determined to do everything we can" to end tests.

STILL SEPARATED

BRUSSELS (Reuters) — Britain and the Common Market were reported Thursday night to be still divided by wide differences following the last day of negotiations for British membership in the six-nation trade group. Informed sources said the differences were set out in a progress report which the six nations had agreed to present to their heads together to solve—to their satisfaction—the mystery of the space fireflies.

After their chat, Titov replied to an international space meeting that "I believe, and I think Col. Glenn is of the same opinion, that they result from the being ejected. The pilot will have to be checked out by the next cosmonaut."

"HELP TAPE A BIKE—AND SAVE A CHILD'S LIFE"—Shown above are Phillip Deegres and Ronnie Gallinger holding two of the 124 bicycles that were taped at Sir Winston Churchill School on Thursday afternoon.

Over 3,000 bicycles, such as these, are expected to be labelled by next Friday with red and white reflecting-type tape.

President of the Belleville Junior Chamber of Commerce, Zeke Kvarda, at left, is shown assisting Sergeant R. W. Hinchford, at right, in applying the tape, while president-elect Don Burr, and Nick Dandelah look on approvingly.

The bicycles are now ready to meet the requirements of the law, which state that a bicycle must be equipped with two inches of red reflecting tape on the rear fender and five inches of white on each of the two front forks.

"Just a Second"

"Will you be my wife, Brenda, to halve and to hold."

PREPARE FOR WAR

JAKARTA (AP) — President Sukarno has ordered most of Indonesia placed on a war footing, giving him authority over the rights and property of the majority of his 96,000,000 people. Sukarno's move strengthens his hold on his sprawling archipelago, which is reported preparing to fight The Netherlands for the disputed territory of West New Guinea.

Cuban Refugees Resettled In Many Parts of States Appear Happy, Contented

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Despite language difficulties and some setbacks in obtaining employment, Cuban refugees moved from Miami for resettlement in other parts of the United States seem generally to be thriving and happy.

"May contents" very contented—said Juan Casiano, now at work in Chicago.

In Cleveland, John Izquierdo kissed his fingertips and exclaimed in a ringing English: "Thefe people! They are wonderful!"

His reference was to members of the Church of the Good Shepherd, one of a number of Cleveland area churches which "adopted" Cuban refugee families.

Izquierdo, his wife Julia and their six-year-old son Juan were among 25 families flown from Miami Feb. 27 and placed under care of the Cleveland Cuban Refugee Resettlement Committee.

Church groups sponsoring the flight looked upon the transfer as the pilot venture in a program aimed eventually at getting 100,000 refugees out of Miami and into communities throughout the U.S.

Eighty - seven Cuban exiles reached New Jersey this week. It was the fourth flight carrying Cubans from Miami to homes and jobs in other U.S. cities.

On May 15, a fifth flight will deliver about 100 more to Chicago.

The Cleveland project did not get off to an auspicious start, but the situation improved as time went on.

A group of 97 Cubans reached Chicago April 25 and their resettlement in the northern thirty of Illinois was sponsored by Methodist churches.

"I have been amazed about how few problems have come to my attention," said Rev. John Hoger, superintendent of the Methodist Home Mission Society in the region. He said he believes all the workers are employed.

Ninety-one other Cubans have had a three-week taste of life in Chicago—and found from all indications they like it. Nearly all those seeking work found it within a week or two.

Negro Born Out of Wedlock Hailed as Christian Saint

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

A kind Negro man, who was born out of wedlock and lived in poverty, will be hailed this weekend as a Christian saint.

He is Martin de Porres, a lowly servant whose compassion and deeds shook the consciences of the mighty and the humble of his day and have stirred hearts ever since.

He was a gentle but forceful giant of mercy.

Once, when the head of a Dominican priory where he worked upbraided him for ignoring an order to quit cluttering the place up with the sick and hungry, he apologized, but added quietly:

"I did not think the precept of obedience prevailed over that of charity."

Brother Martin lived more than 300 years ago.

This Sunday, the Roman Catholic church is scheduled officially to proclaim him a saint.

He was born in the back streets of Lima, Peru, then under the autocratic rule of the Spanish conquistadors, the illegitimate son of a pretty but penniless Negro mother, Ana Velasquez.

Ana was a ragamuffin child, young Martin had an irrepressible urge to help others. Sometimes, when his mother sent him to buy food, he would come back empty handed, having given the food to someone else.

"But mother," he would explain, after calmly taking the customary whipping, "that man was poorer than we are."

At 15, a tall, muscular, soft-voiced lad, his skin as dark as his mother's, he became a barber's assistant in a Dominican priory, scrubbing floors, washing clothes, cooking and doing other manual tasks.

Eventually, as a lay brother, he became the convent's infirmarian, and soon built a hospice like a virtual community clinic, and welfare depot. Some people complained, and at one point, he was ordered to stop filling the place with beggars and dying Indians.

But his persistence won over the provincial, and his work went on, expanding into all sorts of activities.

He became known as the "wonder worker of Peru," but whenever anyone brought him compliment his deeds, he would say:

"Why do you praise me? I am only a colored servant."

When he died in 1638 at the age of 60, his name a legend, high officials—the Archbishop of Mexico, the Viceroy of Peru, a judge of the royal court and others—insisted on being his pallbearers.

Official listing of a saint nowadays is a long, difficult process. Besides ascertaining a person's virtues and heroic practices, it is necessary to confirm at least two miracles worked by God through the subject's intercession.

The certified miracles attributed to Brother Martin's intercession include the cures in 1948 of a woman suffering from an intestinal ailment and in 1959 of a man suffering from gangrene.

83-Year-Old Spinster Raped And Slain

GULL, Que. (CP)—A 22-year-old recently-married Hull man was apprehended Thursday as a material witness in the rape and slaying of an 83-year-old spinster here early Tuesday.

City detectives picked up Gilles Lorraine at his home on a coroner's warrant.

The mangled, half - naked body of Miss Bernadette Bochon of Hull was found Tuesday morning by workmen.

Dr. Jean-Marie Roussel of Montreal, who performed an autopsy, said the woman died of asphyxiation.

Police said they believe the woman was seized by her assailant on a sidewalk late at night, dragged on to a porch of an abandoned house, raped and strangled. Witnesses say the woman put up a long struggle.

A nephew with whom Miss Bochon lived said she had insomnia and often went for walks late at night.

Sports Snapshots

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Sports Editor

Jack Roxburgh is happily treading the apple trees on his Western Ontario farm at Simcoe these days while officials of the Memorial Cup final teams are verbally cutting each other's throats. Roxburgh takes a philosophical view of the nasty war.

"At least," he says, "it takes their minds off the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association which is a blessing. And it should drum up business for the non-active."

Roxburgh is president of the CAHA and, as such, doesn't stray very far from his telephone. From long experience, he knows that someone is going to raise back and throw a high fast one at his association, governing body of amateur hockey in the country.

It has happened almost every year since 1948.

Western Canada clubs have accused the CAHA of "babying" Eastern teams in its handling of the playoff schedules, and vice versa. Teams involved have got into squabbles about the eligibility of players, and right in the middle of them has been the CAHA.

HELD HIS GROUND

Something invariably gets into a snit at playoff time and takes a whack at the CAHA.

Lee LeClerc, manager of the Western champion Edmonton Oil Kings, tried to push the CAHA around last week when he said his team wouldn't go east to meet Hamilton Red Wings unless the CAHA announced the venues and dates of the full best-of-seven final.

Roxburgh had previously announced the program for the opening five games and refused to budge from it.

He only took Loquacious Lee seriously, least of all Roxburgh. And if there were in Ontario hours after Lee's outburst and Roxburgh he has been too busy exchanging verbal swipes with Red Wing Coach Eddie Bush to check on Lee's intentions in the CAHA.

Bush looked hard at the Oil Kings when they skated out for the first game and later declared: "The scruffiest-looking team I've ever seen in a Memorial Cup final."

PACKED IN HURRY

LeClerc had a ready answer: "We are not big-time enough to have a mobile tailor shop with us. We had to pack our equipment wet after travelling 4,500 miles in five days for the Western playoffs."

All of this is sweet music to Roxburgh's ears.

"Just let them keep talking. As long as they keep off my back I'll have a chance to do some work on the farm."

Roxburgh, nominated a week ago to contest the Dufferin riding on the Liberal ticket in the June 18 federal election, spoke like a true politician when he summed up the Edmonton-Hamilton serial this way:

"The Oil Kings lost the first game, but they'll improve a lot in the rest of the series. They've got some real good hockey players and don't let the Red Wings know that they're in a fight. I wouldn't want to pick the Cup winner."

TORONTO (CP) — Managers of the nine Canadian Football League teams huddled here Thursday and emerged to predict that 1962, financially at least, will be their greatest season ever.

There were no announcements about what was discussed at the eight-hour session, Spokesman Cosgrit Terlep of Ottawa Rough Riders said it was "routine business."

The teams were reported to have discontinued a policy of pre-season exhibitions against United States clubs. Last year Toronto Argonauts and Montreal Alouettes met National Leaguers, Hamilton Tiger-Cats, an American League team.

"With an interlocking schedule," Terlep said, "the ideal situation would be to play the teams that you don't meet at home during the season. That way, the fans would see every team. But we haven't quite got to it."

Herb Capozzi of British Columbia Lions said some behind-the - scenes discussions have been started on the possibility of selling a television package to a U.S. network, but no contact has been made on an official level.

AS CLOSER RELATIONS

PARIS (Reuters) — The economic committee of the Council of Europe unanimously approved a series of recommendations Thursday for closer economic relations between Europe and North America. The recommendations, which envisage a enlarged European Common Market including Britain and other countries, will be submitted to the assembly of the Council of Europe when it meets in Strasbourg, West Germany, later this month.

Olympics Do-Or-Die Tonight

TRAIL, B.C. (CP) — Coach Maurice Filion is dubious about the benefits oxygen would give his Montreal Olympics in tonight's do-or-die game of the Allan Cup final series.

Filion said Thursday oxygen might hurt the Olympic's chances of beating Trail Smoke Eaters to stave off elimination in the best-of-seven series.

The eastern champions trail 3-1 after the first four games of the Canadian senior hockey final, a position Filion has blamed in part on third-period fatigue from the Smoke City's high altitude. Oxygen for the players was suggested after Trail won the fourth game 4-1 Wednesday.

"I will give it some thought," Filion said. "Oxygen is only good for a short time. Then the club is worse than before if we could keep going in the third period we could be okay."

The Smoke Eaters scored three goals in the third period of the third battle to win 4-3. They repeated the late outburst in the next game.

Both Filion and coach Bobby Kromm of Trail have another problem facing them tonight. They each have to build up a forward line after the loss of Montreal's John Mentis and Trail's Ed Pollesel. They were booted out of Wednesday's game with match penalties and banished from the arena by a ruling Thursday from the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

The players engaged in a stick-swinging duel in the second period that referee Hugh McLean called a deliberate attempt to inflict injury. Mentis and Pollesel were also hit with automatic $100 fines.

Bantamweight Bout

Defends Title Tonight

The 26-year-old South American is a 3-to-1 favorite to turn back the bid of the 23-year-old longshoreman from Stockton, Calif., in 15 rounds or less at the Cow Palace. The odds show the respect for Jofre's power against the sharp boxing of Marquez Thursday. "I feel that I will be good enough."

Jofre exudes confidence, too. He said through an interpreter: "I haven't seen him box. I'll wait and see what he does and then plan my fight."

The champion has never been defeated. His record is 41 victories, including 31 knockouts, in 44 fights. Three ended even.

Marquez has never been stopped in compiling a 32-2-1 record. He won the California title June 12 by stopping Ronnie Peters, who has been Jofre's sparring partner.

If Marquez wins, the contract calls for a return match in Brazil within 90 days. Jofre stands to collect about $30,000 tonight and Marquez $5,000 plus expenses.

Terriers Get Imports

GALT (CP) — Galt Terriers, suffering from a shortage of Canadian players, have received import aid from the executives and member clubs of Senior Inter-County Baseball League.

The Terriers, with only four holdover homebrews available, will be able to use six imports. In addition, they'll be able to sign three of their Hamilton Cardinals draftees who won't be counted as imports.

The new total of nine is an increase of three over the original regulation when all members of the dormant Hamilton club were classed as imports. Guelph Royals will be allowed five imports, London Majors Panthers and Brantford Red Sox two each.

The only experienced Galt returnees are playing manager and third baseman Wray Upper, first baseman Ron Boomer, outfielder Bob Hyla and pitcher Jack Macnell. The Terriers drafted 18 Hamilton players earlier.

The five-team circuit will open June 2 and close Aug. 11. The clubs will play a 32-game schedule and four of the five will advance to the playoffs.

Ryan Builds Own Car

By ALAN HARVEY

LONDON (CP) — Canadian racing driver Peter Ryan donned a pair of blue denim pants Thursday and set out to build his own car for his first British race May 12.

Begrimed but happy, Ryan stood in a garage near Godders Green and worked on the frame of the yellow and green machine he will steer over Silverstone Track in Northamptonshire.

The 21-year-old driver, from Mont Tremblant, Que., intent on one day scaling the racing heights occupied by Stirling Moss and Jack Brabham, signed a three - year - contract this week with the Lotus company and now is on loan to a team run by Ian Walker, who described Ryan as a young driver of "great potential."

The contract calls for Ryan to compete this year in what are known as "formula junior" events. The hope is that in a year or so he will be good enough for the big time—grand prix racing.

On arriving in Britain shortly before Easter, Ryan learned he would have to build his own car.

START FROM SCRATCH

He told a reporter: "We're starting from scratch. They supply you the parts in a sort of bashi-basket and you put it together yourself. It will be a good experience for me."

For the last three years Ryan has worked "from April to November learning about driving. He says the only way it is to "spend 24 hours a day at it, every day of the week."

He won the grand prix at Mosport Park near Bowmanville, Ont., last year, beating a field that included Moss.

After Silverstone, Ryan will go to Monaco and to other European centres. He will probably return to Canada June 9-10

Aged Jock Hurt at Fort Erie

FORT ERIE, Ont. (CP)—Paul Remillard, 35, a survivor of countless racing accidents, took another bad spill Thursday and escaped with nothing worse than a severely bruised back. At first it was feared he had suffered a fractured pelvis.

From four Montreal hospitals he has fractured skull, two broken legs, two broken arms, several fractured ankles and numerous splintered and bent clavicles in Remillard's 26 years of racing.

Remillard was riding Hidden Hope in the third race when, hit fully bolted for the outer rails, apparently heading for her own stable. She dug her front feet in the mud as she was confronted by the white railed fence and Remillard was thrown into the railing, hitting it full force on the small of his back.

Dr. T. W. O'Mulvenny ordered Remillard to hospital for x-rays. He predicted that Remillard, who has won nine races in 62 starts at the current meeting, will be riding when racing opens at Old Woodbine in Toronto Monday.

Marilyn Munroe Indisposed But No Panic at Studio

By ROBY THOMAS

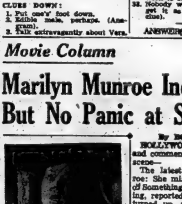
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — News and comment on the Hollywood scene—

The latest on Marilyn Monroe: She missed the first week of Something's Got to Give filming, reported for one day, then turned up sick again. There seems to be no panic, but 20th-Fox about her indisposition—yet.

Unlike her other recent films, this one is not open-end. Co-star Dean Martin has a date for Toys in the Attic in late summer, and he must be through, or else.

Something's Got to Give is the remake of My Favorite Wife (1940) with Monroe, Martin and Cyd Charisse playing the Irene Dunne, Cary Grant and Gail Patrick roles.

JAYNE GOT LOAN



Jayne Mansfield hasn't made a film on her home lot in five years. Her record still holds, with Fox loaning her to Warners for Public Enemy No. 1 with Maurice Chevalier, Eleanor Parker and Lilia Tamiroff. Jayne is taking her entire family for the Rome-Venice filming.

"It's a role unlike any I've ever played before," said Jayne, "I play an intellectual."

Winding up Days of Wine and Roses, Jack Lemmon planned to take his seven-year-old Chris fishing in Baboa and work's pearl-diving in Seattle. Jack expects to be free until he does Irma la Douce in Paris in August.

Dangerous Silence has been postponed. Director Don Siegel won't line to do it before Irma — "besides Sam Spiegel is still up to his ears in camels." The producer continues to shoot the long-running Lawrence of Arabia.

Lemmon still yens to do Dangerous Silence, which would combine him and Peter Sellers.

AT THE PARK — Hattie Jacques stars with Kenneth Connor, Charles Hawtrey and Joan Sims in "Carry On Teacher", showing today and Saturday at the Park Theatre. On the same program a movie that tells unforgettably the story of an innocent hope to love and be loved. "Whistle Down the Wind", starring Hayley Mills, Bernard Lee and Alan Bates. Running of Kentucky Derby Will Be Given TV Viewers

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—You know how they do these television specials shows—the camera showing the action, and the urgent voice of the unseen narrator explaining what's going on.

Herewith, then, a personal dramatized account of a real-life, disillusioning incident:

(The setting is a newspaper office, full of cluttered desks, of rattling conversation, teletypes and reporters rushing in crying "Scoop!" Theme music comes up and over, rising to a crescendo)

Narrator: The meet was set by a third party. A contact called—from a coin booth, of course—to say that Sgt. Steve Carella of the 87th Precinct had gone on the lightbove and had something to tell me.

Carella, the smartest, toughest, bravest cop in the precinct. Undercover! This was news—and I wanted the story.

My name is Lowry. I'm a writer (pencil).

We set the meet: 9:30 the next morning in a good place, a restaurant called Schrafft's on 51st between Fifth and Sixth.

By 9:45 I was certain something had happened.

The call came at 10:30. It was Carella.

"I couldn't find it," he said. "The restaurant. I was at 51st at the corner of 51st and Sixth but I couldn't find Schrafft's."

Poile Quits Red Wings

HAMILTON (CP) — Norman (Bud) Poile, general manager and coach of Edmonton Flyers, has resigned from the Detroit Red Wings organization.

Poile and Detroit owner Bruce Norris, who was chairman of a Red Wings management and scouting meeting here Thursday, said the severing of relations was mutual.

Full details of the parting of the ways were not made public, but Poile admitted disappointment over not being named to succeed Jack Adams as general manager of the National Hockey League Red Wings. Adams retired recently and is being replaced by Wings coach Ed Abel.

Although quitting the Flyers, Poile indicated he hopes to stay in the Western Hockey League and said he plans to seek financial backing to purchase the Vancouver franchise. He has the support of financial interests in Edmonton.

NO SUCCESSOR NAMED

Norris and Abel said no successor to Poile as chief of the Wings' western interests had been considered.

Poile, 39, has been running the Flyers since the Wings first took over the Edmonton WHL franchise in 1952. He guided the team to the league title and playoff champions three times and this year the team set a scoring record.

Born in Fort William, he was in the NHL eight years, playing with Toronto, Detroit and Chicago. He retired from active playing in 1950 and coached the minors until moving to Edmonton.

Poile leaves here today and will visit his mother in Fort William before returning to Edmonton.

Rising Suns Blank Leafs 8-0

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The southern switch from Jersey City to Florida seems to have made a winner out of the Jacksonville Suns.

The Suns, after gaining a tie for first place Wednesday night, vaulted into the International League lead Thursday night, beating Toronto 8-0 behind lefthander Frank Smith, while Atlanta's rally topped Buffalo 9-7.

The game left the Suns, with a 7-3 record and a half-game edge over Atlanta in the IL race. Buffalo, which had been tied with Jacksonville for first, dropped to third at 6-4 after blowing a 7-3 lead over the Crackers at Atlanta.

The two games were the only ones played in the IL Thursday night. Bad weather caused postponement of Columbus at Syracuse and Richmond at Rochester.

SPINS FOUR-HITTER

Smith spun a four - hitter against Toronto after his Jacksonville mates staked him to a five-run lead in the first inning. Jim Woods cracked a three-run homer, Tony Curry a solo homer, and Yo Yo Davalillo had a triple and two singles and drove in two runs to lead the Suns' 10-hit attack on loser Steve Ridzik and Hank Hennemuth.

Behind 7-3, Atlanta picked up one run in the fourth on a double by Jim Beauchamp and a single by Phil Gagliano, and another on Fred Whitfield's seventh inning homer. The Crackers then pulled it out with four in the eighth against reliever Frank Barnes, the big blow a bases - loaded triple by Mike Shannon. Buffalo had the tying runs on base in the ninth but Bob Sadowski relieved Lou Vickery and fanned Bob Wine and Norm Gilpon to end the threat.

The winner was Willard Schmidt, fourth of six Cracker pitchers, Joe Leonetti and Danny Cater each hit a three-run homer for Buffalo.

Name Ortiz Top Boxer Of Month

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP)—Carlos Ortiz of New York, who dethroned Joe Brown of Houston, Tex., as world lightweight champion April 21, Thursday was named boxer-of-the-month in the National Boxing Association's rankings for April.

Brown, who held the title for nearly six years, slipped in fourth place in the lightweight class.

Ortiz was selected over middleweight Paul Pender of Brookline, Mass., and lightweight Treno Kosaka of Japan.

Pender, recognized as middleweight champion in New York, Massachusetts and Europe, won recognition for his decisive triumph over Terry Downes of England in their title match. Kosaka was cited for a surprise triumph over Flash Elorde of the Philippines in a bout for the Orient lightweight crown.

Others winning recognition included heavyweight Zora Folley of Chandler, Ariz. for his decision last month in San Francisco over Bob Cleroux of Montreal, Canadian heavyweight champion.

Ortiz kept his standing as the third leading challenger for Floyd Patterson's world heavyweight title. Cleroux's defeat dropped him from sixth place to ninth. Sonny Liston of Philadelphia and Eddie Machen of Seattle were the only challengers ahead of Folley.

Kentucky Derby

Favorites On Outside

By OLLO ROBERTSON

LOUISVILLE, y. (AP)—The Kentucky Derby will be run for the 88th time Saturday over 1¼ miles at Churchill Downs.

The result could well hang on what takes place three-eights of a mile from the starting point.

It will be every horse for himself when the 16 or 17 finally-tished three - year - olds charge into the first turn, seeking a vantage point for the long run down the backstretch and then into the final quarter - mile leading to fame and fortune.

The draw for position in the $135,000-added classic placed the two stickouts—C. T. Chenery's 4-to-5 favorite, Sir Gaylord, and Mrs. Moody Jolley's 5-to-2 second choice, Hidan—on the far outside.

Near the rail, side-by-side will be Townsend B. Martin's Sunrise County and Fred Hooper's Admiral's Voyage, lightly bumping rivals of the recent Wood Memorial at Aqueduct. It was in the Wood that Sunrise County's lore out and bumped Admiral's Voyage by the first of two limes that led to his disqualification after they had finished in a dead heat.

EXPECT 100,000

A crowd of about 100,000 was expected to be on hand when the bands strike up My Old Kentucky Home and the horses start the long parade to the post. Post time is 4:30 p.m. EST and the race will be televised in Canada by CBC-TV.

The weatherman's promise is clear skies, temperatures up to 70 degrees and a fast track.

Even though much depends on the dash to the first turn, Jockey Willie Shoemaker, who'll be up on Sunrise County, isn't worried.

"I would have much rather been out in No. 6 or 7," he said. "But I figure my horse has a good kick of early speed and perhaps we can get away fast enough to escape trouble."

Although 16 were named for the race, there will be no more than 17 starters and perhaps only 16.

ENTERED AS INSURANCE

Cicada, three-year-old filly stablemate of Sir Gaylord, was entered but only as insurance in event something should happen to Sir Gaylord.

Verne Winchell's Donut King, one of the standout two-year-olds of 1961 but who has failed to win in three outings this year, is suffering from an infection of the left hind foot. A decision whether to start the colt was expected to be made today but trainer Don McNally said Winchell might wait until 45 minutes before post time the deadline for scratching, to decide.

With 16 entries and 17 starters, value of the race will be $184,650 with the winner earning $122,150. Second is guaranteed $25,000, third $12,500 and fourth $5,000.

In the early line prepared by the program handicapper, Sandie Cuming was made the third choice at 6 to 1 followed by Sir Robert B-to-1, Dosi King and Incredibly 12-to-1, and Admiral's Voyage 15-to-1.

Grouped at 20 - to - 1 were Pergo, Crimson Satan and the Derby Trial winner, Roman Line.

Odds of 30-to-1 were quoted against Green Hornet and the six horses coupled in the mutual betting field. The six are headed by Santa Anita Derby winner Royal Attack and also includes such little known performers as Touch Bar, Sharp Count, Lee Town, Mister Fitz and Good Fight.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

PICTON — Shifting his weight with a sort of back-barrel twist motion, Walt Fraser, this lovely town's obstinent patron of softball, stood in his baker-donkey backwash the other day and shook his head. I thought, with a gesture of sadness.

I had learned that the Picton Walts, as colorful a band of softball-chasing vagueros the broad rancheros of Prince Edward ever herded, had withdrawn from the Bellville and District Softball League.

The word had it that the Walts, in a last-minute gesture, had thrown in their softball lot with the new Trent Valley League. They cannot be blamed for the move. They want to play softball, but they want to play in a loop where there is an equalization of strength.

The crowd-pleasing Walts, headed by their ex-navy salt who learned how to tread a quarter deck on one of the fleet's sea-going destroyers and returned with the colorful rhetoric for which sailors and sergeant-majors are noted, will be missed by the city-slicker circuit.

Walt stretched his size 17 shirt with a huge sigh. "If I could only get a pitcher of the proper calibre," he said, "I would like to go back to the city league but under the circumstances it is impossible. Without the proper hurling asset I would not stand a chance."

Roger Chapman, the Walts' ace who the "skipper" relied on to take the brunt of the pitching chores, has been transferred to Toronto and is lost to the Walts' at least as far as this season goes.

He had tried to get other pitchers of topflight calibre, the portly president of Walts Limited told me. He had contacted husky-headed "Sleepy" Dawe, the good right-hander of the possibly defunct Cobourg Merchants.

Dawe would pitch for the Walts all right providing the seasonal assignment was backgrounded with a position equal to any to any of the town's bank managers, salary-wise.

The famous apple trees of Prince Edward County produce fruit of the highest quality, but search as you may, there are no positions of the Dawe requirement hanging around waiting to be plucked.

But the rotund boss of the Walts is clinging to a shred of hope. "If I can get a pitcher of the required ability, is it too late?" he asked. As a member of the city league advisory board I told him the Walts' entry would be welcomed up until Monday or Tuesday. This statement was confirmed yesterday by League Commissioner Cliff Belch.

So while it is extremely doubtful there is a slim chance the softball senors from the "little Spanish town" and its surrounding rancheros might yet enter the mainland circuit.

They would be more than welcome. Last year, headed by Fearless Fraser, who wrote and memorized his "plain and unpire addresses" before each game—and ad-libbed colorfully during delivery—the Walts proved a fine asset to the league.

They had a record of nine won and six lost, and entered the league playoffs pitted against the Cobourg Merchants. They had plenty of ability, fight and spirit. When the boss admiral ordered "battle stations" the Walts slipped into action easily and quickly.

And "Fearless" spared no verbal ammunition when the argumentative battles were joined. Opposing managers felt the force of his sea-tanged vocabulary. The Umpires' Association named him Public Nuisance Number One. But they "keyed" it. They would welcome him back if only to learn any additional to his familiar ammunition.

And for Walt's information I might state that the league will not field five of its topflight hurlers of 1961 in this season's activities. Missing from the pitching fold will be Bobby Hall, Chapman, Ken Kibbie-white, Sleepy Dawe and Rudy Campbell.

It could be a "fattening year" for batting averages.

Tigers Fail To Gain

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

John Buzhardt is building a reputation as a streak-snapper.

The 25 - year - old Chicago White Sox right-hander stopped the shoe Thursday night, hurling New York Yankees for a 3-0, five-hit victory cutting the American League leaders' victory string at seven games.

Buzhardt, whose major achievement in four previous seasons had been the triumph that snapped Philadelphia Phillies' 23-game losing skein during the 1961 National League campaign, brought his record to 4-1 with his fourth consecutive win for the White Sox.

Buzhardt came to the White Sox with Lefthander Charlie Smith in the trade that shipped Roy Sievers to the Phils. He was 6-6 with Philadelphia but threw himself into the spotlight when he halted the longest losing streak in modern baseball history at 23 while wearing uniform for the Phils.

Now he's stepped in as the big loser for the White Sox. Just 10 days ago he ended Chicago's four-game losing skid by beating the Yankees 5-1 in New York and his latest streak-snapper brought him to within two victories of his high win mark in the majors.

LANDER WINS TE

While Buzhardt was blanking the Yanks and lowered his earned run average for the last four games to a remarkable 1.32, the White Sox managed only six hits off Whitey Ford and Marshall Bridges. But Jim Landis accounted for the game-winner with his sixth homer, in the fourth inning.

Elsewhere in the AL, Norm Siebern's foul fly drove in the winning run as Kansas City Athletics knocked off Detroit Tigers 6-5. Don Mincher's grand slam homer carried Minnesota Twins to an 8-4 decision over Baltimore Orioles and Boston Red Sox ended a five-game losing streak by beating Washington Senators 7-4. Cleveland and Los Angeles were not scheduled.

Buzhardt struck out three, walked only one and had little trouble with the Yankees power except for rookie shortstop Tom Tresh, who got struck a single and double. Buzhardt also snapped another streak by ending Bobby Richardson's 17-game hitting string. Ford (2-1) allowed four hits in seven innings and Bridges permitted two.

BIG DAY FOR SIEBERN

Siebern, who got the Athletics rolling with a two-run homer in the first, knocked in another run in the fifth with a single before delivering a long foul in the seventh that snapped a 4-4 tie as Bobby Del Greco scampered home from third after the catch. The win went to Diego Segui (2-0). Rookie Doug Gallagher (0-2) lost it despite home runs by Norm Cash and Billy Bruton.

Mincher's second grand slam of the season shot the Twins into the lead in the first inning. But the needed another four-run uprising in the third—on Bernie Allen's three-run homer and a circuit shot by pitcher Jack Kralick — to subdue the Orioles. Kralick (1R), was tagged for a homer by Gus Triandos, Mitt Pappas (3-1) took the loss.

Home runs by Ed Bressoud and Jim Pagliaroni plus three runs batted in by Pete Runnels paced the Red Sox against the Senators, who lost their 16th in 20 games. Bill Monbouquette (2-2) needed Dick Radatz ninth-inning relief help to nail the victory. The loser was rookie Jim Hannan (0-3).

RECORD FIELD ENTERS

NEW YORK (AP) — Ben Hogan and Sam Snead are two of the 2,458 golfers who will have to scramble for places in the 62nd United States national open championship next month.

Joe Dey, executive director of the U.S. Golf Association, announced Thursday that a record list of 2,475 players have filed entry for golf's plus ribbon event, scheduled for June 14-16 over the Oakmont (Pa.) Country Club.

Only 19 of these, including defending champion Gene Littler, are exempt from the two rounds of qualifying tests. All the others have to earn their way into the 150-man field.

Cut Lead To 2-1

Oil Kings Lash Back At Wings

GUELPH (CP) — Edmonton Oil Kings, buoyed up by the addition of two players, gained their first victory in the Memorial Cup finals Thursday night, beating Hamilton Red Wings 5-3.

Norm Beaudin, picked up from the Regina Pats, led the Oil Kings scoring with two goals and an assist as they narrowed Hamilton's lead in games to 2-1.

Next match in the best-of-seven series is here Saturday. The fifth game will be in Kitchener next week.

Oil Kings won it the hard way, coming from behind twice after the two teams played a scoreless first period.

Ron Harris opened the scoring at 1:13 of the second period when he hit the wide side of the net on a partially-screened shot while Marc Dufour, up with the Oil Kings from Brandon Wheat Kings, was in the penalty box.

SCORES ON REBOUND

Hamilton boosted the score to 2-0 four minutes later when Wayne Rivers, who assisted on the first goal, rapped home Jimmy Peters' rebound after Earl Heiskala had set up the Wanted Softball Sponsors!

With the softball season just a couple of short weeks away, the City Commercial Softball League is badly in need of one or two more entries to insure the loop of another successful year.

The urgent need right now is for sponsors.

The league was thought to have six starters at the first loop meeting a few weeks back but now the "definite entries" have dwindled to three or four.

One or two more entries are almost a must. The league brass wants six entries if possible.

Another meeting has been called for Monday night at the YMCA at 7.30.

Any and all potential sponsors or representatives are urged to attend.

Has Four In Four, Giants Win

Simmons Proving Cards Ace Dealer

By JIM HACKLEMAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

Granted St. Louis Cardinals were given a chance in the National League race this year. But who ever thought a long-shot like Curt Simmons would be a big factor in keeping them in the picture?

Simmons, the former Phillies kid who hooked on with the Cards as a free agent two years ago, pitched another beauty Thursday night in a 4-0 victory over Houston's nose-diving Colts. The 33-year-old left-hander spaced seven hits for his fourth win in four starts —all complete games. St. Louis managed just four hits against rookie Dave Giusti (0-3) and Dick Farrell, but they included Bill White's two-run homer. Curt Flood's solo homer and a run - scoring double by Ken Boyer.

By winning, the Cards kept pace with San Francisco's steamrolling Giants, who put together four runs in the eighth inning and took their ninth in a row, 5-4 over Pittsburgh in 12 innings. The results left the Giants with a 1½-game lead over the Cardinals, who've been on a pretty good tear themselves —winning seven of their last eight.

In the NL's only other game, Philadelphia nipped the Milwaukee Braves 3-2 on Clay Dalrymple's ninth-inning single as a big show of power hitting by the Braves' Hank Aaron went to waste.

EXILED TO MINORS

Simmons, a 21-game winner with Philadelphia's pennant club of 1950, later was hampered by a series of arm troubles that eventually caused him to be shipped down to the minors in 1958.

The Phils released him in May of the next year and one week after that he was signed by St. Louis. He won 7-4 in 1960, but slipped to 9-10 last season.

Simmons has compiled impressive figures this year—35 hits and five walks in 36 innings, and as earned run average of 1.25.

Against Houston Thursday night Simmons didn't allow more than one hit an inning. White gave him some breathing room with the homer in the first. Flood connected in the third, and the Colts were dealt another tough setback. They now have lost seven of their last nine.

The Giants romped again, sweeping the four-game set with the Pirates as Jack Sanford (3-1) registered the seventh straight complete game by a San Francisco pitcher.

HADDIX BEATEN

Jumping on losing reliever Harvey Haddix (1-1) in the eighth, the Giants broke a 4-4 tie on an error and singles by Jim Davenport and Chuck Hiller. Willie Mays delivered two outs when he doubled for his third hit of the day and Orlando Cepeda brought in Mays with a single.

Pittsburgh counted two-run homers by Dick Schofield and Larry Elliot.

Dalrymple ended the wild one between the Phils and Braves with a single in the last of the ninth, sending John Callison home from second. Aaron was a one-man blaster for Milwaukee, hitting two homers, a triple and a double. His second homer came in the ninth with one on, belting Jim Brewer into a 3-3 tie.

But the Phils lost little time against Milwaukee's fifth pitcher, Hank Fischer (0-1), in the last of the ninth. Callison led off with a walk, Jacks Davis moved him along with a sacrifice by Ted Savage and single past third and Dalrymple followed with his game-winner in a 3-2 pitch.

Jack Baldschun (1-0) was the winner in relief.

Gets Trophy, $1,000

Bob Rousseau Top Rookie

MONTREAL (CP)—A youth with an instinctive flair many consider reminiscent of retired great Maurice (Rocket) Richard has been named the best rookie for 1961-62 in the National Hockey League.

He is Bobby Rousseau, a likeable boyish 21-year-old who wins $1,000 from the league along with the Frank Calder Memorial Trophy.

Like Richard, Bobby is a right winger, a member of the Montreal Canadiens. He has the same explosive quality driving in on goal, the tricky shift and the hard accurate shot.

But Rousseau has more of the frisky colt in him than the Rocket did as a youngster and is more angular in build, standing five feet, 10 inches and weighing 165 pounds. And where Richard was a longer, given to brooding, Rousseau is affable and accessible.

Rousseau's selection by a panel of hockey writers and broadcasters in the league's six home cities was announced Thursday night.

SCORED 45 POINTS

He won the honor with a 21-goal, 24-assist performance over the 70-game schedule and a classy effort as a penalty-killer. In the balloting, conducted on a 5-3-1 basis, Rousseau polled 67 out of a possible 180 points to outdistance the rest of the field easily.

Three Boston Bruins players followed—centre Cliff Pennington, defenceman Pat Stapleton and forward Wayne Connelly. Pennington, 22, got 70 points in the balloting, Stapleton, 21, 41 and Connelly 24.

Rousseau, a native Montrealer, played 15 games with the Habs two seasons ago and spent the remainder of the season with a farm club, Hull-Ottawa, Canadiens of the Eastern Professional League, where he posted 36 goals and collected 26 assists in 38 games.

Trenton High, May 12

Quinte COSSA Track Meet

The Bay of Quinte District of the Central Ontario Secondary Schools Association will hold its annual field day at Trenton High School on Saturday, May 12.

The meet, under the convenorship of Dave Bell of Moira S.S. and Bob Burleigh of Trenton H.S., will show several new features this year. A new age group has been added as well as 120 yards hurdle races for all age categories.

There will be sixteen district schools in competition with approximately 400 boys taking part.

A new Juvenile age group for boys under 14 as of Sept. 1st, 1961 has been added. These boys will be able to compete in all events available to the other three age groups except the 880 yards and the mile.

It is expected that all sixteen schools will field strong teams. The meet gets under way at 10.30 a.m. Entries close with Mr. Bell tomorrow, May 5th.

Top contestants in each event will be eligible to compete in the OSSAA track and field meet slated for Peterborough's Adam Scott High School, Saturday, May 19th.

Moira Secondary School will be the defend champions and its team won last year.

In preparation, Moira has accepted an invitation to compete in the Hamilton Eagles along with 90 other schools and some 1,300 athletes tomorrow.

Pott Tops Waco Golf

BURNSVILLE, Okla. (AP) Johnny Pott of Gulf Hill, Miss., fired a five-under-par 68 to take a one-stroke lead in the first round of the $30,000 Waco Turner open golf tournament Thursday.

Tied with 69s were Mason Rudolph, Ken Burnett and Don Thomas in the field of 124 players.

Bob Shave Jr., Australian Frank Phillips, Tommy Aaron and Bill Collins posted 70s and trailing them at 71 were Jack Nicklaus, Buster Cupit, Bob Moncrief, Jerry Magee, Rex Baxter Jr., and Dave Ragen.

Magee, of Toronto, shot a 34-37. Al Johnston of Montreal fired at 39-36—75.

PICTON

Central School For Township Being Planned

PICTON — A Central school for the township of Sophiasburgh, to begin building in the fall week, a survey will be made to select a suitable site, with adequate water facilities one of the prime requirements.

Several meetings have been held at which the proposal was thoroughly discussed and there was considerable difference of opinion. However, a majority favored a central school and the area board made a request to the provincial department for permission to raise funds for this purpose. When the matter came up at the council, it was necessary for Leone Lorne Young to cast a deciding vote, in favor.

There are thirteen schools in the township at the present time. The proposed school will have ten or eleven rooms and, besides the education and auditorium, the estimated cost is $243,000. This will be raised by a commercial levy of 14.8 mills and a farm and residential levy of 12.3 mills over the annual payments of $37,400 for 25 years. The balance of $106,000 is covered by government grants.

REWARDED

Recognition of the good work done by Flight Lieutenant Constable Earl Marvin of the village of Wellington has been awarded by the Federal Post Office Department. Mr. Marvin on Wednesday received confirmation of a cash award following a break-in at Wellington Post Office in October. Mr. Marvin's investigations resulted in the arrest and conviction of Belleville man on a charge of breaking and entering. The department standing to recognize such effort in 1960.

BAD CAMPS READY

WASHINGTON (AP) — The justice department said Thursday the government once had six camps for possible confinement of American Communists in the event of a national emergency but they were abandoned five years ago. The department replied to a Commonwealth party declaration that six "concentration camps" had once been prepared to detain members of the party.

Nasty Weather Hampers P.M.'s Visit

CONNER BROOK, Nfld. (CP) — Nasty Newfoundland weather continued Thursday to plague Prime Minister Diefenbaker on his first 1962 campaign visit to this province.

Fog and rain—plus a fairly strong on-shore wind—spelled unexpected road mileage for the prime minister in his efforts to visibly Liberal province. It even forced him to miss lunch.

Mr. Diefenbaker left early today for Ottawa to end his two-day visit to Newfoundland, cliplipped by the weather even before he touched the soil of the island province. His chartered airliner was forced to land at Argentia instead of St. John's Wednesday and this meant a three-hour ride over rough roads.

Things got so bad Thursday the people were waiting for "limker" — a Newfoundland term for one who brings bad weather—must have been responsible.

TROUBLES MULTIPLY

Thursday's trouble started in the fog and rain as a gale of wind was so bad Mr. Diefenbaker had to retrace Wednesday's road trip to Argentia to get a plane to western part of the province. He was eventually transferred to an Eastern Provincial Airlines plane to go to Deer Lake. That plane developed trouble in its hydraulic system.

There was no place in Stephenville to eat lunch as arrangements were made to dine at a tourist lodge on the way here but after arriving at the lodge the party found no arrangements had been made and no food was available to serve lunch.

The hungry party headed here.

Addressing 500 at a rally in this paper city Thursday night, Mr. Diefenbaker said there was a prospect of increased exports and growth in Canada's favorable balance of payments as a result of pegging the discount on the Canadian dollar.

He said Trade Minister Hees had predicted that the trend in favorable trade balance this year of $200,000,000 and said this was based on estimates before the government's action announced Wednesday pegging the Canadian dollar at 92½ cents in terms of U.S. currency.

EXPORTS GROW

The earlier prediction, he said, was that exports would grow by five per cent this year, while imports would increase by two per cent. He recalled that Canada recently showed the first favorable balance of international trade in 10 years.

There was one critical interjection during his speech. He referred to increases in the old age pensions introduced by the government.

"Joey Smallwood done it, not you," someone at the back of the hall called in reference to the Liberal Newfoundland premier.

"Ah, my friend," said Mr. Diefenbaker, "you'll certainly get well paid off for that one."

Pearson Pledges Minimum Price For No. 1 Wheat

WEYBURN, Sask. (CP) — A minimum price of $2 a bushel for No. 1 wheat over the next three years was pledged by Liberal leader Lester B. Pearson in endorsing his party's election farm platform Thursday night.

The minimum would apply to all farmers delivering wheat for export as a consumer subsidy, Mr. Pearson told an applauding crowd of about 700 in this southern Saskatchewan city.

He said a Liberal government also would have sold grain to Communist China — and started that practice immediately.

A deficiency payment would be paid for the first time on a voluntary basis on oats and barley and on a quarterly basis on rapeseed. Prices such as hogs and eggs covered by stabilization guarantees.

The three-year payments, of a maximum $200 a farmer at $1 an acre, paid in 1958, 1960 and 1962, would be scrapped as hazard political expedients.

WOULD IMPROVE

The crop insurance program would be improved by more adequate federal responsibility in the event of serious provincial losses such as last summer's drought. Water conservation would be expanded.

The new item in the program was $2 wheat minimum.

Prairie farmers had marched on Ottawa in 1958 to press for deficiency payments on wheat, oats and barley.

Mr. Diefenbaker rejected the request as likely to aid the big farmers more than small ones who really needed the help since as farm costs rose and commodity prices fell — hurting steadily.

Deficiency payments are made when the national average price of a product falls below a "floor" based on the basis of prices over the last 10 years. The floor was to be for Manitoba today on his campaign hop for the June 18 federal general election.

MENTIONS FEUD

Mixed in with his speeches Thursday were references by Provincial Liberal Leader Ross Thatcher and various federal candidates to the boiling Liberal-CCF feud of long standing plus the showdown that the province's prepaid medical health plan faces from the Saskatchewan College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Mr. Thatcher said the 19 provincial members of the legislature all will be out hustling votes in the federal and provincial at least six Liberal victories in the 17 federal seats.

play. Edmonton's Max Mestinsek was just returning to the ice from a penalty at the time.

Dubuc redeemed himself at 12:20 of the same frame when he narrowed the count to 5-1 with a deflection of a passby by Beaudin. Paul also drew an assist.

Another four minutes passed before Harold Fleming tied the game at 4-4. Manning fired a high pass and rifling the puck past Hamilton goalie Buddy Blom, who had to handle 10 shots in the period compared with six fired at Harrison Gray in the Edmonton nets.

The third period was barely 18 seconds old when Hamilton's Pit Martin made the count 5-4. A tripping penalty to Ron Harris set the stage for the first of Beaudin's goals. He tied the game at 3-3 on a shot from a Fulmouth scramble at 1:14.

Then, just 27 seconds later Beaudin did it again on a screened shot.

Hamilton pulled Blom from the nets with a minute and 15 seconds left but the move backfired, Roger Bourbonnais scoring into the empty net.

Astrological Forecast

For May 5

By SYDNEY OMARR

Aries (March 21 to April 19) Exchange of ideas with friends, family or club members could prove profitable. This is no kind of day to seek seclusion. Full steam ahead.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) Argument of security spotlighted. But don't try to convince yourself of something you do not believe in. Stick to goals.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) Cycle at peak, but you must be realistic. There are persons around you who have certain aspirations, which may not meet your standards. But never nag.

Cancer (June 22 to July 21) Your ability to communicate is emphasized. Don't withdraw, but speak up, attend social gathering. Then you take step in right direction. Meet people at least halfway.

Leo (July 22 to August 21) Dining with friends can be beneficial but "buying" your way not advised. Extravagance can be traced to uncertainty. Instead, let others accept you as you really are!

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 23) You could find yourself allied with an "unpopular" person or subject. Be very truthful with yourself and others, and win new respect from all involved.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 23) Long-range view emphasized. If you take "safe" course, you do not live up to potential. Today fine for resting, "thinking, outlining ambitions.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) If you become vindictive, others may put their backs to the wall. Being generous could open new, exciting paths. Look for the best in others.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Exciting and beneficial to explore new subjects, read new books, features in newspaper. Build up backlog of knowledge.

Capricorn (Dec. 23 to Jan. 20) Key word is service today. Not time to ask what others can do for you. Seek, instead, to discover what value you can be to community, friends. This proves ultimately of great benefit.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Favorable lunar aspect today indicates tremendous desire for self-expression. Show loved ones you do care. Find person sympathetic to your cause, needs, ambitions. Open mind, and heart.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) Stress completely on conservatism. No time to celebrate "victory." Better quit in your horse. Check details, and prepare for coming event.

If today is your birthday you are person who never accepts word of authorities without first investigating beliefs. This is one of your most valuable assets, the willingness to personally investigate. Let no one discourage you on this score.

GENERAL TENDENCIES—Cycle up for Taurus, Gemini, Cancer. But Sagittarius should prepare for future, rather than try to force issues today.

Geologist Claims Canada's Only Known Volcanic Region Will Explode Again

By RUSSELL ELMAN

OTTAWA (CP) — A prominent Canadian geologist says dormant volcanoes in northern British Columbia are due to erupt—but it's anyone's guess when.

Dr. James M. Harrison, chief of the Geological Survey of Canada, considers it "a good bet" that Canada's only known active volcanic region—the Telegraph Creek area of northern B.C.—will explode again.

"Whether it will be in our lifetime, we don't know," he said in an interview. However, there is no scientific reason to suppose that there will not be more volcanic activity."

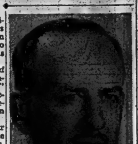
Dr. Harrison said the last known volcanic eruption in Canada is thought to have occurred about 300 to 300 years ago near Telegraph Creek, 600 miles northwest of Vancouver. New knowledge of this volcanic region had been recently revealed through extended geological mapping and aerial photography.

AT TOKYO MEETING

The Regina - born scientist, who is also president of the International Union of Geological Sciences, was senior Canadian delegate at an international conference on volcanology at Tokyo in May. It provided an opportunity for a first - hand glimpse of Japanese volcanoes currently in action.

"Through the study of volcanoes, Canada can make a contribution to science and eventually the economic life of the country," he said.

Canada had as geologically a complete record of volcanic activity as any country in the world but in the past there had been no serious attempt to investigate Canada's volcanic history.



Mount Royal, the 900-foot-high wooded park dominating Montreal, was an ancient volcano which blew its top 300,000,000 years ago. Much of the Maritimes, the Gaspe peninsula and Laurentian hills were once volcanic areas of an even older vintage. Chances of a volcanic revival in these regions were considered negligible.

KEY TO MINERALS

"Mineral deposits of many kinds are found in volcanic rocks and rocks closely associated with them. It is possible that a comprehensive study of these materials and their relation to mineral deposits will provide important clues that will enable us to find other deposits that are not suspected."

The University of Manitobo, he said, is preparing a study of volcanic rocks on the edge of the pre-Cambrian Canadian shield, which contains half of Canada's known metallic wealth.

It was also important from the viewpoint of the history of the earth to know what geological changes have taken place. Such knowledge of volcanoes might throw new light on how the North American continent was formed.

WARNS ABOUT VOLCANOES—Dr. James M. Harrison, chief of the Geological Survey of Canada, says "it's a good bet" dormant volcanoes in northern British Columbia will erupt again. They last erupted 200 to 300 years ago in an area 600 miles northwest of Vancouver. Dr. Harrison said he could not predict when future eruptions will occur. (CP Photo)

Scientist Devises Machine To Use Infra-Red Heat to Peel Fruits, Vegetables

By EDNA HEARLEY

OTTAWA (CP) — A machine that uses infra-red heat to peel apples, tomatoes, peaches and plums has been devised by Dr. E. A. R. Asselbergs, 55-year-old research scientist with the federal agriculture department.

The fruit is put on a belt that carries it though 3,000-degree infra-red heat. Apples are exposed for 25 to 30 seconds. Tomatoes, plums and peaches need more quickly and are exposed for only four or five seconds.

When the fruit is taken off the machine the skin peels as easily as that of a banana. A unit that would remove the peel mechanically is still being developed.

STARTED IN HOLLAND

He brought the project with him when he came to Canada 12 years ago, having started it in the Asselbergs Wageningen University in his native Holland.

Last year Dr. Asselbergs discovered a method of making instant mashed potato crystals which has been adopted by some manufacturers. Means of producing flakes and granules had been found earlier.

Now he has come up with a variation of combination dried foods in which potato is mixed with fish, beef, pork, lamb, chicken or cheese. These can be reconstituted with milk or water.

Dr. Asselbergs says that although the use of convenience foods is usually more economical, particularly in institutions, there always will be plenty of room for that will come only in natural form.

"If you want steak you have to buy a steak."

His interest in food developed as a boy in The Netherlands where his parents were in the bakery business. He enjoys cooking at home where his five children provide a ready taste panel.

Venezuelan Planes Strafe Rebels In Port

Liberties Suspended After Marines Revolt

CARACAS (Reuters) — Constitutional liberties were suspended today in Venezuela as government troops closed in on the rebel-held port city of Carupano, strafed by loyalist aircraft Friday.

President Romulo Betancourt went on the air Friday night to announce the suspension of liberties.

In a radio and television speech he called on the leftist rebels to surrender or face government attack at dawn today. Carupano was surrounded by land and sea, he said

Government planes bombed and machine-gunned Carupano airfield Friday after it was seized, causing some casualties among the rebels.

Interior Minister Luis Augusto Dubuc said the government forces had been ordered to subdue the uprising of 14 officers and 400 marines within hours.

The rebels seized the barracks at the heart of the town early Friday after signing a confirmation declaring Betancourt's government "undemocratic."

REBELS BLAMED

The government linked the officers with the left — wing extremist Democratic Republican Union party.

Loyal troops and a destroyer were dispatched to Carupano, and leaflets were dropped and finally, fighter planes strafed the rebel positions.

The rebels retreated to a college in the eastern part of the town, leaving behind a bullet-riddled commercial airliner and a government-owned fire truck, possible escape.

Betancourt, elected president in 1959 for a five-year term, and Feb. 18 became the first freely-elected president in the country's turbulent history to finish office in three years.

The terms of his predecessors all had been cut short by ruthless, big-spending military dictators.

2 Enumerators In Rosedale To Be Charged

TORONTO (CP)—Two more charges were laid Friday under the Canada Elections Act in connection with enumeration of voters in Toronto ridings for the June 18 federal election.

Charged on orders of Nelson Castonguay, chief electoral officer, were enumerators John Cullen and George Hall of Toronto. They are accused of placing on the list of electors for Toronto Rosedale riding the names of persons who were not eligible to vote.

Earlier Zigmund Blonski was charged with obstructing and impeding the work of enumerators in Toronto Parkdale.

Blonski's case is to be heard in court May 10. Date for the appearance of Cullen and Hall has not yet been set.

Mr. Castonguay instructed Returning Officer James A. Travers to appoint his own experienced enumerators to enumerate in Rosedale polling division where the alleged irregularities occurred. The registrar in enumeration was dismissed, reported to send Saturday, will be extended to May 10 in this division.

CITIZEN COMPLAINS

The action arose out of the complaint earlier this week by private Horst Hartmann, a German citizen, that he had found other immigrants went enrolled on the voters' list in Toronto Rosedale despite his protests that they were ineligible.

The law says all eligible voter is one who on the June 18 polling day is at least 21 and who is a Canadian citizen, or a British subject who has been resident in Canada for one year immediately preceding the election day.

Mr. Castonguay called upon the RCMP to investigate the situation in Toronto Rosedale after the Toronto Telegram turned over to him documents and statements from immigrants who said they were enrolled as voters.

Mr. Hartmann said he told two enumerators that he and the four immigrants were aliens but that they had replied "that doesn't matter."

The Canada Elections Act provides for a fine of up to $500 or a year in jail or both for non - indictable offences under the act, and a fine of up to $2,000,000 or up to two years in jail or both for indictable offences. An offender also may be disqualified from voting for seven years.

Mr. Castonguay appointed J. W. Swackhamer, a Toronto lawyer, to prosecute the charges against the two enumerators.

FLOW INCREASED BY CHANGES IN CANADIAN LAW

Short-Term Money May Be Cut Off

WASHINGTON (CP)—Treasury Secretary Dillon has proposed a United States tax change designed to reduce the flow of short-term U.S. investment capital to Canada. He said this flow has been stimulated by changes in Canadian tax laws.

Involved are millions of dollars shipped by American parent corporations to their Canadian subsidiaries and branches for long investment in Canada, but kept deposit, bonds and other activity in order to claim a bigger tax credit from the American government.

Describing this particular technique as "ingenious" and "harmful" to American monetary stability, Dillon has asked Congress to slash the amount of tax credit the parent companies can claim from this investment source.

His proposal forms part of legislation now before the under Senate finance committee study.

Dillon told the committee this "artificial inducement" to send capital abroad has had bad results from differences in U.S. and Canadian corporation tax rates. He said that, including old-age security and withholding taxes, the effective Canadian rate now applicable on income going to U.S. corporations is 57½ per cent, compared with the maximum U.S. rate of 52 per cent.

SHIPPED MORE CAPITAL

To increase their Canadian earnings to take advantage of what Dillon described as the "excess profits" tax per cent), some of these corporations shipped more capital into Canada in short-term investments.

The interest and dividends earned, when remitted back to the U.S., would be subject to the Canadian 15-per-cent withholding tax, thus increasing their Canadian earnings. Subsequent remittals would get a larger sum to apply to the American tax credit.

Dillon described the situation in his recent report to the committee.

"Since the excess credit from the business income will eliminate the U.S. tax on the interest income, the effect is to reduce the U.S. income taxable at only a 15-per-cent Canadian rate, as compared with the 52-per-cent U.S. rate that would apply if the funds were held in the U.S. The result of this situation serves as an artificial inducement to the movement of U.S. capital abroad."

Under the Dillon proposal earned income from short-term investments would be allowed a tax credit for taxes withheld only to the Canadian withholding tax or other tax paid. The withholding tax would not be available to use their earnings to reduce their U.S. tax liability on the full 52-per-cent U.S. tax credit.

Magistrate Finds No Intent in Assault Case

PETERBOROUGH (CP)—An Oshawa man, stabbed twice in the back and hit by pellets from a shotgun when he went into his father-in-law's home here, was found not guilty Friday of a charge of breaking and entering with intent to commit bodily harm.

Magistrate H. R. Howett of Peterborough acquitted Stephen Agnant Nicholas Chiplick, 32.

Walter Pilling said he saw Chiplick with a shotgun in the back door with a shotgun early in the morning of April 20. He stopped Chiplick on the stairs and in the scuffle Chiplick was stabbed in the back with a butcher knife. The wounds were superficial.

Mr. Pilling said Chiplick fired a warning shot from his own shotgun and some of the pellets hit Chiplick's foot but did not injure him, the court was told.

Chiplick said he had been drinking for several days and remembered little of the night. He went to the Pilling home to see his son, Lee, he said.

Chiplick and his wife have been separated for about three years.

Two Children Found Asphyxiated In Refrigerator in Toronto Suburb

TORONTO (CP) — Two children were found asphyxiated in a refrigerator Friday after police had searched nearby High Park for them for three hours.

Mrs. William Ziemniak found her son Gregory, 5, and his playmate Kim Seyler, 5, in the refrigerator on the back porch of the Ziemniak home. Beside the children was a toy rubber elephant.

Mrs. Flemming Seyler said she last saw Kim with Gregory at 3 p.m. Her husband, a toolmaker, went to look for Kim at 5.30. When neither could be found police were notified.

About 10 policemen and several civilians searched the area for three hours before the children were found. They were pronounced dead at the Hospital for Sick Children, where they were taken after inhalator treatment failed to revive them.

Police said the refrigerator's self-closing door probably shut on the children when they rocked the refrigerator.

The Seylers have another son Jan, six months. The Ziemniaks have two girls.

ENGINEER QUESTIONED — Norihumi Minakami, 38, engineer of one of the trains involved in a triple train crash in Tokyo, Japan, is shown as he answered newsmen's questions. Minakami said he was sure he got the green go-ahead signal about 1,195 feet from the collision point "but it might have been my misunderstanding because the accident took place which could have occurred if the light was green." The triple train crash took the lives of 168 persons and injured more than 360. Police later arrested Minakami, and three other trainmen on suspicion of criminal negligence.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker, who started it all by setting June 18 as election day in Ottawa Thursday night, will launch the campaign trail 10 days ago.

He was to fly to London this afternoon where officials expected 2,000 supporters including the entire Ontario Progressive Conservative cabinet and 15 federal ministers — to hail him when he delivers his key-note speech in the London Arena. The meeting is scheduled for 8:30 p.m.

The three other party leaders were active and audible Friday.

Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson swings into NDP Douglas made campaign speeches in Manitoba.

Mr. Pearson's main weekend engagement will be a public rally at Sault Ste. Marie tonight, with Sunday free. Mr. Douglas, going lightly today, will move to Toronto Sunday for an Ontario candidates' school.

For Social Credit, Friday was a busy day. Mr. Thompson and his deputy leader, Real Caouette, drew a crowd estimated at 3,000 at a nominating meeting at St. Malachie, 40 miles south of Quebec City.

Franco Declares Emergency As Strikes Spread in North

MADRID (AP) — Generalissimo Francisco Franco today proclaimed a state of emergency in three key provinces in Spain's industrial north to try to halt a spreading wave of strikes.

Franco's decree, to remain in effect at least three months, was aimed mainly at the Asturias coal mines where 30,000 miners went on strike for higher pay a month ago leaving at least another 20,000 without work.

Strikes are technically outlawed in Spain.

The government charged that the strikes had been instigated by "foreign agitators seeking to cause political and labor strife in the area."

Franco's action, described by some authorities here as in effect martial law, was ordered in the provinces of Oviedo, Santander and Guipuzcoa, main industrial states on Spain's north coast.

He suspended various sections of the bill of rights, including the right of assembly, movement of persons or vehicles in strike areas and freedom from search and arrest normally guaranteed Spaniards.

Franco's order which followed an emergency session of economic affairs, was given unusually wide publicity in the Spanish press and over radio and television.

No immediate effects of the government action were reported from the localities, where miners are demanding higher wages from mine operators controlled both by government agencies and private interests.

Unless the state of emergency is sufficient to end the Asturian miners strike promptly, some officials predicted today that Franco would declare the mines militarized, thus requiring the miners to return to their jobs as units of the armed forces.

Two other important Spanish industries have been hit by strikes.

At Bilbao, where the civil governor closed the naval shipyards after a strike began, reports said most of 5,000 workers agreed to return to their jobs rather than risk loss of seniority and other rights.

Two other areas of unrest are Seville, near San Sebastian, where 3,000 employees of a factory manufacturing railroads stayed away from work.

Miss Lewis said after the ceremony, to which only four persons were invited, that there would be "no honeymoon as Chris is leaving for Canada on Sunday."

Doctors Suggest Delay In Plan, Negotiations

College Urges Members Not to Leave Province

REGINA (CP) — The Saskatchewan government should lay aside its medical care insurance act and call in the doctors to negotiate, Dr. D. G. Dalgleish, president of the Saskatchewan College of Physicians and Surgeons, said Friday.

The suggestion came at the end of a two-day emergency meeting held by the college at which about 400 of its 804 members overwhelmingly rejected the legislation as now written.

The doctors also reaffirmed their determination not to work under the plan, but Dr. Dalgleish said the college has urged its members to stay in the province until the issues are cleared up.

Dr. R. E. Bacovies of Regina, a member of the college's governing council, said the next move is for Premier Ross Thatcher and the college to try to work out some solution.

The doctors said they will not practise under the compulsory government legislation even if they are prohibited from practising outside the plan. They will limit their services to emergency work.

Dr. Hall, through spokesman at a press conference at the end of the meeting, said the Medical Care Insurance Act in its present form prohibits them from private practice. The doctors did not spell out their emergency services program.

The medical profession has pledged to cover 892,000 of the

New Jersey May Make It a Crime For Doctor to Refuse Treatment

POINT PLEASANT, N.J., (AP)—Leaders of a movement to get doctors to refuse to treat patients participating in a proposed federal medical care plan for the aged pressed for their signatures today.

More than 200 New Jersey doctors have signed such a declaration. That would introduce a bill in the legislature Monday that would subject a doctor to a $100 fine and a three - month jail term or both for rejecting a patient "solely because of the prospective or intended method of payment." The state board of medical examiners would be empowered to revoke the license of any doctor found guilty of refusing treatment.

TORONTO (CP) — Two survivors of the Auschwitz concentration camp and a friend from Israel died in a train - car crash in northwest Toronto today.

Mrs. Burstein had saved for years to fly here from Israel to visit her sister, Mrs. Abby Zucker, after a 35-year separation.

The Weisbaums, who came to Canada from Germany after the Second World War, were driving Mrs. Burstein to her sister's home when the car was in collision with a CNR train.

The impact demolished the car, splintered a signal box and hurled the bodies 100 feet down the track.

Mrs. Burstein arrived in Canada last month.

TUNIS (Reuters) — The official Algerian nationalist press service reported today that eight shepherds had found a mass grave containing the bodies of 500 men and women southwest of Constantine in eastern Algeria. province's 820,000 residents on a compulsory, comprehensive and prepaid basis, is scheduled to go into operation July 1.

The doctors were asked Thursday by Premier Woodrow Lloyd to co-operate in the plan a fair chance. He said it would start July 1 with or without the doctors' co-operation.

The doctors, meeting in a stand against the plan in a resolution Friday and a standing vote, Thursday, They have opposed it since it became a election issue prior to the provincial election in June, 1960.

Dr. Dalgleish said at the press conference the doctors object to government control of the plan.

Dr. Barrocles said "the government has complete control of every service given by every patient." He said the Medical Care Insurance Act is a costly government powers to govern treatment of patients.

The government has said it will not interfere in the doctor-patient relationship and will not have anything to do with the treatment and diagnosis of patients.

In his address Thursday Premier Lloyd said the plan provides that administers the plan will have the responsibility of only supervising payments to doctors for their services.

Dr. Dalgleish said the colleges counsel advised that there is no method to practise privately under the plan.

WILL SEEK WAYS

"We will continue to seek ways and means to practise outside the plan," he said.

The government has not outlawed practising outside the plan, the insurance plan will operate. The doctors said that although the government pays and controls over doctor-patient relationships and treatment and diagnosis, the government has the power in the act to do this.

"We are not prepared to believe government promises that they will not implement powers that it now has under the plan," Dr. Barrocles said. "The government has ignored public opinion."

Dr. Dalgleish said that during the closed sessions of the meeting—the first session was open to the press—there was not a single suggestion that the doctors comply with Mr. Lloyd's suggestion to abide by the plan.

Dr. Barrocles said there were no more than five dissenting votes on any resolution.

The doctors' meeting is considering legal action to halt implementation of the act until its validity has been tested.

New Hospital Visiting Hours Are Criticized

Visiting hours at Belleville General Hospital and the rules governing them appear to invite the former schedule of permitting only two hours per day for visiting, came up for discussion at county council yesterday.

Commencing May 20th, visiting hours for patients other than adult wards are to be from 3 to 4 in the afternoon and 7 to 8 in the evening and from 2 to 4 for pediatrics.

The motion, moved by Fred Beckett of Rawdon, raised the question, noting that the change from the present 1 to 9 p.m. visiting hours' schedule would mean considerable hardship for persons living at a distance from the city.

But Marmora reeve William Shannon, the county's representative on the hospital board, came to the defence of the hospital board and said the change move for shorter hours had been necessitated because of over-crowding at the hospital.

He said, however, that it was hoped the change would be but temporary and if the over-crowding could be overcome in the near future it would revert to the 1-9 visiting hours schedule.

With several persons in most of the hospital rooms the long visiting hours period that visitors were almost constantly coming and going and that visiting patient relations were difficult.

Warden Harold Varty noted the change back to former visiting hours was to be effected a month after doctors had insisted on the change "for the good of the patients."

Member Claims Acoustics Bad In Chambers

Hastings county councillors are not completely unanimous as to their belief that acoustics in the council chambers of their new $700,000 county administration building are satisfactory.

In fact Tyendinaga Deputy Reeve Sidney Fitzgerald has gone so far as to suggest that it might be a good idea if some sort of a sound system were installed.

He noted that the biggest objection he had was voiced to the chambers when from their seats at the back often were unable to hear members when they are addressing council. This was most noticeable when members rose to their front of the room to address the warden.

"I would say that the acoustics were bad in this room," he said.

But other councillors said they had no trouble hearing and Bancroft Reeve Jack Brown noted that the architects had tried to be very careful that the acoustics would be good.

He said there had been no complaints from the main court room which had a similar construction to the council chambers.

It was the suggestion of council, however, that the building committee look into the matter and see if anything could be done for acoustical improvement.

Despite Loss in Deloro County Assessment Upped By $636,554 in One Year

Despite a loss of $118,886 in the village of Deloro because of industrial buildings being demolished, the assessment in the county of Hastings increased by $636,554 from the year 1960 to 1961, it was shown in the 1962 report to county council when county assessor Cecil Gross, A.M.C.T., presented his report in the county members municipalities' meeting held for the 1962 equalization was placed at $30,386,778.

The assessment of property on which grants in lieu of taxes is placed is given as $626,125, while unions assessment was $136,600.

The report noted that the township of Sidney had the greatest increase in assessment and in population, while the town of Deseronto showed the biggest percentage increase in assessment.

The county assessor returned his rates in the different municipalities to the present basis of assessment with the object of what assessors were trying to do — that is to bring about a cost of operating the municipalities among the property owners.

DOING FAIR JOB

He said that the township assessors were doing a satisfactory job and admitted that the municipalities were relieved of a considerable burden when there was mostly the result of defendant costs in the various school boards. He suggested that the county would be "jumping too much out the deep end" to suggest that they take over school section and one school rate in the county.

"Why," he asked, "should a property owner be penalized because he lives on the edge of the right or wrong side of the road, or in the right or wrong corner of the township."

"If the standard of education across the county is equal in each municipality, then, the cost should be the same, or at least closer than it is at present," he said.

The report showed Sidney had the largest population of county municipalities with 6,479. Thurlow had 4,754 residents, Tyendinaga 2,468 and Hungerford 2,184.

The smallest population in the individual counties was in Limerick with just 231.

The assessment of Village of Deloro, Wickliffe and Bangor have a population of 923 while there are 967 persons living in Elzevir and Grimsthorpe and 1,015 in Tudor and Cashel.

The most populous village in the county is Bancroft with 2,833, and the smallest Deloro with 923.

Total population of the county was 43,200 with an increase of 870 from the previous year. The report noted that there had been a decline in population in many of the municipalities.

There was an objection from the village of Deloro noted in the report, but the assessment was changed by Centre Hastings High School Area on the basis of its assessment prior to the demolition of industrial buildings.

Clerk-treasurer Carl Bateman explained that an adjustment of $118,886 had to be made since the levy was paid.

The contest has been period of try-outs, almost $2,000 in cash awards were distributed to the winning employes. On Thursday, an official from the company, managing director, Karel Vytopil, Frank Vocoluk, deputy director, Jan Bata, personnel manager and Frank Burr, manager of the Bata Shoe Division, visited departments throughout the plant and made the presentations.

In addition to the cash awards, winning department's received silver shields.

CLEAN UP TOWN

Sweepers have been issued to the men of the town to help in the spring cleaning. Special pick-ups of rubbish will be made during the week.

2-Way Radios Wanted for Fire Trucks

TRENTON — Monday night, Trenton council will again be asked to consider the purchase of two-way radios for the fire department trucks and the fire chief's car with a committee of council present at the vehicles and the fire hall.

Last time the subject was broached council reportedly could not see its way clear to buy the radios at present time.

Monday night's fire at the Canada Creosoting Company plant's stockyard may have put a different complexion on things.

At least, the events of the night strengthened Fire Chief Cecil Ellis' determination that the equipment was a necessity.

When the major fire was first reported, two of the department's trucks were at a fire on the Carrying Place Road. From there the red and ruddy glow of the Creosote fire lit the sky and rushed back to town.

At the fire hall, orders from the fire chief were taken from man to man by shank's pony, as there was no available means of communication.

Council Asks Legislation To Retain All Differential Of Hospital Ward Rates

Provincial legislation enabling hospitals to retain 100 per cent of the room differential between standard ward rates and rates for semi-private and private hospital rooms, has been asked by Hastings county council as a means to provide funds to meet capital hospital construction costs.

The request was made Friday prior to the closing of the annual spring session. Reeve Earl Sager of Madoc township proposed the resolution with Deputy Reeve Fred Sprick of Rawdon seconding the motion.

(Under existing legislation only 50 per cent of the room differential is retained by the hospital, the balance being forwarded to the Ontario Hospital Services Commission).

Reeve Sager's motion was recently passed at the annual convention of Rural Municipalities, but was stalled before it reached the Ontario Legislature.

Mr. Sager said such legislation was particularly needed in areas, as Belleville, where additional hospital accommodation was urgently required and no municipal or other body charged with the responsibility of providing for the accommodation.

In many centres, he said, government grants totalling 40 per cent were available for hospital construction whereas while at Belleville only 25 per cent could be counted on.

As an alternative to his room differential proposal Mr. Sager suggested additional room rates be paid by all patients.

He felt there would be little objection from hospital patients to paying an additional rate when they realized the money was to be used for needed hospital accommodation.

HEARTILY IN ACCORD

He noted that under existing regulations hospitals are entitled to charge up to $3.75 per day differential for semi-private rooms and $7.00 per day for private rooms.

Reeve William Shannon of Marmora said he was heartily in accord with Reeve Sager's resolution with respect to room differentials being retained entirely by hospitals.

He said property owners should not afford to pay more and if capital hospital costs were levied against property it would tend to reduce the response to voluntary giving during hospital fund raising campaigns.

He felt the way suggested by Mr. Sager's resolution would be more equitable. He said it was a good idea and deserved consideration.

Reeve Douglas Spencer of Tweed was not so sure and asked if legislation along some of the Ontario Hospital Revenues would not mean simply increased municipal costs.

But councillors went along with the resolution and it was carried almost unanimously.

Earlier in the session councillors heard the report of a special joint county - city committee appointed to consider expansion requirements at Belleville General Hospital.

The committee considered various aspects of the problem of providing additional hospital accommodation and made a number of recommendations to the hospital board.

County council authorized the committee to continue discussions on the hospital problem.

CAN EXPAND FACILITIES

The joint committee is satisfied that many of the facilities at the hospital can be expanded to accommodate a substantially increased number of patients. It is also satisfied that boiler and mechanical equipment is adequate to add to be adequate for expansion.

Subject to a contrary report by hospital consultants, the committee considers totalling additional expansion be contemplated at the present hospital with the optimum capacity to be determined by such a survey.

It also recommended that a joint sub-committee be appointed to explore ways and means whereby a satisfactory division or ownership of the Belleville City Hospital might be established.

The committee report recognized the urgency of the need for hospital expansion, but in view of the complexity of the problems involved, recommended steps be taken to employ consultants to reconcile any local differences of opinion and the preparation of a master plan for economical and efficient hospital development.

NEW NAME ADDED

At the suggestion of county hospital representative William Shannon, Reeve Earl Sager of Madoc township was named to the joint city-county committee.

Reeve Sager moved to replace a motion of April 29th, 1963, in which approval was given for county participation in a proposed hospital addition at 35 per cent of the cost up to a maximum of $365,000.

In view of the present need for greater hospital expansion, it was explained that the 1961 motion no longer would be realistic.

"It doesn't mean that the county is withdrawing support," noted Warden Varty.

To Whom It May Concern!

Some time ago a person of perverted mind roamed the residential area of the Hastings and Prince Edward County Fairgrounds and came in the "effect" name in Bridge Street somewhere.

The Trenton war died deeply by the officers of the regiment and others who were associated with the Rady Fox during World War II.

Lieut.-Colonel Angus H. Duffy, commanding officer, was deeply hurt. He took it as a personal affront. He removed his cap badge saying he would not wear it until the color was returned.

He has kept his word.

In various communications the person or persons responsible for the removal have maligned Col. Duffy's name.

Tomorrow Col. Duffy turns over the command of the regiment to Lieut. Col. Joe Black. He is retiring because of ill health.

It would be a fitting gesture if the person or persons concerned would return the color to the regiment on or before the day of Col. Duffy's retirement.

It could be returned in the same way in which it was taken.

The writer is satisfied that all would be forgiven.

This is an appeal to the conscience of him or those responsible.

Surely your gripes, if any, have been satisfied.

The return of the color would make Lieut. Col. Duffy the happiest man in the world despite the heart trouble he will suffer in leaving his beloved Rusty Fox.

How about it, please!

G. H. C.

(Note:-Col. Duffy knew nothing of this story until he read it in this newspaper.)

Small Doe Seen Near Brighton

The beginning of what is expected to be a nice weekend has been accident free thus far in the Bay of Quinte district.

City police report a quiet night with no accidents. Ontario Provincial Police report heavy traffic is flowing smoothly on highway #01, with no mishaps occurring on highways throughout the area.

An OPP official at No. 9 District Headquarters said, "that's the way we like it".

Verlon Almost made the market, the picture market that is, but this reporter had his gun — camera loaded, as he drove through the Brighton area early this morning.

A small doe, caught the eye of coney passing motorists, as it stood in the middle of a county road, on the north side of highway 401, just west of the Brighton clover-leaf. — Better luck next time.

Council Members Approve Newly-Formed Highlands Of Hastings Tourist Assoc.

Hastings county council Friday put its stamp of approval on the newly formed Highlands of Hastings Tourist Association and moved that this organization be the official advertising agency for the county.

Reeve Percy Vetes Melhuish, reeve, president of the new organization, said the area to be taken in would include Belleville and all of Hastings with the exception of that part of the county now in the Land of Lakes area, and the six northern township now part of the Madawaska Valley.

He said it was the intention of the Association to publish the Highlands of Hastings tourist booklet now being put out by the Belleville Chamber of Commerce in conjuction with the county and the city of Belleville.

Aims of the organization will be, to promote and stimulate the tourist industry within the county.

There was considerable discussion on the part of council as to whether the county should contribute and give financial support to the various tourist associations to which it has been contributing.

VOTES SEVERAL GRANTS

In the end council voted $300 for the Madawaska Valley Association; $150 to the Land of Lakes Association; $650 to the Belleville Board of Commerce and $500 to the Lake Ontario Development Association.

The balance of its $2,000 budget will be turned over to the Highlands of Hastings Tourist Association.

Deputy Reeve Allan Bronson of Bancroft noted that the L.O.D.A. should be considered being interested only in tourism. He noted that it also promoted industry and urged that Hastings must continue to "sell itself" if it was to compete for industry with other parts of the province.

Council named William Regan, reeve of Deloro, as director on the Highlands of Hastings Tourist Association.

COMMENDS WORK

The report of the Children's Aid Society given by committee chairman Reeve J. N. Brown, commended the protection work of the society noting that the number of children from the county in care had dropped from 113 in 1958 to 58 at the end of March this year.

At the same time, however, the per diem rate in the society could be expected to increase accordingly. In 1958 the per diem rate was $1.74 and it is now $2.41.

In 1962 the county budget for Children's Aid Society was $117,000 and considerable surplus was shown. Last year a budget of $105,000 was suggested and the actual expenditure was $83,677.

"But Children's Aid costs are something which you can't estimate closely," Mr. Brown said.

He said a few additional children in care could throw settlement out.

Total number of children in the care of the society at the end of March was given as 157.

REGULAR GRANTS TO FAIRS

The regular grants to the county fall fairs were voted by council while $250 was voted for the British Empire Cheese Show as is customary each year.

The spring session of council was the longest in several years taking a full four days and ending only a few minutes before 6 o'clock Friday evening.

During the session council set the 1963 county tax rate and approved assessment equalization for 1963.

Council approved a gratuity of $500 to Mrs. Erie Denyes, wife of the late Erie Denyes, former county-clerk treasurer, and the establishment of a room bank for fighting of gasoline fires.

Approval for hiring one full time jail guard and one casual guard was given to allow setting up of a 40-hour week for jail employees.

The salaries of the county home superintendent and matron were increased to bring them more in line with those in other counties, and by-laws were passed setting out final distribution of costs for the new county building and making the county a member of the Quinte Area Emergency Measures Organization.

Transplants Offered in Large Quantity

Proceedings were slow on the local market this morning, although there was a wide range of berry and flower plants for sale.

Strawberry plants were being offered for 50c with 25 plants in a bunch, $3 per hundred and $20 per thousand.

RAsspberry plants were selling at 10c apiece, or $1.20 per dozen.

A large variety of flowers were being offered, petunias, pansy, aster and snapdragon plants selling at 40c per box per dozen.

Fresh aspargus sold for 30c a bunch.

Apples were selling or $2 and up a bushel and 70c per basket.

Onion and cabbage plants also sold for 40c per box.

Eggs were down slightly from last week, 45c, 40c and 35c per dozen for large, medium and small sizes.

There was no maple syrup offered on the market this morning, a sign that the maple syrup season has apparently come to a close for another year.

Cannifton Family of Five Forced From Home Because Of Gasoline Leak in Area

A gasoline leak which has forced a Cannifton family of five from their home because of potential fire hazard, is still posing a problem for investigators even, after weeks of investigation.

For the past three weeks, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Woodcox of Cannifton have been living at the Queen's Hotel and despite the effort of investigators to locate the source of the trouble gasoline fumes are still heavy in the home and an oil slick covers water in the basement.

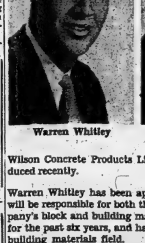
The gasoline fumes were first noticed in the Woodcox home during January. They are tenants of the property and have lived in the house since last fall.

The Woodcox house is across a public roadway from Crook's B.A. service station and first thoughts were that the gasoline might be coming from a storage tank on the service station property.

NOT LOSING GALLONAGE

Mr. Crook however claimed he was not losing any gallonage from his service station tanks but the British American Oil Company in the interest of safety had also good public relations, advised that the Woodcox family vacate their home until the trouble was cleared up. Mr. Woodcox said the oil company was paying the bill for the family at the hotel.

Gasoline seeps some three feet into the rock on the Woodcox property has resulted in gasoline working its way through the rock strata. The gasoline was said to be red tinged, indicating it was high test gasoline.



Mr. Woodcox said special dye was to be placed in the service station tanks to determine positively whether this was the source of the leakage.

Another possibility being considered is that the gasoline may be coming from the big oil tank from more than a mile away northeast of Cannifton.

Many-Sided Move

The Canadian dollar's value has been dropped to 92½ cents in terms of U.S. funds and will be pegged at that rate.

"Obviously" says The Canadian Press in an interpretative article, "the reactions to Mr. Fleming's surprise move are mixed."

Obviously—it depends on whether one's or is gored, or "chored," or ignored.

Ignored—in other words not directly affected by the change in the exchange rate—will be those Canadian industries which use Canadian materials to make products sold exclusively on the Canadian market, and which do not have to compete with imports.

"Chored" or fed will be those industries which sell goods of Canadian origin abroad. "Dollar devaluation makes the Canadian dollar return of exports sold on world markets world prices—generally U.S. dollars," says The Canadian Press. This is true but another way of saying the same thing is that it will permit Canadian industries to sell goods abroad for less, in terms of Canadian dollars. Almost certainly this was one of the main reasons behind the move—it's an effort to make our goods produced in what is generally referred to as a high-price economy, competitive on the world market. Thus the move should stimulate our economy and tend to increase our standard of living.

If this were the only side to the coin, every country would be eager to devalue its currency. Indeed, in a world without monetary agreements, a ruinous competition of this nature could occur. That is why the International Monetary Fund exists—and it is interesting to note that the fluctuating rate of exchange for the first time in nearly 13 years, Canada has brought its policy in line with that of the Fund. Whether the members of the Fund will view with approval the level at which this stabilization has occurred is a different question.

As we have intimated, there are disadvantages to Canadians, as well as advantages, from the devaluation of the dollar.

The gored ox is represented by businesses which depend upon the import of foreign goods or, to a lesser extent perhaps, those Canadian industries which must import their raw materials, or part of them, from abroad. These imports are going to cost more money, and the influence of the devaluation here will be to lower our standard of living.

With these diametrically opposed effects, the layman can hardly do more than listen to the opinions of the experts and decide to wait and see what the net result is before making up his mind whether he is pleased or annoyed about the change.

Two Viewpoints

The Soviet Ambassador to Canada, Amassap Aroutunian, told the Montreal Kiwanis Club Thursday that Russia had proven that the U.S. could detect underground nuclear tests at a distance. Russia herself possessed this ability, he said. As an experiment, a few weeks ago, the Russians made an underground nuclear test. A few hours later the U.S. announced the test had taken place.

Aroutunian interpreted this as proof that the insistence of the U.S. on inspections as a part of any agreement to ban nuclear tests was not aimed at verification of tests but at the creation of an espionage network.

Aroutunian is probably sincere in his belief. What we have here is an interesting, but dangerous, example of two nations with blind spots. Aroutunian and his fellow Russians cannot grasp the fact that the U.S. might fear the Russians would be able to devise some method of testing without permitting detection by instruments—and that, even more important, the Americans want to be sure that the Russians do not make preparations to break any test ban. Such preparations, obviously, could not be detected by instruments, but only by on-the-spot inspections. The Americans, for their part, cannot understand the value which the Russians put on secrecy, cannot grasp the Russian obsession about espionage (an obsession which would appear obvious to any who studied the amount of money and men which the Russians devote to espionage). As far as the Americans are concerned, the only reason they can see for the Russians desiring to keep secrets must be a Russian desire to break a treaty. One might almost say that the Americans were obsessed with revelation, the Russians with concealment.

The deadlock would be laughable, were it not so serious a threat to the peace of the world.

Agree Outcome of Voting To Be Decided in Ontario

BY RICHARD JACKSON
(From The Ontario Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau)

OTTAWA — If there is any one thing certain about this general election it is that it will be won and lost here in the nation's Ontario heartland.

The Liberal strategists differ sharply as to who will be doing what and by how much . . . but both camps agree that whatever the outcome it will be determined here.

To give the political clue an opening roll his way, Prime Minister Duplessis today was making his initial campaign play in London.

Geographically, the formal opening of a campaign that began back last October with 125 parties, the Prime Ministers' chose what he obviously considered the key centre, politically, of this pivotal province.

Wisely, he passed up Toronto, the Metro "Big Town" which stands apart as a monstrous megalopolis from the rest of Ontario, and the rest of the country, too.

His picked London, a city apart from its size, little different in its interests and occupations from Toronto, and its people from the majority of other Ontario centres.

London, too, is obviously, a was typical of "Hometown Ontario," which leads the public political arch-rival, Liberal Leader Pearson, stand to make or break this election.

THE MAGIC NUMBER

Perhaps the Prime Minister felt, too, that London is a lucky city . . . lucky for him, because it was from there in 1949 the election that he marched the campaign that won those astounding 109 Tory seats in the house.

This time, the Conservatives are lowering their sights.

From 109 to 105 . . . that is the election four years ago, they were that first to cross the barrier from the dizzy peak of 208 seats there was no place to go but down.

The trick will be to take the downgraded Conservative party right against any possible runaway accidents.

Realists among the Conservatives are confident of holding firm . . . somewhere between 150 and 160 seats.

With the breaking points at 120 seats at the low end, and 145 at the high, they'll be would give them a comfortable 27 to 52 margin.

Even 150 seats, 17 over the political point-of-no-return, would do.

Oddly, the Liberals have set their sights on precisely the same target, 150 to 155 seats.

To do it, each party would have to do its best in Ontario, and each for a different reason.

While agreeing that they will stand or fall in this province, the two parties have eye to eye on a couple of other important points too.

OUT OF RUNNING

They are convinced that the New Democrats, off to a surprisingly good start since their formation last summer, have little or no chance to become a major gains in their first national test at the polls.

The two big parties are persuaded that if the NDP can come anywhere near duplicating the past election record of the now-dead CCF, it will be doing surprisingly well.

Best the CCF ever did was under the late J. S. Woodsworth, and the average over the several elections has been 13.

The CCF won 28 in 1945, wiped out in '49, can only go up, and that's major parties reckon that the margin-setting minority group make minor gains, likely in British Columbia and British Columbia.

So the election esentially is a straight, head-on battle.

Except for Newfoundland, the Conservatives have a few wide edge in the Maritimes. They swept the Atlantic provinces four years ago, and in the lampsighting since the Liberals have found the going extremely difficult.

The same situation holds west of the Lakehead, where Liberals going into the race with only one seat — Hazen Argue's in all the broad west of the Prairies and the Coat.

CENTRAL CANADA

And the Conservatives confidently claim the West will continue to keep them cozy.

This, then, leaves only Quebec and Ontario with any room for swing.

In Quebec, the Liberals expect — and the Conservatives are braced for — a shift. Last time out, the astounded Conservatives won 41 of Quebec's 76 seats, leaving only four to be equally astonished Liberals.

There is little doubt but that the Liberals don't make major gains in Quebec their election prospects are bleak.

But if they do score heavily in French Canada, they'll still have to pick up a lot of Ontario seats to put gains in the two provinces together to add up to anything approaching victory.

For the same reason — because they expect gains in Quebec — the Conservatives are keeping hold on to their near-monopoly of the Ontario seats.

In '49 they took 67 of Ontario's 83 seats, and if they can hold the majority of these, the losses in Quebec can be comfortably absorbed.

So Ontario is vital to both parties . . . and the Liberals to add to their Quebec seats . . . and to the Conservatives to consolidate their front in their Maritimes strength.

That was the way it was when it was . . . and if that's the way it is again, it could be a hair raising one.

Hometown Ontario then holds the real vote-of-decision.

Asks Destruct Destructed

Cedar Rapids Gazette

Only an unexpected letup in the Asia Minor earthquake looks like "finalism" are any good reason for not further embarrassing Turkey at another recent leak in the diplomatic of English purity: "Destruct."

Francis Garry Powers didn't have to go to all that pain and his failing U-2 over Russia, the story goes, because he couldn't reach the destruct switch, not the destruct switch, because he was little old D-fringer . . . no, but because the switch was unknown to Webster and also hard to find in a hurry, the destruct switch.

Such reckless talk as that will even needs no excuse when it takes the form of the law and maybe saves a few tenths of a second once in a while. But when the audience sounds as cheesy as this one, there is only one sensible thing to do. Destruct it.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

THE JOY OF SACRIFICE

"When the burnt offering began, the song of the Lord began with trumpets" (II Chronicles 29:27).

The picture is that of the Jewish people assembled in the temple for worship. When the burnt offering is offered up there is a marked response on the part of the people. There is not stand in gloomy silence as if they were doing a hard duty which they would not do if they could help it. When the burnt of jubilant music comes, when the song of the ministering priests rises up and with these the sound of trumpets, then the worshippers respond not in a perfunctory manner but with genuine delight. To use the words of an ancient saint, the heaven seal hope with joy, the soul is completely one with God. The act of sacrifice has culminated in a jubilant spirit. Sacrifice should always lead us to joy. It is sacrificing has our countenance, giving up something simply because we love God and our fellow men, because they are of some great need to be met, then God is ready with His rewards to pour them bountifully into our hearts.

The sacrifice is offered up. The song begins. The trumpets blast. This is a scene of joy. This is the mood into which sacrifice should lead us and into which it will lead us if we have made that are generous and kind.

Is Southpaw Ham the Best?

Watertown Times

Do you remember — or didn't you bother to notice — whether you had ham served at a right-handed ham for your evening meal? And, if you know or remember, do you know whether it was tender or tough?

All these questions are used in trying to point that some connoisseurs of food claim that dining on a left-handed or left-footed — ham is a delight to behold in good eating. In other words, they feel the southpaw side of a hog is more tender and has a better flavor.

The theory, as the story goes is that the hog favors its left side when standing and lies on it at night, causing loss of circulation, and consequent toughness. Of maybe it's the other way around.

Is there any way to confirm this theory? The gourmet will say that there is, but it is very difficult to find. But he or she strongly insists it is so, particularly when a dinner party guests that some inexpensive meat passes for just thought up a good merchandising gimmick. Left-sidedness meat buyer will tell you, cannot be determined personally about the left and right sides of the animal. The old meat man who had such a theory said it applied to both sides slightly and causing more tenderness.

But what happens when hogs or cattle are raised on the left hands? And are they tender, or are they both tough? There is little information to argue on the point. The explanation of a meat laboratory technician was the most logical. He says: "There's no such thing as being left and right handed."

Probably this question about hams will never be satisfactorily or conclusively answered. And it is a safe bet the next time you eat a right-, After all, what would they do with all the right-handed ones?

Started Tax, How It Grew!

Vancouver Province

A gentleman by the name of Loyal M. Graham of Portland, Oregon, who died recently at the ripe old age of 100, had borne during the latter years of his life the sobriquet of "The father of the gasoline tax."

In 1930 he introduced a bill in the Oregon legislature imposing a one cent tax a gallon on gasoline. No one seemed to object to the idea, he said because the tax was at first that many people.

Three years circumstances changed with a vengeance. By 1933 every province in Canada and every state in the Union had a gasoline tax.

"The rate went to three cents I got scared," Mr. Graham recalled. "Why, it reached five cents I knew it couldn't be stopped."

The present gas tax in most provinces and states represents almost one-fifth of the gasoline's retail price. In British Columbia the tax is now 13 cents.

No luxury, much less an alcoholic necessity, carries so heavy an excise tax as this.

Where is the breaking point?

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Issue No. 39 of the "Canadian Fish Culturalist", published in November last by the Federal Department of Fisheries, is a 42 page blue pamphlet of extraordinary interest and value to Canadian farmers and sportsmen alike. It is devoted to the subject of fish ponds in Canada, with important statistics with regard to the two million farm ponds revealed in the latest United States census, and their function not only as means of fire prevention on farms, irrigation and water storage for livestock, but their growing value as fish ponds for trout, bass, sunfish, crappies and catfish.

Astonishing figures are shown with respect to the production of fish in artificial farm ponds for the market. There is, for example, in the north-eastern states, a U.S. Trout Growers Association, formed in 1933, with 1,000 members, and a "Trout News."

The present estimate that Canadian farm ponds is 10,000, with indications that this number is rapidly increasing during the past five years. Mechanization of the farm has been a big incentive to the creation of ponds, for fire protection, but the increasing possibilities of recreation, and a tourist income, has now been added to the brood.

To Your Good Health

One Can Help Control One's Own Blood Pressure

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: My problem is high blood pressure, which is causing headaches and buzzing in the ear. I have been taking a pill, but with no improvement. I have a fluctuating pressure, and such things as coffee or a cigaret cause an immediate rise. Alcohol has the opposite effect for the time being.—K.

Controlling high blood pressure most decidedly is not dependent on a single factor, such as a pill. A complex approach is necessary if you are to get anywhere.

There are some matters in which the patient has to leave just about everything to the doctor; there are many others, like this, in which the doctor can't expect to accomplish much unless he can persuade the patient to do his part, day by day, hour by hour.

There are different causes of high blood pressure, and sometimes combinations of causes: kidney disease, disease of the arteries, excessive weight, general high living, and tension, to name the main ones.

In treatment, a variety of medications is now available, but one doesn't know whether should be tried. But that's just part of it.

Smoking should be reduced or eliminated; tea, coffee or other stimulants should be moderated, and if just a cup or so causes rise in pressure, then you should consider using only caffein-free drinks.

Excessive salt should be avoided.

Losing 10 or 15 pounds often is sufficient to bring marked improvement.

Restful sleep is essential, and mid-day naps or rest periods can be of great benefit, whether you realize — until you try them.

Common sense analysis of your own attitude toward life and your work is a priceless investment on your part. Learn to "look over your own shoulder" from time to time, and see whether you are wasting or spending too much nervous energy. Learn things that conserve it, forgetting to take time to relax. If so — change your habits. You can.

There are, to be sure, other possible factors at times. Faulty kidney action may be involved, but somewhat more elaborate studies are required for occasionally some such thing as a tumor which produces excess adrenalin may be involved. That, too, can be determined, and it is one of the methods we can bring on fluctuating pressures. It is rare, however.

I've outlined both the common and uncommon elements. But I've said nothing about drugs. I'm not diminish the importance of the simple, ordinary things a patient can do.

I'm not convinced that alcohol causes high blood pressure in itself, and many doctors permit patients to have modest amounts of it. If occasionally contributes to tensions, as may occur, then the limitation is second to factor, perhaps an important one. And that's that.

My major point: The patient can do a great deal, if he will start facts thoughtfully, to control his own blood pressure.

Dear Dr. Molner: The joints in my knees make a cracking noise. Exercises don't seem to help. — D.G.

The main reasons: Some decrease in the small amount of fluid normally present in the joint; thinning of the cartilages or changes in the ends of the bones, usually due to arthritic changes. No, exercising won't affect any of these factors.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

CHURCHES

There would be something lost from the American scene if churches didn't have its churches or church. "To be of no church is a danger," said Dr. Samuel Johnson.

I have a deep and inward love for all churches. I know they reshape and renew the lives of those who go to them and study them. They make every community richer. They are symbols of something unseen and worship sincerely within their walls.

Some years ago I moved my New York City office to a new building. I sought quarters on a floor from which one looked down upon a lovely Gothic cathedral. I considered myself a part of its overhead architecture and I loved the view early and late. I lease and took office space four stories higher. That is the right view look down and the left one sight — its beauty in the shape of a cross. It is a great space pointing heavenward!

Cathedrals inspire because words yet a church does not have, to be huge to attract the eye. They are symbols of the reverence of human souls that make any church great.

When approaching a village, or even the smallest village, the first landmarks one looked for are the church spires. They always hearten one. There is such a church and that church.

Nothing is so lovely as the white churches of New England. And that little church Henry Ford had restored for his "Greenfield Village" is worth going miles to see. Summers too, when in Nova Scotia, I always like to drop in at the cathedral that quaint old Convento's Church at Grand Pre. It is also a reminder of something we have entered that church, near Washington, where George Washington and Thomas Jefferson once worshipped.

The Great Creator has furnished His world with natural cathedrals — mountain cathedrals, whose spires, whether we know, forever point the handiwork and silently breathe their beauty all about.

A Lift For Living

Truth Serves to Inspire Man

By Dr. RALPH W. SOCKMAN

Some time ago a taxi driver confided to me that he was disgusted with election campaigns. He complained that candidates promise almost everything before election, and then do so little about their promises afterward. I saw his point, for have we not heard it said that political platforms are like the platform of railway coaches, that is, good to get in but not meant to ride on?

Yet, when I heard the driver saying that he did not know whether he would bother to vote and that he was keeping his mind open and neutral, I feared for the effectiveness of his protest. When a person does not trust anybody, he is likely to fall for some nobody. It is difficult if not impossible to keep our minds open and neutral.

Jesus pointed out that truth in His parable of the house that was swept clean of its evil spirits and then left empty, only to become filled with worse spirits than before. Evil cannot be cured by emptiness. Mere negative prohibitions are not enough. Mere denunciation of communism will not destroy its dangers. Mere censorship cannot shut doors effectively against the infiltrating of subversive doctrines. We must drive out error with truth.

We hear this said until now we accept it as a truism. But how feebly we give ourselves to the furtherance of truth! Compare our tepid interest in the spread of truth with the passionate devotion of a scientist!

Faraday Had Desire

Consider Michael Faraday, the mighty pioneer in the field of electricity. At 21 he was a book-binder's apprentice with no higher education and no money. But he had a desire to become an experimental physicist. A customer of his employer gave him four tickets to the lectures of Sir Humphry Davy at the Royal Institution. As a young Faraday listened to Davy, he was entranced. He took copious notes, transcribed them in his neat hand, bound them in four little volumes and sent them to Davy. The great lecturer was touched by Faraday's devotion and made him an assistant in his laboratory. Thus began a lifelong service to the cause of science which has immeasurably enriched the world.

When these minds of ours really give themselves to the pursuit of truth and become absorbed in it, they catch those flashes of genius that we call inspiration. Dr. Ross A. Baker, the distinguished chemist, some years ago made a study of what he called the "scientific hunch." This is something which perhaps all have experienced in our small way. Have we not thought and puzzled and perhaps prayed over some question or problem, and then, in some unexpected moment, maybe in the middle of the night, the solution flashed on us. Dr. Baker, after consulting more than 200 scientists, learned that over half of them had experienced these flashes.

The late James Francis Cook, Editor of "Etude," once asked Victor Herbert how he got his melodies. Herbert replied that they often came to him in the night and he woke up whistling or singing them. Handel, the composer of the noble "Messiah," said he put down only what he heard the angels singing.

Something Greater

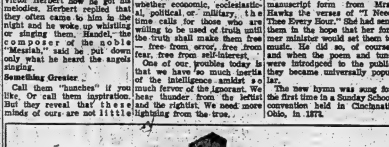
Call them "hunches" if you like. Or call them inspiration. But they reveal that there are minds of ours are not little nail-starting, machines grinding out of ideas. Our minds are more like the tubes in our radios. When the current is turned on, until those tubes get warmed up, they begin to catch waves from the ether. When our minds lose themselves to truth, and keep thinking, acting, seeking, knocking, they find something greater than themselves moving upon them.

Our minds are the instruments of God to catch the truths of God. Little men can use little truths for little purposes. But great men are used by great truths for great purposes. Was it not Felix Adler who thanked God for the great truths that had used him, when he gave ourselves to be used by truth, then we become forceful; we become creative; and we become inspired of God. And in a day when error confronts the world in threatening forms such as: communism, totalitarianism, the abuse of power, whether economic, ecclesiastical, political or military, the time calls for those who are willing to be used of truth until the truth shall make them free — free from error, free from fear, free from self-interest.

One of our troubles today is that we have so much inertia of the intelligence amidst so much fervor of the ignorant. We hear thunder from the leftist and the rightist. We need more lightning from the true.

Stories of Famous Hymns

I NEED THEE EVERY HOUR



I need Thee every hour,
Most gracious Lord;
No tender voice like Thine
Can peace afford.

I need Thee, O I need Thee,
Every hour I need Thee;
Bless me now, my Savior,
I come to Thee.

When the Rev Robert Lowry, Baptist minister and composer, was serving one of his first pastorates in Brooklyn, New York, he discovered that one of his first parishioners, Mrs. Annie Sherwood Hawks, had unusual poetic ability. He helped her with her writings and encouraged her to use her talents for the church.

Years later, in a distant city where he was preaching and teaching, Mr. Lowry was delighted one day to receive in manuscript form from Mrs. Hawks the verses of "I Need Thee Every Hour." She had sent them in the hope that her former minister would set them to music. He did so, of course, and when the poem and tune were introduced to the public they became universally popular.

The new hymn was sung for the first time in a Sunday School convention held in Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1872.

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Mr. and Mrs. Oswald D. Lewis announce the engagement of their youngest daughter, Joan, to James Gerrard Hemslo, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hemslo. Marriage to take place June 2nd, at 2 o'clock in Bridge Street United Church, Belleville.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

MAIL CALL

Question: If a bride wears a long, white wedding gown, and the groom wears a tuxedo at an early evening wedding, is it correct for the women in the wedding party to wear long, formal gowns? Also, if guests have to remain overnight at a hotel, who pays the bill? — Mrs. A.G., Clifton, N.J.

Answer: Attire for women in the wedding party should conform with the bride's. If she wears an ankle-length gown, the attendants and both mothers should do the same. As far as accompanying gifts are concerned, the bride's parents pay any such expenses for out-of-town attendants and for very special guests who are specifically asked to stay over.

Question: My uncle, a blood relation, died about three years ago. His wife recently remarried. How should I now address my aunt? May I still call her Auntie, even though she now has a new husband? — J.S., Chicago, Ill.

Answer: She may no longer be your aunt legally, but obviously she hasn't changed her emotional relationship with her late husband's family. Since you've always called her Auntie, there's no reason why you shouldn't continue to do unless, of course, she indicates she'd prefer a change of address.

Question: Who should sit next to my husband at a dinner party at which the guests are to be my parents and my aunt and uncle. Is there a general rule for seating when parents are present? Mrs. T.T., Morristown, N.J.

Answer: There's no general rule for seating parents, other than to pay deference to their years and their status in the family. At a small party such as you plan, your parents naturally would be seated in the honor places. This means that your father would be seated to your right and your mother to the right of your husband. Your uncle would be seated to the left and your aunt to your husband's left.

Mr., Mrs. Arnold Forestell Mark 45th Anniversary

On Wednesday, April 18th, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Forestell, 23 Brown Street, Belleville, observed their 45th wedding anniversary.

Members of their family, Mr. and Mrs. Don Forestell, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Forestell, Mr. and Mrs. Kil Ward and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Forestell, as well as Mrs. Forestell's brother, Mr. Frank McGillen, of Revelstoke, B.C., gathered at their home for a surprise party. Another daughter, Sr. Mary Madeleine was unable to attend.

The evening was spent in playing euchre.

Mr. and Mrs. Forestell were given guest seats and, on behalf of the family, Mrs. Gerald Forestell presented them with a purse of money. Mr. and Mrs. Forestell expressed their appreciation for the surprise party as well as the gift.

All joined in singing, "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows".

The evening was concluded by a delicious lunch including a pink and white decorated anniversary cake.

Japanese Cuisine Features Exotic, Unusual Delicacies

By SHIRLEY and BOB SLOANE

Tokyo — As the cross-oriented Easterners and Occidentals of days, it's only four hours between Tokyo and Hong Kong. Gastronomically, however, they're almost as far apart as Marco Polo's day, in spite of the fact that Chinese restaurants are all the rage in Tokyo.

If you had to draw a line between the two culinary philosophies, it would follow a course between eating for eating's sake, (Chinese) and dining as a function of the senses and of society (Japanese). (The Japanese, for example, not only tolerate drumbeaters, but virtually consider it in good taste at a party, a sign of having a good time, if the drummer can't keep time from the Arab concept of a busy sounding like chimes of good cheer.)

So devoted is Japanese cooking to the gratification of the eye, nose, touch and even ear (what crackles better than a crisp rice aut!) that its taste has often been described as the worst in the world. It has been described as the best, pegging the description as either socially drunk or as sensitive to colourful, texture and sound as he is to taste.

TASTELESS RESTAURANT

The Tsuruya Restaurant in Kyoto is a tasteless wooden structure with adroit screens surrounding a lagoon where goldfish carp play, and the waitresses are doll-like Maikos, the exquisitely groomed apprentice Geishas whose training begins on the sixth day of the sixth month of their sixth year. Their impossible hairdos are decked with tortoise, their faces masked with rice powder, and the prices of their unique combination of presentation and entertainment is as high as ¥8,500 an hour.

The place settings are graced with a linen napkin artfully twisted into the shape of a chrysanthemum, the floating symbol of good fortune. There is a tiny dickie, basket of baked rice dough filled with green ginkgo nuts, strips of salmon, and two wrapped in seaweed.

It is a Japanese garden of food in meticulously assorted miniatures, of color, form and texture. The corpus that follows is zero, the duck — are slightly more conventional, but unrecognizable conventionally drowned in a sea of saki, and a euphoria of dancing girls and samisen music.

In Tokyo the Ginban Restaurant is as devoted to food alone as the Japanese can get. Tucked away in the neon maze that is Tokyo by night it is a discreet assortment of screened sizable rooms where little, if any, English is spoken, and the clientele is all Japanese. The specialty is Batu Yaki — broiled in butter. Thin slices with Matzamka beef, the Black Angus of the archipelago, with butter and sauce managed — really — to make them heavy and well proportioned.

The meat is so tender that the little fillets are broiled only a few seconds on each side. They are garnished with onions, pine mushrooms (grown in the shade of pine trees and redolent of pine) and chrysanthemum greens, about which — so — we are not kidding. Lightly basted in butter, they are an extraordinarily agreeable addition to the meal.

PREPARED AT TABLE

Everything, of course, is prepared and served at the table by giggling, kimonoed girls, Unlike European and most other cooking, you are again afforded a pleasing association of colors, forms and textures — the bright red lobster, white onion slices, the dainty bits, mushrooms and the striking chrysanthemum sprigs.

Next to sukiyaki and its variations, the most popular of Japanese foods is tempura, which seems about as unJapanese as its name (believed to have been borrowed from Portuguese traders centuries ago). It's fish — all kinds, but mostly shellfish — deep fried in batter. It is the better places (it's done before your eyes and you pay per piece, an equable test of whether the eyes are bigger than the stomach.

Perhaps the most typical of everyday Japanese dishes is sushi. It is served at snack bars and in bar lunches on the railroads and airlines, and occupies a position somewhere between the mundanity of the sandwich and the semi-glamour of pizza.

Sushi is a caked strip of cold boiled rice covered with a delicacy that makes it look like a large canape. Usually the delicacy is seaweed — a great staple of everyday Japanese diet — or fish. When you balk at the idea, the Japanese remind you that westerners admire oysters, and when you get right down to it there isn't a great deal of difference between raw octopus and raw oyster.

Sushi is donned in dry seaweed, the inevitable seasoning of nearly all Japanese food. Like most Japanese cuisine, it is an acquired taste, leaving most visitors about where they came in — either they think Japanese food is the best in the world or the worst.

FLAMEY TOPS

MONTREBAL (CP) — The plainer the woman, the more exaggerated her hair style should be, says New York coiffeur Leon Ainsedola. "It can be mad and she can get away with it," he told fashion reporters here. "It's a distraction, and something that will create interest."

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Lottie H. — I've told Margo that Grandma is having a loud sleep.

Nora C. — She should tell Margo the truth, that Grandma is dead.

Lottie H. — Our little daughter is only 6 and I can't come right out with it and tell her, that Margo's father is my mother, will never play with her again. Grandma was one of the victims of a recent accident. My sister and I are just about coming out of the numbness and the date of the shock. And now you disagree about how to behave in front of Margo, what to say to her.

My husband has handled matters beautifully up to now. We agreed that Margo should be told her grandmother was very tired, and God granted her a long, long rest. That satisfied her. But Nora has done a lot of reading and says a child should be told the truth, even about death.

Nora C. — Margo is a bright child. She'll have to learn sometime not to catch on that something terrible has happened to Grandma. She misses Grandma and me breaking into tears every time we mention our mother's name. She hears us change into whispers as about Mother when we come across a piece of embroidery she made, or a postcard she sent us.

I don't want to butt in. I won't tell Margo the truth. But I think Lottie and Ned should. I can't go on play-acting wherever I'm at their home, keeping up the fairy tale that Grandma will be back when she's not tired any more!

Surely there must be a way to get the idea across to Margo, without upsetting her, that sad things happen and must be accepted.

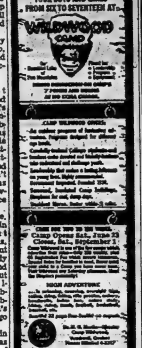
The Council: The fact that Margo has continued bright and smiling doesn't mean that she's satisfied with Lottie's explanation of Grandma being a bit tired. Margo may be bursting with questions, thoughts and fears which she can't or doesn't dare put into words. Nora has the imagination and the know-how to read Margo's silence correctly.

Raise the subject again Lottie. As Dorothy K. Whyte says in "Teaching Your Child Faith" from Wrong's: "Without words, fears cannot be talked about and you may be unwittingly withholding needed comfort and courage by your silence about death, however well-intentioned." As with other subjects where fancy-talk is substituted for facts, your child's trust in you is at stake. Margo trusts you to set her straight.

Death is not hard to explain in a child's terms. Margo has seen death and the decay of physical remains. She has seen rose petals fall, dry and turn to dust. She has seen fruit wither on a vine. And she may have come across a dead bird, a lost pet. So it is best to explain that the end of one part of life is called death. Grandma is not resting, sleeping or "away." Her earthly life is ended. She is in Heaven, if you wish to put it that way for Margo.

Any other explanation may have difficult consequences. We had to be assured Grandma couldn't feel anything ever any more.

On the positive side, Margo can be told that Grandma is alive in the hearts, minds and memories of those close to her. They'll feel her presence and her influence forever. She can be reassured, too, about Mother. She had to be assured Grandma couldn't feel anything ever, ever more.



Surely there must be a way to get the idea across to Margo, without upsetting her, that sad things happen and must be accepted.

40 Business Women on Trip to Rome

ROME (CP)—A delegation of 40 business women from Montreal are in Rome on a trip to meet and exchange views with business women here.

The women, members of the women's section of the Montreal District Chamber of Commerce, are led by Mrs. Anne Ballestrazzi, president of the group since it was founded in 1956. Mrs. Ballestrazzi has taken an active part in helping French - speaking immigrants adjust to Canada and was elected to the executive of the Travellers Aid Society.

Since their arrival early this week, the 40 women have been visiting shops, studios and restaurants run by women, exchanging ideas and comparing managing techniques and working conditions.

The group plans to visit the cities of Assisi, Florence and Milan while in Italy, then tour France before returning to Montreal.

HARD WORK

MONTREBAL (CP) — Alice Girard, dean of the new faculty of nursing at the University of Montreal, admits that some girls become nurses with the idea of marrying a doctor.

"But if that's their only reason they don't stay very long," she said. "The work is too hard."

ALBERT TIPTON MARY NORRIS

'Music for Tonight' Ensemble To Appear at BCI on Tuesday

"Music for Tonight", a weld-ing of the finest instrumentalists from top orchestras including a dynamic and imaginative flutist, a virtuoso piano soloist and a rich repertoire spanning the last four centuries of musical literature is being brought to Belleville by the Community Concerts Association and will appear at the Collegiate auditorium on Tuesday evening, May 8, at 8.30 p.m.

The ensemble, presented by Albert Tipton, consists of 14 strings, oboe and English horn, with Albert Tipton, flutist as conductor, and Mary Norris, as piano soloist.

The founding of his excellent group was the brain child of Albert Tipton, internationally-renowned flutist and conductor. He believed that the informal evenings of stimulating music-making with his friends should be given public hearing. He gathered from top orchestra the finest players. His piano soloist Mary Norris (in private life Mrs. Tipton) has been called a "pianist of virtuoso stature". Their debut in St. Louis four years ago met with wide acclaim.

Readers' Saturday Column

by Mary Moore

QUESTION:

This is the first time I have written to you although I read your column daily and many of your recipes are included in my armamentarium. We all enjoy, also, hearing of your family. This is another sunny spring day, and because I have had such success with freezing "pines" thought you might like to know of my method. It is so simple! I purchase female "pines" — slice each thick about 1" slice — peel and cut out the eyes. Then I quarter each slice, leaving in the core. Put them through the fine blade of my food chopper. Transfer to quart size plastic freezer containers and freeze. It keeps beautifully, and we find it needs less sugar. My husband's favorite pie is pineapple — made like apple. So I thaw the fruit, drain some of the juice off, sweeten the remainder, add about 1 tablespoon flour and bake with two crusts. So many recipes for freezing fruit suggest using sugar, but for years I have frozen strawberries, raspberries and pineapples with no sugar, quite successfully. This morning we had pour pancake recipe for breakfast. All reported they were delicious! The boys had the remaining ones spread with jam for lunch. I shall continue to read and "eat"; your column — Frances S.

ANSWER:

Thank you for a good simple suggestion. I have mailed to you the original release for Chicken Equimalt which gives two methods of preparing it in casseroles.

Try these.

SOUR CREAM COOKIES:

¼ cup butter, 1½ cups sugar, 2 eggs, 2½ cups sifted flour, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon baking soda, 1 cup sour cream, 1 teaspoon nutmeg.

Cream the butter with the sugar. Add the well-beaten eggs. Beat mixture until light. Sift flour with salt and baking soda. Add to the creamed mixture alternately with sour cream. Mix well; add nutmeg. Drop by tablespoonfuls onto greased baking sheet several inches apart. Put a large seeded raisin in centre of each. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. for 12-16 minutes. Makes 2 dozen.

BIG PORTION

Women's handbags account for about 37 per cent of the total trade of Canadian leather industries.

QUESTION:

Chicken Equimalt is indeed a hit. My problem is that I would like to bake it in a casserole. Could you give me some suggestions as to how long this might require? . . . My second problem is that all my cookies feel the same! No matter what kind they are — chocolate chip cookies, etc., within a couple of hours of taking them out of the oven they are all hard as rocks . . . Now after asking for help, perhaps I can offer a little. One of the big successes in our house is a meat pie, made with pastry over the top, and the contents are cold roast beef (especially the cheaper and tougher or less successful roasts that we all end up with occasionally) put through the meat grinder with a small onion, and mixed with a can of beef gravy and poured into a casserole; top with pastry and bake — V. R. M.

Modifications Lean Toward More Open Fishing But in Some Areas Cost Higher

By FRED CHAPP
Canadian Press Staff Writer

For anglers who hate to slow away their year when the leaves start to fall, the place to live is British Columbia or Alberta.

In those two provinces, there's practically no limit to year-round enjoyment. And the fish and game departments are showing no disposition this year to change things.

In fact, a Cross-Canada survey by The Canadian Press shows, there aren't many changes in the 1962 angling regulations for any of the provinces. The few modifications lean generally toward more open fishing, although in Nova Scotia there's a compensating bite—as the fisherman's pocketbook.

With the exception of rivers and streams, British Columbia sport fishermen can dip their hooks any time of the year and keep what they catch. Parts of the creeks are closed during spawning runs as a conservation measure, and when they're open the limit is 12 a day.

ONE HONOUR STRETCH

B.C. is blessed with a big line of quality fish—several species of salmon, grayling, and rainbow, cutthroat, dolly varden and eastern brook trout.

There's a limit on steelhead—another name for sea-run rainbow trout—of 40 a year, but as a spokesman said: "Of course, this is on the honor system."

Alberta has creel limits but no size limit. The only restriction on fishing waters is that certain streams draining the mountains are closed on alternate years for "resting" periods.

Ontario did little juggling for 1962 except to advance the opening date for muskies in the St. Lawrence River east of the Robert H. Saunders hydro dam to May 12 from the end of June.

The move was taken to correspond with Quebec practice in boundary waters and did not meet unanimous approval from sportsmen in either province. Some claim early fishing is too hard on the muskies since they're still on the spawning beds.

Dr. Douglas Clarke, Ontario's fish and wildlife chief, says there's been no evidence of that but if any sign does appear that the muskie population is being hurt, the season will be shifted back again.

CHARGE FOR RESIDENTS

Ontario has retained its summer-only season for trout, bass and muskies but with the exception of short protective periods, the fisherman can go at it all winter through the ice in search of lake trout, pike and walleye. On heavily fished Lake Simcoe, 30 miles north of Toronto, it's a safe bet that more lake trout end up flopping on the ice than are pulled into boats in the summer.

The price of fishing went up, in a limited way, in Nova Scotia when the government got into the controversial field of resident licensing. Legislation authorized a $2 licence for residents over the age of 16, but Lands and Forests Minister E. D. Haliburton says it will apply at the outset only to a limited number of streams designated as trout or salmon waters where stocking has taken place.

For early risers, however, there's one break—they can start casting their lines over salmon water at 3 a.m. standard time instead of 6 a.m.

Nova Scotia sticks to a summer season of four or five months for its petted trout and Atlantic salmon, as do Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick and Quebec.

Like B.C., however, they leave the deep-sea fisherman to frolic throughout the winter if he wants to.

WATCH FOR TUNA

Nova Scotia and New Brunswick have some rivers that draw a good run of the big and sporty striped bass. Newfoundland, of course, will be waiting anxiously to see whether the tuna return in the size and numbers that made Conception Bay the Atlantic seaboard's best fishing hole last year.

Quebec will allow fishermen to take sea trout from Antigonish Island salmon rivers until Oct. 15 instead of Sept. 30 as in former years, a move designed to cut down the damage hungry trout cause to salmon roe and fry as they head upstream.

Quebec also is giving a little more leeway to underwater fishermen. Frogmen, limited last year to a few lakes in Montfort Provincial and de la Verendrye parks, have some more parks opened to them as well as part of the St. Lawrence River. They can't use pressure tanks, however, except in the St. Lawrence.

Manitoba generally permits year-round fishing except for a shutdown of a few weeks in April or May, depending on the species. Fall-spawning brook trout also are protected Sept. 15-Oct. 15.

Saskatchewan clears the decks May 5 for everything except bass, which don't open until July 20.

Quebec Defines 'Meal' Served With Drinks

QUEBEC (CP)—A provision specifying "at the definition of meals that must be eaten with a drink in Quebec province on Sundays passed the committee stage in the legislative assembly Thursday night over the protests of the four independent members and the disgruntled osteries of restaurant operators.

The amendment is contained in a series being made to the year-old liquor law, which were approved in principle Thursday, and says each course of the three-course meal "shall include the quantity of food usually served at a complete meal."

Opposition Leader Daniel Johnson, pinned down by Attorney - General Georges Lapalme, said he felt the amendment would create as many problems as before in defining what makes up a three-course meal.

The amendment was suggested after courts had ruled that a three-course meal could be a glass of juice, a plate of bologna and cheese, Lapalme said the law kinds stronger or kinds altogether.

Thompson Tags Social Credit Free Enterprise

QUEBEC (CP) — National Leader Robert Thompson Friday claimed Social Credit as the party of free enterprise and said its policies will offer an alternative to a drift into socialism.

"Our platform is going to be the strongest free enterprise platform of any party," Mr. Thompson told a press conference.

Details will be released here Sunday when the party officially opens its campaign to elect a government June 18.

A caucus of Quebec's Social Credit candidates will be held here today and another is planned for Vancouver Tuesday. From Vancouver, party leaders will move east, holding a rider meeting in each province.

Mr. Thompson said details of the party's labor plank will be disclosed Monday in Montreal and Hamilton, where he will speak, and in Vancouver by Deputy Leader Real Caouette.

The social credit's health program would be outlined next Tuesday in Saskatchewan.

The national leader said a Social Credit government's first steps would be to "stop government debt and to decrease in taxes." Corporation and personal taxes would be lowered to allow more money to go into private investment.

The party also would establish a municipal development bank to loan money at minimum interest rates. Mr. Thompson said this would cut the cost of public projects such as hospitals and schools by 40 per cent.

WOULD REFORM SENATE

Senate and judicial reform were also on the party platform. Both should be taken out of the field of political patronage.

Social Credit would refuse any clear weapons for Canada because it felt the nuclear club should be kept small and Canada inevitably would lose some autonomy by accepting weapons it couldn't afford. But a Social Credit government might accept nuclear arms under the control of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Welfare benefits on the program would include "an adequate old-age pension" and a non - compulsory health insurance plan.

The farm program was based on "parity, not charity." For farmers, the party would institute "a fair price for exports but allow agriculture at home to find its own level.

A press release handed out as he spoke sketched other points in the party program as a labor code, adoption of a "distinctive" national flag and anthem, voting age set at 18, Canadian membership in the Organization of American States and establishment of Canadian sovereignty by returning the British North America Act to Canada as the constitution.

Pearson Ends Initial Drive Through West

By ARCH MacKENZIE

REGINA, Man. (CP) — An initial election campaign push through the four western provinces, which failed to return the Liberals to power in 1957, was completed Friday night by Prime Minister Pearson.

He turned today toward Ontario's seats, regarded as key factors in the June 18 election with a night address scheduled at Sault Ste. Marie and then two days of stumping through his own riding of Algoma East.

Friday was a day of motorcavalcades, coffee and doughnuts, handshakes, brief speeches and—at rural Beausejour — a triumphant exit from a parish hall on the shoulders of four brawny supporters.

It started in Winnipeg with a cavalcade formed to escort Mr. Pearson to Steinbach, 35 miles southeast. It ended 230 miles later back in Winnipeg, after addressing an overflow meeting of more than 700 in Selkirk 22 miles north of the Manitoba capital.

Mr. Pearson was in good voice before receptive audiences, mixing folksy anecdotes with his campaign theme that his government's record necessitates a change.

GOVERNMENT SPLITTER

Provincial Leader Gil Molgat joined him on arrival at Winnipeg International Airport aboard the aircraft. At Steinbach, Mr. Pearson's adult audience of about 250 in a high school auditorium was swollen by more than 100 children staying after school to listen.

He reduced his election pitch to terms simple enough for the youngsters' benefit, sketching in the general issues.

At Beausejour, 43 miles along the way, he attended another meeting, drawing about 200 in a small hall. The crowd enlivened proceedings with shouts and foot stamping.

It had been a great day "waving at people, people who are my political friends and some who are not my political friends," said Mr. Pearson.

"You can't afford to take a chance," he added.

He referred to his early days in politics after external affairs service and the admonition given him once when he continued to tell people as instructed.

"I've been told: 'You can stop now. You're out of your constituency.'"

No Atomic Arms For Canada NDP Position

WINNIPEG (CP) — A five-point agricultural program and a variety of health and welfare measures were outlined by T. C. Douglas in a 10-day election campaign swing through the Prairies. He carries his message today to the industrial heart of Canada today.

The federal leader of the New Democratic Party also contended that nuclear arms will become the main issue of the June 18 federal election campaign. The NDP's position: No nuclear arms for Canada.

Mr. Douglas's campaign took him to small farming centres in all three Prairie provinces and to many of the large cities. His contention was that the farmer is not getting his fair share of the national income with big business increasing its profits by "feeding the farmers."

Mr. Douglas, who as CCF premier of Saskatchewan from 1944 to 1961 headed Canada's only socialist government, argued throughout his tour that there is a vital need in Canada for a planned democratic society. He often cited Sweden as a country, with less than a third of Canada's population and a tenth of her resources, which had moved ahead under a Democratic Socialist government with a planned economic program.

SEES LOGICAL UNION

He said that if the farmers hope to see strong agricultural legislation implemented they will have to find an ally and the union of farmers and labor in the New Democratic Party through whatever form they may have similar economic needs.

The agricultural platform Mr. Douglas outlined called for producer - appointed marketing agencies; guaranteed prices for farm goods with government subsidies, if needed; federal loans to marketing boards; federal assistance to co-operatives to help small farm production costs and extension of individual credit, based on a farmer's potential rather than his collateral.

Domestic consumption of agriculture products could be increased by a food-stamp program and a school hot-lunch plan. The food-stamp program would ensure an adequate diet to all Canadians. At least 2,000,000 persons, senior citizens, unemployed and part-time workers now hadn't an adequate diet.

PROPOSES HEALTH PLAN

A national health care program, with the federal government paying 50 per cent of the cost and the provinces 40, would be implemented by the NDP if it formed the next government.

Other welfare measures included an old age pension of $75 a month, tied to the cost of living, free drugs, agricultural products for the cost of living food, a portable pension program would be initiated, with pensions amounting to two-thirds of a person's wage, averaged over the 10 best consecutive earning years.

Mr. Douglas said the NDP is against nuclear weapons in Canada and believes Canada should take the lead among the middle powers in initiating action that would result in final disarmament by countries now holding such weapons.

He said in Alberta:

"I couldn't create enough hot air to keep the entire arena warm."

B.G.H. to Hold Hospital Day

Career opportunities in the modern hospital field will be the theme at the annual "Hospital Day" program to be held at the Belleville General Hospital, Education Hall, Saturday, May 12th.

The hospital is repeating the successful career program of last year, at which booths and displays are set up illustrating the many hospital careers available.

The program will be held from 2.30 to 4.30 Saturday afternoon. A social light refreshments will be served.

MANY HOSPITAL CAREERS

There are many career and job possibilities to be found in a modern hospital setting. These include opportunity to serve as a doctor, a nurse—registered nurse or certified nursing assistant—dietitian, occupational therapist, physiotherapist, pharmacist, social worker, laboratory technologist, medical record librarian, X-ray technician, cardiology technician, and medical physicist.

Members of each profession will be on hand to explain the various careers available and to distribute pamphlets describing each. Specialists in the various authorities point out the ever-increasing needs in Canada for a planned democratic society. We often cited Sweden as a country, with less than a third of Canada's population and a tenth of her resources, which had moved ahead under a Democratic Socialist government with a planned economic program.

'Hometown Ontario' Folk Gather to Hear P.M. Open Campaign for Re-election

LONDON — This is the capital of "Hometown Ontario" — "friendly and pleasant" and prosperous plenty. It has some of the finest, farthest farms in the province, and hives of industry that make it look more like the map of American neighbors of Michigan and Ohio than a tiny corner of Canada.

It may be small in size, a little fringe of rich farmland wedged between Lake Erie and Huron. But it's big in political influence, sending 12 MPs to the Commons, more than come from any other of the Western or Maritime provinces. It is in Ontario, most of the experts have been insisting — and the two major parties more or less agreeing — that the men will be separated from the boys, politically, come election day.

There are more votes and more seats in "Hometown" as distinct from the Toronto-Hamilton-Ottawa, "Metro" in Ontario. Some also in Canada.

They subtract the population of "Metro" — 17 in Toronto alone in the national census — and the Hamilton - Ottawa - Toronto total 25 and you have 60 in "Hometown," more than one third of those in the seats are within a radius of 50 miles of this capital of "Hometown Ontario". And so it is here that Prime Minister Diefenbaker comes today for the formal opening of this campaign and the setting of the party's pitch and pace in the days between now and June 18.

CONFIDENCE OR NOT

London and the rest of "Hometown Ontario" will mustan audience of between 5,000 and 6,000 to hear what he has to say about prospects, plans and promises for the next five years.

Fifty buses are coming in from Brantford on the east, Bruce to the North, Windsor on the West and "Hometown" corners in between.

Four years ago the conservatives won 22 of these 23 seats. The optimists among them say that the Prime Minister comes here to take out some campaign insurance on those 22 seats.

The really starry-eyed even insist that with his help they might even capture the one missing seat, but this is strange, for that particular constituency is the private province of "Coon" Dan Martin, that personable political machine that walks like a man.

FIVE MONTHFUL

The more practical among the partisans whisper that in their election book, the Prime Minister comes here hoping to tie down five constituencies that just possibly could stray from the Conservative fold.

Even the Liberals in the frankest moments are likely to confess that 17 of the 23 ridings are beyond their reach. But they can count on Paul Martin's Essex East, just like monday in the East, or more practically, ballots in the box, and they have some hopes of snatching Essex - Kent, Lambton-West, Lambton-Kent, Brantford and Waterloo South.

So this is the day conservatives in "Hometown" say it isn't so.

They're making a great occasion of it. As is only right and fitting in "Hometown" they're giving it a warm, folksy touch. A general come-one-come-all invitation has been issued in advertisements in all the daily and weekly papers reading: "You and yours are cordially invited to spend an evening with John and Olive Diefenbaker on Saturday, May 5, at the London arena."

Ten thousand special invitations, cards displaying a map of the highway approaches to London, have been issued.

The housing problem for seat tickets have been selectively distributed, and the London Chamber of Commerce is at work on "in-the-aisles-capacity."

But this is something to plan, with the overflow and the conservative organizers hope it will run between 1,000 and 1,500, standing in the streets.

The "Hometown" this evening with John and Olive Diefenbaker, are Minister-Without-Portfolio Alvin Hamilton and Health Minister Monteith, the two members of the federal cabinet responsible for keeping conservative fences mended in this southwest corner of "Hometown Ontario".

They have some nifty touches for tonight's "grand rally" as the party calls it, like summer green lights and cans for the lobbyists, and a motorcade of matched Pontiac convertibles . . . about to billed as a 50 mile jaunt. The party for the PM at the London Press Club includes banners, bunting and all that jazz.

All the Ontario cabinet ministers and some of the candidates from every section of the province will be in the cavalcade — and so too will be Premier Robarts, who, the gossip has it, will announce and pledge his political troth with the Prime Minister for the campaign, just as Leslie Frost did four and five years ago.

Cepeda Blasts Giants To Tenth Win

Reds Trump Cards 3-2

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Sports Writer

"The Chinese calendar notwithstanding, this may be the Year of the Baby Bull."

The Chinese calendar, as many residents of San Francisco know, lists this as the year of the Tiger. But Orlando Cepeda, the Baby Bull of San Francisco Giants, may claim it for his own.

To the surprise of practically no one, but to the consternation of nine National League teams, the Baby Bull is on a rampage.

He drove in five runs on a homer, double, and single, Friday as the Giants blasted Chicago Cubs 11-6 for their 10th straight triumph.

It also marked the 24th consecutive the Giants had knocked out the opposition's starting pitcher.

They got the treatment from Jim O'Toole of Cincinnati Reds, who threw a five-hitter and held off St. Louis Cardinals 3-2. It stretched the Giants' lead to 2½ games over the Cards.

QUELLS RALLY

Pittsburgh Pirates edged Los Angeles Dodgers 5-4, Philadelphia Phillies spoiled a New York rally in the ninth inning to beat the Mets and southpaw Al Jackson 7-6, and Houston Colts defeated Milwaukee Braves 7-4.

Cepeda had the best season of his career last year when he led the league in home runs with 46 and runs batted in with 142.

His performance prompted Hall-of-Famer Roger Hornsby to observe that Cepeda may be the man to top Roger Maris' 61 home run mark.

Cepeda, a long-time holdout this spring, started slowly but hit his stride in the 10-game winning string. Over that stretch he has hit .400 with 16 hits, including five homers and 16 runs batted in. He now is hitting .360, is tied for the league lead with eight homers and leads the league in runs batted in with 32.

His hurry hitting was the difference as Billy Pierce picked up his fourth victory without a loss, though needing relief help from Don Larsen. Billy Williams' homer for the Cubs in the first inning ended Pierce's string of 17 3-3 scoreless innings. Dick Ellsworth (3-3) was the loser.

HITLESS 16 MEN

O'Toole (2-3), 25, a lefty, allowed an infield hit to leadoff man Curt Flood, then retired 16 men in a row before he weakened and the Cards began threatening. Solo homers by Frank Robinson, Leo Cardenas and Vada Pinson gave him just enough working room. Larry Jackson (2-3) was the loser.

Bob Skinner's bases-loaded, ninth-inning single drove in the winning run as the Pirates snapped a four-game losing string against the Dodgers. The Pirates held a 4-0 lead before the Dodgers came back with three in the eighth and tied it in the fifth. Elroy Face (1-0) benefited from Skinner's single, while Joe Moeller (1-3) took the loss.

Frank Thomas got his eighth homer, a three-run blast, for the Mets, but it wasn't enough as the Phillies won their fourth straight. Relief man Dallas Green (1-0) who worked out of a bases-loaded, one-out situation in the ninth, was the victor.

It was MacKenzie's first decision of the 1962 campaign. He took over in the sixth inning with the game tied 5-5. He allowed the winning run in the sixth frame, giving up two hits and striking out one man.

Houston spotted Milwaukee a 4-0 first-inning lead, then came back to win behind the good relief work of Bob Bruce (1-0) and Dick Farrell. Jim Pendleton and Hal Smith had homered for the Colts, but two unearned runs in the seventh inning clinched things.

Defeat Montreal 5-3

Smoke Eaters Capture Allan Cup

TRAIL, B.C. (CP) — The southeastern British Columbia smaller went on an Allan Cup jag Friday night when the Smoke Eaters captured the Canadian senior hockey title after a 24-year drought.

The Smokies wrapped things up with a 5-3 victory over Montreal Olympics, taking the best-of-seven series 4-1.

"We won, we won, we won," the Smokies shouted as they drenched themselves in champagne.

The winners traditionally gulp champagne from the cup or pour it over their heads. But the Smokies were so elated they buried their heads in it.

Trail coach Bobby Kromm said "it was a terrific team that won the Allan Cup this year and it will be a terrific team in the world championships in Europe next year."

Trail fans went slightly daffy. Motorists jammed the streets with their car horns blaring. Fans broke into the Trail dressing room, hoisted Kromm on their shoulders and carried him through the streets.

WORLD CHAMPIONS

The Smoke Eaters last won the Allan Cup in 1938. They recaptured the world crown that year and won it again last year.

The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association usually selects the Allan Cup kings to represent this country in the world championships. The Smoke Eaters got into the 1961 world event when Chatham Maroons, who beat Trail in the 1960 cup final, rejected the invite in favor of an exhibition tour of Russia.

All was dejection and weariness in the Montreal dressing room.

"The boys are pretty tired but at least we fought all the way," said coach Maurice Filion.

It was a tough finish for the Olympics, who were formed only this season and fought all the way from third place in the Eastern Township League to the Dominion final.

"It wasn't a bad effort for half a team," said Filion.

The Olympics had only 12 men and a goaltender for Friday night's game following an injury to George James Monday and John Mecelf suspension after a fight with Trail's Ed Polessi Wednesday.

Howie Hornby led the Smoke Eaters with two goals. Adolph Tambellini, Cal Hockley and Russ Kowalchuk added singles. Jacques Gagne scored twice for Montreal and Connie Mendala got the other goal.

Sport Slices...

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Track and field has been the "spinach" of the sports menu heretofore and in many other places for many years. A few liked it—a lot didn't.

As a spectator event, in this district at least, it has had about as much public appeal as a 1964 bathing suit at a Bikini convention.

Had an enterprising but optimistic promoter staged a meet here during the past decade, apart from competents and girl friends of the participants, he would not have attracted enough people to form a ball-bearer squad.

Belleville Fair officials tried it as a spectator sport in a small way a few years ago. It proved a dismal flop. The first time out three or four events were staged. There were more people in track suits than "civvies" in the stands. The idea died a painless death.

Like basketball, track and field has a tremendous spectator appeal in the United States and other foreign countries. In Canada, outside of universities and secondary schools, it has had little or nothing.

A few big meets attract people but there it has ended.

Now I believe track and field is coming back into favor. And those among people of secondary schools and colleges, the coaches, etc., thanked if the sport obtains any degree of public favor.

The sport has noted a marked resurgence in secondary schools circles. Last year some 11,000 secondary school students took part in track and field programs. This was a decided increase over the previous year. It is expected a further increase in participation will be noted this year.

Girl students are taking an added interest in track and field. At Middlebury University on May 26, the SOCCA will be conducting an invitation meet for secondary school girls of the province. This meet last year drew some 250 competitors from 32 schools.

Winning competitors from ten federated associations will go to the OSSAA Track and Field Championship Meet slated for the East York Collegiate Institute Stadium, Toronto, on Saturday, May 26. As many of last year's winners of championships will again be competing, new Canadian interscholastic records are expected in many events.

Closer to home some fine track and field athletes have been turned out in the Quinte district of the Central Ontario Secondary Schools Association. As in other school districts, the sport has undergone a resurgence here and the annual track and field meet scheduled for Trenton High School, Saturday, May 15, promises to be the most outstanding event since inception.

Composers Dave Bell of Moira Secondary and Bob Burleigh of Trenton High, have arranged an outstanding program of events which includes several new features. Prominent in the invasion of Trenton (under 16 on last September 1st.) They will compete in all events with the exception of the 880 yards and the mile.

A record entry of some 400 boys from the 16 schools of the district are expected to compete, and it is more than likely district records will go by the boards.

I understand that the coaches of the various schools have been working hard getting their proteges in shape. Moira Secondary won the district title last year, but with added competition and new faces, the champions may have to go all out to retain their 1961 honors.

The meet gets under way at 10.30 and will continue through until the various championships have been decided. It is by far the best meet ever held in the history of the Quinte district and is well-deserving of all the support the public can give.

It promises to be a colorful event as all schools will likely bring along their quota of supporters. I recommend to all sportsmen a trifle jaded with an overdose of hockey, that as a colorful, exciting change in menu, the Quinte OSSAA track and field meet in Trenton next Saturday should be what the figurative doctor ordered.

Assumption Gets Coach

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Bob Samaras, head basketball and baseball coach at Eastern High School in Detroit for the last five years, will coach Assumption University Lancers in the 1962-63 basketball season. It was announced Friday night. He succeeds Hank Biasatti, missed five weeks ago.

In addition to his basketball duties, Samaras will help to coach Assumption's intercollegiate tennis and track and field teams.

Suns Shine At Top Of League

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Jacksonville Suns are getting the best pitching in the International League. That's why they are in first place, a game ahead of Buffalo Bisons.

The Suns, one of two new clubs in the league this year, beat Toronto Maple Leafs 3-2 Friday night to run their season won-lost record to 8-3.

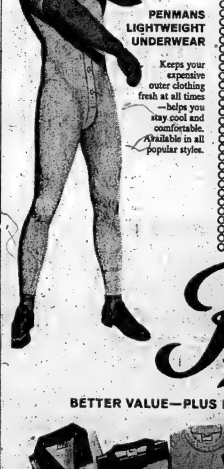
The Sun pitching staff has given up only 25 runs in 11 games. They have tossed three shutouts and have not permitted more than five runs in any game.

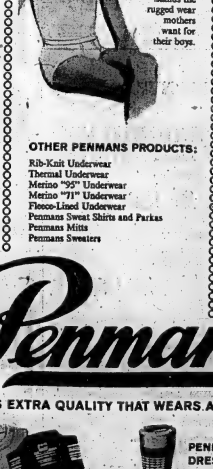
Until the Leafs got a run in the fifth inning of Friday night's battle, the Suns had compiled 21 scoreless innings.

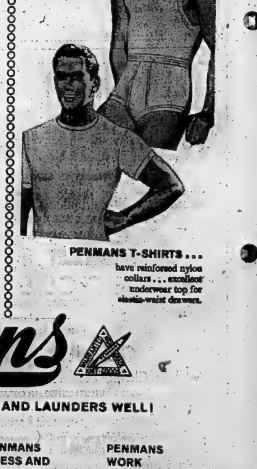
Ken Lehman got credit for the victory but was rescued by Ted Abernathy in the eighth inning. Abernathy has made three relief appearances this season. He has pitched six innings and has not allowed a hit.

Vic Davalillo's bases - empty home run in the seventh inning proved to be the winning margin.

Meanwhile, the Bisons defeated Atlanta Crackers 9-1. Syracuse Chiefs whipped Columbus Jets 6-4 and Richmond Virginians and Rochester Red Wings split a doubleheader. The Vees won the opener 3-5 and the Red Wings nightcap 8-6.







Jim Frey blasted a three-run homer and Danny Cater sent three more runs with a pair of singles to make it easy for Buffalo.

Joe Christopher's first-inning, grand-slam homer was more than enough for the Chiefs.

Dick Berardino had three hits to pace the Vees in their first game. Rochester won the nightcap with an eight-run fourth inning after two men were out.

Slams Two Homers, Snaps Streak

Indians' Romano On Hit Warpath

By MIKE RAINEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

John Romano has taken over as Cleveland Indians' top belter and seems determined to prove he's the best-hitting catcher in baseball history.

Continuing a hot streak that boosted his average to .333, Romano slammed a pair of homers Friday night that carried the Indians to a 6-4 American League victory over Kansas City Athletics and snapped a three-game losing streak.

Romano, who set club records for catchers with 31 homers and 80 runs batted in last season, crashed a solo homer in the fourth inning for the only hit off Kansas City starter Dan Pfister through seven innings, then won it with a two-run shot that capped a five-run uprising in the eighth inning.

Acquired in a trade with Chicago White Sox after the 1963 season, Romano posted a .272 average his first year at Cleveland before blossoming last year with a .290 mark and the club record. Now he's the big gun for the Indians with a .458 average in the last seven games.

ON HOMER TEAR

Leon Wagner of Los Angeles continued on a homer tear, hitting his seventh in eight games for a new league lead in total of nine as the Angeles edged Baltimore Orioles 3-2. Boston Red Sox used a 12-run fifth inning to whip Chicago White Sox 13-6 and Minnesota Twins beat Detroit Tigers 4-3 on Rich Rollins' three-run homer in the ninth inning.

The first-place New York Yankees and Washington Senators were idle.

The athletic, shelled Dick Donovan from the mound in the second innings, scoring five runs, two on a double by Dick Howser.

Pfister protected the lead, allowing only Romano's homer until the eighth inning, when Tito Francona's single drove in two runs. Willie Kirkland's grounder accounted for another and Romano wound it up with his second homer. Pfister (0-3), who struck out 11 men, was charged with the defeat. Rookie Sam McDowell (2-1) won.

The Angeles won with two runs in the seventh inning off Hoyt Wilhelm (0-1) on Albie Pearson's single, a sacrifice, a fielder's choice by Dave Nelson, a ball and Earl Averill's grounder, which scored Nelson. Jim Hannan got for a single, Wagner's two-run homer and Ted Uhlaender's double scored a pair of homers Friday night that carried the Indians to a 6-4 American League victory over Kansas City Athletics and snapped a three-game losing streak.

Pott Holds Golf Lead

BURNSVILLE, Okla. (AP) — Johnny Pott, fighting a troublesome back line, managed a two-under-par 71 Friday to retain his one-stroke lead at the halfway mark in the $20,000 Waco Turner open golf tournament here.

Pott's second - round score and his sizzling five-under-par 66 in the first round gave him a 139, a stroke ahead of Tommy Aaron and Bill Collins.

Jerry Magee of Tucson and Al Johnston of Montreal each shot rounds of 74 Friday. But Magee's better first round gives him a 145 total while Johnston's is 146.

Sir Gaylord Scratched

Ridan Is Derby Favorite

By ORLO ROBERTSON

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The Kentucky Derby, its lustre dimmed by the sudden withdrawal of the star and two shining members of the supporting cast, threw about 100,000 fans to Churchill Downs for its 89th running today.

Ridan, big South son of Nantallah, racing in the silks of Mrs. Moody Jolley, was the 2-to-1 choice to whip 14 other three-year-old colts, earn the $119,650 winner's share of the $182,150 jackpot and don the blanket of red roses with which the winner is attired at the end of the 1¼ miles.

Post time was set for 5.30 p.m. EDT, with television coverage by CBS and by the CBC in Canada. The weatherman forecast possible showers during the day and temperatures in the 94 degrees.

Should the rains stay away, it figured to be a pleasant outing for the thousands who packed the rambling stands crowned by the famous twin spires, gathered at the bars for the traditional mint julep and spilled into the flower-bedecked infield in picnic fashion.

THREE HORSES OUT

Sir Gaylord, who had been scratched by trainer Hirsch Jacobs because of a bruised right hind foot, was the third choice at 6 to 1.

Sunrise County and Fred Hooper's Admiral's Voyage are in position to stage a repeat of their Wood Memorial bumping duel in which they ended in a dead heat.

Sunrise County, with jockey Bill Shoemaker trying to keep him on a straight course, breaks from the No 2 stall. Admiral's Voyage, ridden by Braulio Baeza, goes from No. 5.

RIDAN PROMOTED

Ridan, unbeaten in seven starts as a two-year-old and worse than second in six outings this year except for one disqualification, became the horse to beat when Sir Gaylord suddenly came up lame in a workout Friday. The C. T. Chenery, Jr. and Mrs. Jolley's choice off four victories this year, two at the expense of Ridan.

Shortly after Sir Gaylord's racing career was ended by a hairline fracture of the sesamoid bone in his right front ankle, Chenery decided against using Cicada, his ace filly, as substitute. Verne Winchell Jr. then withdrew his California colt, Desert King, because of an infected ankle.

Chenery stuck with his original plan to start Cicada in Friday's Kentucky Oaks. She won by three lengths and earned $27,200 to boost her lifetime bankroll to $458,117.

Despite his erratic style of running, Sunrise County was made the 7-to-2 second choice behind Sir Gaylord was withdrawn.

Sir Ribot, seldom mentioned in previous discussions, jumped back into prominence off his fine California performances, including an easy triumph in the California Derby Trial at Hollywood Park. He was the third choice at 8 to 1.

Richard Boone and Guns Travelling Last Year on TV

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Richard Boone and gun already are traveling into their second — he says—final year on television.

Paladin fans needn't hurry to prevent. Not yet anyway. Have Gun, Will Travel will be seen through the 1965-66 season.

Boone is in the curious situation of preparing a whole season's product before the first show goes on the air. The reason is his plan to star next fall in a Broadway play, Sergeant Steiner.

"The urge to go back to the stage is inescapable," the actor says. "Motion pictures are a director's medium, without a doubt. It is only on the stage when an actor gains full control of what he is doing.

"So I am going back. It's got to be for satisfaction as an actor; I can't be doing it for the money. The pay will be paltry compared to what I could earn in television."

Money doesn't worry Boone. It shouldn't. He made a fabulous deal when he left Paladin rights to CBS.

It's kind of nice to know that the hills will be paid for the next 20 years," he says.

The future of Paladin?

"I think six years is enough," says Boone. "I should think that CBS would agree.

"I would hate to hang around too long. It's a shame when great shows like I Love Lucy and Dragnet continue past their peak and people start saying, 'Oh, are they still on the air?' I'd rather quit while people still care. And the ratings this year indicate that they do."

The television western has gone into a general decline. Boone doesn't see another drop in the number of cowpoke series; only a few remain like Gunsmoke, Bonanza and Have Gun are holding on.

Rodriguez Favored Over Yama

NEW YORK (AP) — Luis Rodriguez, fast-punching Cuban welterweight contender, is a 5-to-2 favorite to make it two straight victories over middleweight Yama Bahama in their 10-rounder tonight.

In their first meeting Bahama, a natural middleweight, had to make 153 pounds. He weighed 150¾ pounds and was floored and out-pointed by the 147¾ pound Cuban Nov. 6, 1960.

Since then the 29-year-old boxer from Bimini in the Bahamas has lost only one of 12 fights, though he can come in at his best weight of about 158 pounds. Rodriguez, No. 1 contender in the 147-pound welter division, probably will scale right at 147.

The 25-year-old Cuban has a 42-1 two-bout record, including 17 knockouts. Bahama has a 73-13-3 record, including 33 knockouts.

Ready Yacht For America Cup Race

NEW YORK (AP)—Only two members of the crew which sailed against Britain's Sceptre in 1958 will be on board when the refurbished 12-metre sloop Columbia slides into the water today to begin her long summer bid for defence of the America's Cup.

"We have assembled an almost entirely new crew," said Cornelius Shields, Jr., 44-year - old skipper. "It's a younger crew than we had four years ago, but a tough and experienced bunch. We think we have the best."

Most of the crew members are in their 30s. The holdovers on the 11-man crew are Colin Stephens, the yacht's designer who again will serve as navigator, and one of the two professionals, Jim Hanlon.

Columbia, which must beat possibly three American rivals to qualify for a shot at the Australian challenger Gretel off Newport, R.I., starting Sept. 13, will take its first trip today in Mamaroneck Harbor.

Columbia must defeat two old rivals from the 1958 trials, Weatherly and Easterner, and a new boat being built in secrecy in Boston in the summer eliminations, beginning in June.

Fourth Game Tonight

Oil Kings Confident

GUELPH (CP) — Coach Eddie Bush of Hamilton Mid Wings was in a reflective mood as he pondered his team's chances in tonight's Memorial Cup game.

"I'm not disturbed about the Wings' 5-3 loss to Edmonton Oil Kings Thursday night!

"Edmonton played much better and we were due for a letdown," said Bush, who usually regards any defeat as a personal attack.

"The whole team had it all at once and I hope they got it out of their system.

Tonight's game here should give a pretty good indication of whether the steadily - improving Kings can go all the way. A fifth game is assured, at Kitchener Monday. Dates and locations for the sixth and seventh, should they be necessary, have yet to be set by the Canadian amateur hockey association.

WING REGULARS REST

Bush gave his regulars the day off Friday. Only Jack Wildfong, Bob Dean, Gene Campbell and Larry Zilliotto skated.

Campbell will be rank in the lineup tonight and Dean, who made his first playoff start Thursday, may see limited whirl with Joe Budoso sitting it out.

Zilotto, a top performer with the Wings all season, has been sidelined since the national final started with an infected foot. Bush hopes to use him tonight but he had to retire to the dressing room Friday, when the foot swelled.

The Oil Kings drilled all day Friday. The unit of Butch Paul, Norm Beaudin and Marc Dufour, formed in Thursday's winning effort, is expected to see plenty of action tonight. The trio accounted for three of Edmonton's goals in that game.

Attendance in the series, disappointing even in the opening game in Hamilton, was due to pick up. The Memorial Gardens Friday night reported few tickets remaining and a sell-out likely.

Driver Continues Slow Return

LONDON (AP)—Stirling-Moss continues his slow return to consciousness, 11 days after crashing in an auto race.

A statement from the hospital Friday said that the racer's general condition remains good and that he is taking food and fluids well.

It added: "His conscious level is slowly rising, but the change from day to day is inevitably a small one."

Moss crashed on the Goodwood circuit Easter Monday. He suffered injuries to the skull, shoulder and leg and was unconscious for a week after the accident.

During this week he has responded to conversation by his doctors and friends who are keeping vigil by his bedside.

Driver Sails 164 Feet Through Air

Hill was driving in a trial run for Sunday's Targa Florio open road race, when a sharp left 80 miles an hour when he missed a curve.

The car sailed into the air, but landed rightside up on all four wheels in the open field. Hill's crash helmet bore a huge dent in the top.

The car showed no external damage, but the jolt was so severe that officials said Hill would be assigned another car for the race.

'Paret Third Man In Ring'

Bantam Retains Crown

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Edwardo Brazil stiff holds the 118-pound world bantamweight boxing championship. Hal Herman Marquez, a lesser-out loser, claims Benny Paret was the third boxer in the ring.

Referee Fred Apostoli stopped their scheduled 15-round title bout in the 10th round Friday night after the champion twice dropped Marquez.

Marquez, a longshoreman from Stockton, Calif., claimed he wasn't hurt — he was just resting after the second knockdown. He said Apostoli stopped the fight too soon because Paret's death after his welterweight title fight March 24 was too fresh in the official's mind.

Apostoli insisted Marquez was in trouble.

"I think he was getting his solidity and often," the former middleweight champion said he "His eyes were very bad. He was almost helpless and he was staggering when he did get up."

Marquez, a clever boxer not noted for a strong punch, moved in on Jofre for nine rounds, building up a 7-0 lead and 5-1 edge on the cards of Judges Fred Bottaro and Vern Pybus.

Apostoli had the champ ahead 5-3 after the second under California scoring, where the winner of a round gets one to five points.

In the 10th Jofre floored Marquez for a short count. The challenger came up, then went down again under a flurry of rights to the head and Apostoli stopped the bout.

Marquez and his handlers pressed for a rematch. Jofre and his manager said they have no other plans and a rematch is all right with them—for the right price.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21): Wonderful day for visits, reading, attending church or lectures. Don't accept status quo, but choose course of dynamic change.

Cancer (June 22 to July 21): Major issue today could turn out to be trivia. Get the facts first. What seems awesome today may be "frill." Plan for week ahead.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21): Today could associates may come up with some favorable surprises. Don't attempt to push your own way, but let others surprise you. Accept valuable friendships.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): You could put ideas on paper today, and discover you have something valuable to offer. Day ripe for being self-confident. Give thought to career ambitions.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Many favorable aspects, but they add up to challenge. Things aren't presented on silver platter. So go after what you want by letting others know what you think.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Some good "breaks" are coming your way before long. You can help matters by using initiative, more effort. Be original, and help find the way.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Cycle has been higher in past, and will move up in future. Today good time for staying close to home. Enjoy family, and make future plans.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Your appraisal of budget or financial situation may be sought today. Give your opinion, but maintain good disposition. Your advice can be valuable.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Favorable lunar aspect today means much insight can be gained by listening. An older friend or relative offers good advice. Listen, analyze and then decide.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): Stress on practical matters. Don't hold out for "pie in sky." Clear up details, and day will be well spent. Play cards close to chest. Think plans through.

If today is your birthday . . . next month should prove one of most significant of this year. Musical ability, or ability to appreciate art of others in this field shows in Solar chart.

General Tendencies: Conservatism wins day. All signs could benefit from Pisces interpretation. Those who make fantastic claims apt to find themselves subject of ridicule.

Monday, May 7
By SIDNEY OMARR

Aries (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19)—Could be day in which old debts are paid. Accept graciously. Check details. Don't be misled by wild claims, promises. Good time for progress.

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20)—If you attempt to ignore old friends, or your responsibilities, you defeat your own best interests. Take advice. Client troubled air by speaking "from the heart".

Gemini (May 21 to June 21)—Strive for harmony. Be diplomatic, not "pushy". Check budget, invest in your own talents. Clear up pending matters previously delayed.

Cancer (June 22 to July 21)—Cycle has moved up. Today you can take stock of immediate future. Others may attempt to bluff you but you're strong enough to stay with your plans.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21)—Good advice may come from old friend. So-called experts may try to "modernize" you, but wisest help upon those who were loyal in past. Being too "modern" could cost too much.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22)—A most productive day if you will "sweat out" early delays. Don't be affected by gloomy acquaintances. Put ideas across with confidence.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)—Initiative could be key to satisfaction. Don't expect others to do things for you today, but initiate action, "in person". Push ahead with confidence.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21)—Moon in favorable aspect to your sign today means your ability to perceive future, assess motives, especially clear. Trust intuitive intellect. Good for combined effort.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21)—Those who attempt double talk should be "told off" in straightforward language. But be fair. Don't be enticed into spending schemes or get-rich-quick plans.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20)—Best to admit mistake if you make one, but avoid recurrence. Those with maturity will be won over if you are calm, and exhibit sense of humor. Don't attempt to cover up with lame excuses.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19)—Sense of responsibility apt to come to fore. This should not frighten you. Accept it. Sum up. Try to realize what you really want. Don't attempt to hang on to "junk".

Pisces (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20)—Moon in section of your chart relating to "excitement" and creative activity. Stress self-expression. You may "strike it rich" professionally and personally.

If today is your birthday . . . this could be year when social contacts help you overcome much gloom. This month you may be put on spot but you appear able to come through in excellent satisfactory manner. You are versatile. And your friends range from the artist to the laborer. You are happiest when pursuing a new interest. If you find yourself in a rut, get out of it fast.

General Tendencies. Cycle up for Gemini, Cancer, Leo, Capricorn; should avoid going for-ish things. Special word to Libra: A bit of extra "trouble" saves a lot in long run. If you expect others to perform special tasks, you run unnecessary risks.

MAINLY HYDRO

About 90 per cent of total electric energy used in Canada is obtained from water power.

FORT ERIE, Ont. (CP) — Blue Light, winner of last year's Queen's Plate, and Jammed Lucky, Canada's leading, two-year-old in 1960, lost Friday in their first starts of the season at Fort Erie.

Ridden by Jim Fitzsimmons, Champagne Velvet defeated Jammed Lucky by 3½ lengths in the featured $4,000 Autora Purse. Blue Light was fourth.

The crown of 4,864 had established Champagne Velvet as an even-money favorite and he paid $4.40, $3.20 and $3. Details of Champagne Velvet and Jammed Lucky paid $12.

Fitzsimmons, virtually finished the riding championship of the Fort Erie spring meeting, riding his 24th winner of the meeting which continues today. Hugo Dittfach has 21 winners.

Friday's daily double paid $39.80 when Son Blue and Baltimore Way won the first two races.

Canadian Passes Race Phase

INDIANAPOLIS (CP — AP)— Ed Kostenuk of Victoria passed the final phase of his driver's test Friday preparatory to attempting to qualify for the Indianapolis 500-mile race May 30.

Kostenuk hit 136 miles an hour in a leader car roadeo. Speedway officials said that if he qualifies for the 500 he will be the first Canadian to their knowledge to take part in the big race.

A former Canadian midget racing champion with 14 years' experience, Kostenuk has rarely competed in United States Auto Club events.

Of the 36 cars already here and preparing for the May 12 qualifications, 41 took advantage of the ideal weather for practice runs.

Syndicate Sells Sox Stock

CHICAGO (AP) — An 11-man Chicago group Friday sold its 45-per-cent Chicago White Sox holdings to the majority stockholder, Arthur C. Allyn, for an undisclosed sum.

At a press conference, Allyn and the minority group spokesman, William C. Bartholomay, said the transaction was intended primarily for tax purposes. It is to aid the improvement of baseball.

When the minority stockholding syndicate purchased the 45 per cent for $2,466,000 on Dec. 15, 1961, the price was estimated at almost $3,000,000.

Allyn, a wealthy investment banker, is chairman of the board and president, and the holdings of Hank Greenberg who still is a member of the Sox board of directors.

Henry welcomes letters from readers, and awards each week a best-selling book for the most interesting letter he receives. This week's winner is Karen MacLeod of Toronto, Ontario, who receives a copy of "How Life Goes On" by Irving Zeichner, published by Prentice Hall, Inc.

Dear Henry—I know a boy about 12. His greatest pastime is killing and hunting birds, no matter what type, with a BB gun. His parents know about this. What can be done?
—BIRD LOVER.

Dear Bird Lover—If parents know about it and are not chirping, it's up to you. Warn him and, if he doesn't stop, talk to see his hunting license. Phone the police and the humane society. Drive the kind up a tree if he doesn't stop. A boy of 12 has better things to do.—HENRY.

Dear Henry:—Our club had an election today and one girl who gave things to the club was elected vice-secretary because the secretary is moving in July. We have a president, vice-president, secretary, sports director and phoner. The vice-secretary is not pleased with her position. What else can she be?—PRESIDENT.

Dear President—Let the vice-secretary be president for a month and you be vice-secretary. Go on shifts, every month there will be a new president, director, etc.

Now that you are president, you might not like this idea because you want to be president all the time. But if you want your club to last, you had better do it this way.—HENRY.

Dear Henry:—I have a problem. In class I sit in row five, second to the back. Behind me sits a sloppy, messy, bad-tempered boy. When he takes off his shoes his feet smell like anything.

My teacher knows about this as I have told her many times. I can't get another place to sit and he can't either. I have told him to quit, but he won't. What can I do? There are also about 20 other things he does which I object to.—KAREN.

Dear Karen—You can't move Aroma; why do you think he is at the back of the class, away from teacher's desk? It's not the boy's fault. I think much of the blame is on your teacher.

Why does she let him take off his shoes? Why doesn't she phone the mother to get him into a tub along with his socks? Point these things out to your teacher and good luck.—HENRY.

Dear Henry:—I am 13 years old and a girl. When I was little I was sick and I failed twice at school. I am in grade six now and should be in grade eight.

I like a boy who is in grade eight and he likes me. When he got his last report card it was very poor.

I'm sure he is going to fail so he won't leave me going to high school. I know this is a small romance and won't last forever and I don't want him to fail for his sake. What should I do?—PUZZLED.

Dear Puzzled:—You've recovered now and there is a thing called skipping a grade. About the boy who wants to fail just to be with his true love; as you said it is a small romance and it won't last forever.

Make a sacrifice, tell him you are through with him and that you like another boy. You will be doing a big thing.—HENRY.

GRACKLES AND REDWINGS

By WINIFRED K. WILSON

Usually somewhat earlier than this we begin to see grackles wadding across our lawns and redwinged blackbirds perching, eatails and rushes in swampy ground beyond the densely populated centres of our settlements. For half a century or so the grackles have been fairly common right in the hearts of our cities, and of late years they have become more and more numerous. They appear to enjoy the advance of civilization, and instead of nesting in threes many are occupying cavities in buildings. Nestlings, however, although not averse to coming near human dwellings when the location suits them, are still wedded to their swamps where they gather in large flocks.

Smaller than crows yet larger than any of our blackbirds grackles are easily identified by their fine, wedge-shaped tails. Their average size is approximately two inches longer than a robin's. The male's iridescent sheen, varying from green or blue to purple, is especially noticeable when the sun strikes the black plumage. The yellow eyes look like glass beads. The female, a trifle smaller than her mate, is duller, being more of a faded black and iridescent only on the front of her body.

KEEP TO GROUND

Their food preference is responsible for the grackles' love of keeping to the ground. At this season they are hunting white grubs; soon they will be looking for snakes, mice, and, unfortunately, eggs, and nestlings. Later they will turn to beetles, grasshoppers, wild fruit, acorns and beech-nuts. In autumn waste grain, particularly [illegible] is also fond of living near water, fish, crayfish, shellfish, and lizards are taken.

Except in the breeding season, only at night, when feeding is finished, do we find grackles in trees. Their habit also is to nest in the company of others, sometimes in colonies numbering 25 or more pairs.

REDWINGS HAVE SONG

Grackles cannot be said to be musical, harsh "cacks" and metallic squeaks making up their entire repertoire. Redwings, on the other hand, have a real song made up of gurgling, liquid notes that run up the scale and end in a trill. Their "conk-ker-ree" can be heard a long way off. The high-pitched, whistled cries given as an alarm is also musical, but the "cack" call, usually accompanied by pumping of the tail, is far from beautiful.

The female redwing is exactly like an enlarged sparrow of some kind, but the male is quite a fine looking bird, glossy black with bright scarlet epaulets edged with buff. As a seed and injurious insects are their staple foods, these birds are decidedly beneficial.

Your Car

Don't Give Up On Your Car Too Quickly

By EUGENE B. MILMOE

Before convincing yourself that your engine's "get up and go" has got up and gone forever, try finding out where. With a little luck, you may not have to look far . . . lazy, labored performance is often due to an easy-to-cure condition.

Where do you start? Well, you might check out everyday minor troubles, like poor ignition timing, bad points or plugs, dirty carburetor. Any one of these can be enough to make your car drag its feet — and thirst for gas, too. The same goes for neglected parts such as ignition cables which need replacing, weak distributor breaker spring, a failing coil, a stuck manifold heat valve.

How about tires? Don't expect much soup away from the pack if you like to keep air low for a softer, smoother ride . . . or if you're using oversize tires.

There are other causes, of course, and it's not always a cut and dried matter to track them down. But searching for the answer can be a lot cheaper than guesswork or giving up on the car.

* * *

From S.T.: "My engine started overheating a few weeks ago. I flushed the radiator and cleaned the thermostat, but it hasn't helped. There's also a loud squeal now whenever I pull away from a stop or try to pick up speed. Would this be fan belt trouble?"

(A) You've probably diagnosed it correctly. A loose, slipping fan belt can cause both of the troubles described.

W.F. asks: "I know there are several things which might cause low-oil mileage, but what would you call the most commonplace causes?"

(A) When if comes to high oil consumption, leaks and leaky piston rings probably rate as champion and number one challenger.

Successful Living

Should She Wait For Him?

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—I have been going with a nice young fellow who has been married and is now legally separated. His divorce has been dated to come through twice, but the witnesses (picked by his wife) did not show up, and he does not know who they are.

They both want it very much. He has three children that his wife looks after, but he supports them. He can have them and has known it since he left but had no one to take care of them.

I think very highly of him and love the children very much. I would also marry him in a minute if he asked me after the divorce is settled. Should I wait for him?

He is very much liked by my family and friends. He also bought me a very expensive watch and sweater for Christmas.—CONFUSED.

DEAR CONFUSED:—Wait and see. He may mean every word he says and still not succeed with the divorce. Keep free of it all right now.

Witnesses usually show up. He could be misrepresenting the facts, much as you want to believe him.

Sooner or later the facts will come out, and then you can decide—if you are asked!

DEAR DORIS:—I used to go with this guy in the summer and I really liked him a lot. We quit seeing each other and then he started to date his girl friend. They got married December he married her. Now every time I see him I can't help but think of the summer time.

Last weekend I saw him and he came over and I talked to him for about twenty minutes. That night when I went home I cried for a good half hour, wouldn't eat, or sleep. My girl friend tells me to just ignore him but that is easier said than done. Could you suggest a way of forgetting about him?—TRYING TO FORGET.

DEAR TRYING:—It is not easy, you're right. But take my word for it, it is possible.

The best way to forget one thing is to be busy as a bee with something else. This means throwing yourself into some new activity. Do you like dramatics or music or tennis?

The person of character turns every tragedy to good account—and you're a good red-blooded Canadian girl! Make a point of bringing something new and fascinating into your life. The counsellor at your own YWCA can help you with this.

* * *

TO P. J.—If you like all three boys, go with all three. This is the very thing that shows the foolishness of going steady with one.

How will you ever get to know the boy you will eventually want to marry unless you get to go out with several?

Pro-Communist Forces Capture Laotian Capital

5,000 Defenders Have Been Evacuated

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP) — Pro - Communist forces have captured Nam Tha, a strategic capital about 30 miles from Red China's border that the royal Laotian government had vowed to defend to death.

Premier Boun Oum's government said the pulling radio announced the fall of the town to the rebels today after a day of fighting Sunday.

(The United States denounced the rebel attack as a violation of the cease-fire signed a year ago but U.S. officials in Washington generally hoped it would not wreck attempts to set up a coalition neutralist regime to take Laos out of the cold war.)

Boun Oum's information minister, Bouavan Norasing, said 5,000 defenders of Nam Tha had been evacuated and the city now is in "enemy" hands.

(Reuters reported from Singapore that the vice-premier of Laos, Gen. Phoumi Nosavan, said he had information Nam Tha had not fallen to the rebels as reported.

(Phoumi talked to reporters after arriving with Prince Boun Oum and other members of a mission en route to Malaya from Bangkok, Thailand.

("We heard the news this morning in Saigon that Nam Tha had fallen," Phoumi said. "This is not true according to our information.")

REPORTS MISSING

Bouavan said the government had received today messages from the area, 225 miles northwest of Vientiane, and gave no details of the retreat.

The only combat escape route from Nam Tha, which had been under siege for four months, was a road leading to Muang Sing, 15 miles to the southwest on the Thai border.

A group of 12 U.S. military advisers with the government forces in the town fled in a helicopter to the royal capital, Luang Prabang. One officer said the government troops put up "a pretty good fight."

Peking radio said Pathet Lao forces attacked Nam Tha in a "fierce counter - attack" after the royal troops "clung on to the American" — began large-scale attack on rebel defence positions.

There was no indication of the casualties in the fighting.

Nam Tha was the last government stronghold in northwest Nam Tha province, Vientiane radio said reinforcements to the town to make it a showpiece of resistance.

Lord Snowdon May Quit Job At Sunday Times

LONDON (Reuters) — The diarist of The Daily Sketch says Lord Snowdon, Princess Margaret's husband, is thinking of giving up his post of artistic adviser of The Sunday Times weekend color supplement, to which he was appointed earlier this year.

The columnist says Snowdon "has been telling friends that he is not anxious to go on working for The Sunday Times."

The columnist then quotes Snowdon: "I never read newspapers, Roy Thomson, who owns the newspaper, is saying:

"It's not true—at least I have not heard of it. Lord Snowdon is very happy in his work."

The columnist reports "From what we hear Lord Snowdon," former society photographer Antony Armstrong-Jones, "will be resigning from his post . . . in the near future."

The report goes on to say he "several good months of happiness."

One is that the attitude of other members of the Sunday Times staff is a continued embarrassment to him, because, as they are "unused to colleagues of his rank, a lush field on a room when he enters. Some of them have found difficulty in adjusting themselves to the privileges of the Queen's brother-in-law."

Another complaint is that whenever he goes to take photographs, a crowd gathers, the report said.

CAMPBELLFORD, Ont. (CP) Irene Christie of Trent River was released from hospital here after being bitten on the right foot and leg by a fox.

The body of the animal, killed by a neighbor with a garden rake, has been sent to department of agriculture laboratories at Hull, Que., for tests.

Trent River is about 10 miles north of the community on the way between Peterborough and Belleville.

Missing Child Safe

NEW YORK (AP)—The five year - old daughter of Robert Goulet, Broadway musical comedy star, reported missing overnight with a baby sitter, was found today in Brooklyn.

Police said the missing baby sitter telephoned a neighbor that she had decided to visit a relative in Brooklyn. The child and baby sitter later returned to the baby sitter's home.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Although skies will be mainly sunny today, temperatures will continue on the cool side. A large area of high pressure will cross the district tonight, giving clear skies and allowing temperatures once more to dip below freezing in the north and into the 30s over Southern Ontario. Increasing cloudiness today will accompany the return to milder air to the province.

535,000 MAY BE JOBLESS IN 1964--PEARSON

Govt. Experts Prepared Figures

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP)—Figures prepared for the commission inquiring into unemployment insurance show that 535,000 persons may be jobless in 1964, Liberal leader Pearson said here Saturday night.

On the basis of those calculations, about 400,000 are expected to be jobless this year and 465,000 in 1963, he told an audience of about 600 in this steel town.

Mr. Pearson said: "These are not my figures. These are the figures prepared by the government's own experts. They are what is expected to happen unless we take effective action now."

(The four-man special committee of inquiry on unemployment insurance, set up by the government last July 17, is expected to give the cabinet its report sometime this summer. The committee, headed by Toronto insurance executive Ernest C. Gill, has commissioned various research studies into the unemployment picture but no details have been released.)

(The Dominion Bureau of Statistics' latest report on unemployment, issued April 24 covering the week ended March 17, said March unemployment at that time was 560,000—8.7 per cent of the labor force.

(DBS lists the number of persons without jobs and seeking employment, based on a sampling of 35,000 households.)

GOVERNMENT BLAMED

Mr. Pearson said the government is aware of the figures but "they are not going to stand up and tell the Canadian people that everything has had it so good and there is nothing to worry about!"

Mr. Pearson arrived by air from Winnipeg, where he had addressed a week-long election campaign sweep, from British Columbia eastward.

Mr. Pearson came on the same date as Mr. Diefenbaker's Progressive Conservative Leader, Ont., for the June 18 election. Mr. Pearson noted that in fact the Diefenbaker speech is a lively crowd.

"You can doubt what he is saying," Mr. Pearson said. "He is telling the Canadian people that they are being offered a great plan for national development. This is what I mean, I agree, expect, a five-year plan . . . to take us through to the end of the century. Diefenbaker as a nation—a centenary plan for our national growth.

Mr. Pearson said that unless he missed his guess, Mr. Diefenbaker would be talking for another chance at national development "so he could finish the job.

CITES DOLLAR DROP

"I can tell you of anything more alarming. They talk about an upsurge and look what they did to the dollar."

The pegging of the dollar at 92.5 United States cents "devaluation by the compulsion of events" means $400,000,000 had "gone down the drain" in the last four months in a futile attempt to keep the dollar from sagging further.

Viscount, Godson of Victoria, Finally Regains British Citizenship

LONDON (AP) — Viscount Churchill, Sir Winston Churchill's cousin and a godson of Queen Victoria, said today Britain has welcomed him as a citizen again but only after a security check.

"I thought being a peer and having the name of Churchill would be enough to be recruited things a bit", Lord Churchill said. "It makes no difference. They even sent C.I.D. Criminal investigation division men around to check up on me."

The viscount now is 71. He went to the United States to live a quarter of a century ago. Despite his title, his Churchill name and his connection with Queen Victoria, he became a U.S. citizen.

He returned to Britain five years ago, saying at his age he felt he wanted to return to his native land. Under British law he applied to regain his citizenship 18 months ago. Officials said he got the routine security check given every applicant for British citizenship.

While in the U.S. Lord Churchill led a colorful life. His occupation included being a cowboy in the southwest and a script writer in Hollywood. He now owns a London restaurant.

Commenting on his imminent entry into Lords, The Daily Mirror said: "The House of Lords needs a cowboy or two".

Jobs for Canadians Become Debating Point in Campaign

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The issue of jobs for Canadians dominated a warm debating point for campaigning politicians.

Especially expanding employment" was described by Prime Minister Diefenbaker in London, Ont., Saturday night as one of the key planks in the Progressive Conservative party's bid for re - election June 18.

While the prime minister officially launched his campaign, Liberal Opposition Leader Pearson told a Sault Ste. Marie rally that the "government's own experts" are forecasting a worsening unemployment situation.

At a Toronto press conference Sunday, New Democratic Party Leader T. C. Douglas termed unemployment as one of the four chief election issues.

Meanwhile, in Quebec City, Social Credit chieftain Robert Thompson formally opened his campaign Sunday with a promise that his party, if elected, will set up a department of federal-provincial affairs.

Today the four party leaders planned to continue concentrating their efforts in Ontario and Quebec.

NATO Lands Give Notice They Will Use Atomic Arms

ATHENS (AP)—Members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization let it be known Sunday that they are united in their determination to defend themselves with nuclear weapons if necessary.

The 15 NATO members, winding up a four - day strategy meeting that produced some disagreements on other issues, declared publicly reaffirmed in their summing - up communique.

The purpose of NATO is declared in it to be clear that in case of attack (NATO) defend its members by all necessary means.

Backing up this pledge was U.S. Secretary of Defence Robert S. McNamara.

While in the U.S. Lord Churchill led a colorful life. His occupation included being a cowboy in the southwest and a script writer in Hollywood. He now owns a London restaurant.

Commenting on his imminent entry into Lords, The Daily Mirror said: "The House of Lords needs a cowboy or two".

Mr. Diefenbaker, making his first swing through Quebec, was to visit a veterans hospital at Ste. Anne de Bellevue followed by a speaking tour by road through the Eastern Townships.

Mr. Pearson, after a day's rest at the Soo, where he read his lesson in St. Andrews United Church, was to begin a two-day swing through northern Ontario and Quebec.

NDP Leader Douglas had a scheduled speaking engagement at Cornwall, but whether he could make it depended on his shaking off a bout of stomach flu. A press conference in Montreal was to precede Mr. Thompson's arrival in Brantford for a Social Credit rally tonight.

In his London speech, the prime minister unveiled a program of national economic development projects, promising equality for all.

Kicking off his formal campaign before an estimated audience of 8,000, he said the key to the Conservatives' approach will be "economic growth . . . continually developing and

REVIEW OF TAX LAWS PLEDGED BY DIEFENBAKER

Opens Campaign At London Meeting

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Diefenbaker, who launched his campaign for re-election during a London rally Saturday night, starts a two-day swing through Quebec today.

He pledged himself to advocate the same principles of racial equality as a federal party in Quebec as he did in Canada as a whole in the 1957 and 1958 election campaigns.

The Conservative re-election plea Mr. Diefenbaker, he said in London, is keyed to "the second stage" of the party's program, this time emphasizing national economic development. He was a first elected to power in 1957 on a theme of restoring the rights of Parliament, and swept the country in 1958 with a program of national resources development.

Mr. Diefenbaker's campaign engagement today was an evening rally in the arena at Granby, Que., but he is to travel to visit the Ste. Anne de Bellevue Veterans' Hospital and drive to Frasham, Cowansville and Granby for civic receptions. The party's campaign train will invade southeastern Ontario on Wednesday.

FOLLOWED 1958 PATTERN

The opening campaign speech in London, Ont., followed the pattern in his opening campaign speech of the 1958 campaign in Winnipeg, the speech in the first 20 minutes reviewing the record of his government, dealt with the Liberal opposition with sweeping condemnation, and then sketched the outline of his program for the next five years.

Mr. Diefenbaker's introduction of Ontario Premier Robarts and Ontario Premier Leslie Frost received the biggest hand on the other side and received the prime minister's praise for his support in 1957 and 1958.

Mr. Diefenbaker said that, if elected, his government will convene Parliament in September. One of the things that would do was appoint a royal commission of leading economists to study and make recommendations to strengthen the industrial structure to see that its burden is fair and equitable on all taxpayers.

SAYS PROMISES KEPT

"In the past we have been carried out in abundant measure," Mr. Diefenbaker said. "In my consciousness, in my conscience, I kept my faith with you. I kept the faith you placed in me.

In this campaign, he said, he will put forward "a plan for the next five years, dedicated to national unity, peace and defence armament; a national government, human rights, national growth, and international justice for all.

The nation would mean "greater and greater expansion in employment" in the years ahead, he said, and would be

Color And Pomp Mark Farewell At Plaza Parade

Thousands Watch Ceremonial Ritual

By GEORGE H. CARVER

In a blaze of colorful ceremonial glory, the "drummer boy by moonlight" Kipling saga of Lieut.-Col. Angus B. Duffy, C.D., commanding officer of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, drew to a close here yesterday.

Under a cool 100 strength the militia unit of the famous "Plowboy" Regiment of World War Two days watched its command transferred from Col. Duffy to the former second-in-command Lieut.-Col. Joseph B. Black.

Under brilliant May sunshine over 3,000 people packed the Belleville Plaza on the eastern outskirts of the city, to view the pomp and ceremony that marked the parade.

The change-of-command ceremonies were conducted by Brigadier A. J. B. Bailey, DSO, CBE, Eastern Area Commander, Kingston. The documents were signed and witnessed before Lieut.-General Howard D. Graham, former chief of the general staff and ex-commanding officer of the Hasty Pees overseas.

The "farewell" to Col. Duffy was the largest and most colorful militia parade seen here since the days of World War Two.

The popularity of a famous soldier was evidenced in the thousands who attended the parade; in hundreds of former comrades of the regiment's unit; in high-ranking military officials, past and present and in the long, long length of the unit he commanded.

"The regiment on parade was a panorama of colour. Officers were smartly apparelled in regimental blues, with shoulder cord, sword knot, and "Field Service" scabbards, white gloves and swagger sticks.

Warrant Non-commissioned officers were taken, with red sashes and gold-tasseled canes, were smartly garbed in khaki battle dress with red berets, buttons and medals. A special "national survival" company were khaki with service caps.

The regimental band under Lance Corporal L. Crawford were attired in the white pith helmets, scarlet tunics, blue trousers of the infantry regiment of a century ago.

SPECIAL TRIBUTE

The color party carrying the regimental colors, the regimental color consisted of two junior officers and three non-commissioned officers, Lieut. Lieut. Davis and Atkinson, W.O. Ken Hemmett and Sergeants Tapp and Richardson.

A special tribute to Col. Duffy was noted when nearly 100 officers of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment marched behind the militia regiment in the final march past.

They were not "forgotten". Their necks almost clicked in smart "eyes right" as they passed the reviewing stand in front of the Plaza with their wartime "sergeant-major".

Following a moving reverential the regiment fell in behind the plaza "parade square" shortly before two o'clock. There was a solemn hush as the color party slowly marched to the position directly in front of the reviewing stand.

The parade ceremonial included the annual inspection by the commanding offi-

Col. Duffy's "Farewell To Arms"

"It is most gratifying to see so many former Hasty Pees and friends of the regiment here to witness the annual inspection of the unit and my final official parade with our beloved regiment.

"Thirty-two years ago, as a boy of 16, I joined the regiment. Since then I have known many hundreds of good comrades who were with me, and who, very, whether it was for a rollicking good time or on the battle fields of battle. Since then I have known high adventure such as few men are privileged to experience. But, most important of all I have had the privilege of serving my country, in the ranks of the regiment, in peace and war, in a very real way.

"In the period I have learned that duty, discipline, courage, generosity, service and good friends are the important things of life. To many people the name of whose guidance, instruction and inspiration helped me to be a better man and therefore a better man. I say sincerely and humbly "thank you".

"To the present personnel serving of the regiment I say remember always that loyalty to the unit, strong and resolute you are contributing in a very real way to the welfare and well - being of your unit will be the means of our regiment's survival. The role of the militia is of vital importance to Canada.

Water Safety Week Planned

The week of June 3rd to June 9th will be Water Safety Week in Belleville. It was recently decided by the Bay of Quinte Water Safety Council.

This year the Council, whose primary purpose is to educate the public in the need of water safety, expects to concentrate entirely upon water safety promotion and the many activities rather than to repeat some of the attractions which have been featured in past years.

The council has also decided to circulate various water safety items for showing throughout the city at schools and Home and School Association meetings. Illustrated with this program will be a greater use of posters in both schools and public places.

It was suggested that possibly a symbol, comparable to the "Green Cross" of school highway safety, might be created to promote "water safety" amongst school children. Also discussed were various facets of property and water canal palgnis and of possible improvements for future campaigns.

The next meeting of the council will be Wednesday, May 16th, at the Belleville YMCA.

Tweed Native Is Found Dead In Lonely Cabin

FRANKFORD — The body of Frederick Charles Rutter, a prospector and trapper for the past 38 years was found yesterday at a cabin 15 miles from Shillington in the Timmins district. It is believed Mr. Rutter died in February. His body is being brought here for burial.

Rev. Archie Carson of Frankford is a brother-in-law of Mr. Rutter. Mr. Carson said Rutter went to Shillington in 1925, before one of the fathers of the district. He resided in a log cabin about 18 miles from Shillington in the small community of Shillington, on the shore of Big Island on Lake Abitibi. He travelled to the small general store at Shillington in the fall by boat to stock up his provisions for the following winter months, and would remain there during the winter, Mr. Rutter would travel to the store on snow shoes.

Each fall, a merchant from Monteith would make the long journey to Shillington where he would meet Mr. Rutter and purchase furs which the latter trapped during the winter.

As the request of Mr. Carson, a plane took off in January, 1962, to investigate the cabin, flew over Mr. Rutter's cabin, circled it, but did not land as the pilot then knowing he was alright. This information was relayed to the store and storekeeper who then notified Mr. Carson in Frankford.

Mr. Rutter was the only way we had of knowing Fred was alive right up to the time he corresponded with Mr. Rutter constantly.

Being a skilled pioneer, Mr. Rutter built a second cabin about 10 miles from his trapping line. If he was caught in a storm on his way home from trapping, he would usually spend the night in this cabin and continue his journey when the storm ended.

Besides being a prospector and trapper, Mr. Rutter was also a bee keeper.

Mr. Carson, who personally made a trip to Mr. Rutter's brother-in-law last year, said Mr. Rutter had 15 bee hives and boats which he used for his business.

Describing the manner in which Mr. Rutter had a small garden and raised bees, Mr. Carson said strawberries that were "out of this world," Mr. Carson said.

He was a member of the Masonic Lodge at Shillingford and was a real pioneer.

Mr. Rutter studied prospecting while working at the Ford motor plant in Windsor and after losing his wife 40 years ago, carried out his childhood dream.

Mrs. Carson said, "ever since he was a small boy, he always wanted to be a prospector. We tried several times to persuade him to come and live with us, but that wasn't what he wanted. It has come as a great shock to us. We don't know just exactly when he died or who found him, but we are expecting a letter from the storekeeper at Shillingford telling us the whole story."

Mrs. Rutter became stricken with paralysis several weeks after their marriage and died. It was a severe blow to Mr. Rutter and he visited her grave every day for eleven years.

Born in Bogart, near Orwell, he was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Rutter. He was in his 70th year.

The late Mr. Rutter is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Rev. Archie (Carmel) Carson of Frankford and Mrs. Archie (Myrtle) Campbell of Kingston.

killed. But the United States is prepared to give NATO information on such things as targeting and the appalling destructiveness of even tactical weapons.

Informed sources said this raises fears in Kennedy administration's belief that the tactical use of nuclear weapons would at least certainly develop into general nuclear war. Consequently, the U.S. feels conventional infantry, armor and artillery are needed more than ever, and it hopes information on the horrors of the nuclear alternative will give the impetus to speed up fulfilment of their conventional arms commitments.

The proposal for an independent NATO nuclear force was pushed into the background. While U.S. Secretary Rusk said he still was ready to consider a proposal for such a force, it was apparent that pressure for NATO to have its own nuclear deterrent had lacked considerable shine at ministers' December meeting.

Weekend Quiet, No Accidents But Two Fires

A quiet weekend has been reported by the Ontario Provincial Police office, with no casualties or mishaps on the highways in the Bay or Quinte District.

City police also reported a quiet weekend.

There were two fire alarms.

A marsh fire on the Massassaga Road, opposite Massassaga School, across the bay, caused concern, Sunday morning. Gusting wind fanned the blaze, but firemen were able to bring it under control and extinguish the fire.

A second alarm took the department to the King Coin Laundry on Front Street, when fire was discovered inside the steam bath. Damage was reported as nil.

FAR NORTH

Godthaab, first Danish colony in Greenland, was founded by Hans Egede in 1721.

Trenton's first Senior Citizens' apartment block officially opened on Saturday, will be known as "Quinte View Manor."

development now as he did in 1957 and 1958—before the four "wasted" years.

Canadian unemployment in those years was double the average of the Liberal years. Real income per person was down three per cent. Unless changes were made, said the government's own experts, unemployment would worsen; although it was better this year than in 1961.

Canadian prestige has diminished abroad and the government declines to be honest with the public, he said. It had a "genius for getting into trouble with its friends."

ment . . . greater social justice."

One of the first things his government would do, if re-elected, was to establish a royal commission of economists to review the taxation system so that the tax burden is borne fairly and equitably by all.

FRAMES DOLLAR PEG

Mr. Diefenbaker envisaged more processing of Canadian raw materials in Canada and more manufactured goods sold abroad. The government's action last week in pegging the Canadian dollar at 92½ cents to U.S. funds would enlarge employment opportunities for all Canadians.

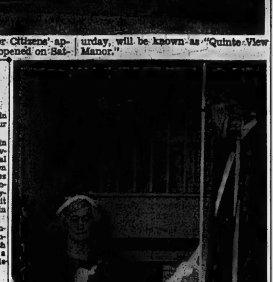
At Sault Ste. Marie, the Liberal leader said he could not think of "anything more alarming" than allowing the Conservatives another chance at national development.

"They talk about an upsurge and look what they did to the dollar."

Mr. Pearson told an audience of about 400 that figures prepared for a special committee of inquiry on unemployment insurance showed that 535,000 persons might be jobless in 1964. On the basis of these calculations about 450,000 would be unemployed this year and 488,000 in 1963.

"These are the figures prepared by the government's own experts. They are what is expected to happen unless we take effective action soon."

Has to Saw House in Two To Move It



Bargains are not always just what they seem!

At least that is the present feeling of Mr. Thomas McGraw, 2nd Concession of Thurlow Township, who during the winter purchased the vacant Vance house at Milltown to replace his home which had been destroyed by fire.

A condition of the sale was that the building be removed from the site to make way for highway improvements in the area.

Mr. McGraw bought the house for $100, but then found that before he could move it he had to saw it in two.

This chore has now been completed and today the money is moving the house to its new location five miles away.

First Apartment Building For Senior Citizens Opened

TRENTON — Any idea that Trenton's first Senior Citizens' apartment is in effect, an "old people's home," was dispelled by the various speakers at Saturday's official opening.

Emphasis was placed on the fact that the tenants will pay rent, "just like everybody" and that the Twin Pines Company, sponsors of the project, will make a small profit on the deal.

A sizeable crowd was on hand to witness the cutting of a satin ribbon (by one of the tenants, Mrs. Fred Keating), signalling the official opening; to listen to the after-dinner and local dignitaries and to tour the building.

Councillor Ed Todd, chairman of the welfare committee of town council, introduced the guests and kept the program rolling.

It was a great day for welfare administrator Gordon Davis. Mr. Davis told the crowd that he had started on the project three years ago this coming June. After getting council's approval, he started on the long uphill battle to provide adequate housing for the town's senior citizens. He chose one site after another, only to find some snag in each case. Some owners wouldn't sell. Other sites were not located within walking distance of the Protestant and Roman Catholic churches and the downtown shopping district — this is a condition of federal government aid.

Finally, Mr. Davis settled on the present site, and after meeting difficulties at every section with this location, got the program on the road.

Said Mr. Davis on Saturday, "My dream boat is on the high seas; we've hit barges and snags along the way, but now we're anchored here on this beautiful site."

HAVE PINE VIEW

Everybody commented on the beautiful site. The building has been christened "The Quinte View Manor," and that's just what it is. Tenants have a magnificent view of the bay.

Mayor James MacDonald said that while other people saw the need for senior citizen improvements, Mr. Davis had seen the need for low-rental accommodation for senior citizens and had "done something about it."

First tenants were a mother sparrow and her brood. Mrs. built her nest in a sheltered corner of the south side of the building.

Six of the apartments are rented. Five are still to be rented.

Art Musgrave, Twin Pines president, said that the Trenton building is the first of the four completed apartments sponsored by his company, to be tenanted. On completion of the Twin Pines apartments have been opened in Dundalk, Orillia and Orangeville.

Scarborough and Local Barber Shoppers Heard

By EUGENE LANG

As in years past, the Collegiate Auditorium was well filled as hundreds turned out Saturday evening to enjoy the 11th annual Harmony Night in presentation by the Belleville Chapter of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America. This style of singing is the old favorite songs of yesteryear in close harmony, and with a tremendous comeback in the last decade and has attracted thousands of participants both in Canada and the United States who are devoted to the re-creating of millions to the pleasures that listening to Barber Shop Quartet singing can bring.

On hand were five quartets and two chorus groups of songsters from Scarborough and Belleville. The Scarborough Chapter Chorus of 30 voices were the Ontario District Champions of 1958-59 and the Ontario Regional winners of 1961 and will represent this province in the International Contest to be held in Kansas City in June. In their debut appearance on stage Saturday night they proved their popularity and ability by firing their songs with their blended and balanced sonorities as drawn forth from the never ending wealth of their director, Dick Pooley.

The Belleville Chapter Chorus of nearly 30 voices again attested to their vocal attributes in their part singing. The 3 numbers they sang under the direction of Bob Acworth. The one before us, although smaller than in previous years, still maintained a high degree of efficiency in their offerings.

QUARTETTE HEARD

Part and parcel of the Scarborough Chapter Chorus are the three quartets culled from this group that were heard in advantage in all that they sang. The Gaylords (Ed Russell, tenor; Jim McCowan, lead; Ron Whiteside, baritone; Jim Russell, bass), the Four Chords (George Harwood, tenor; Dave Aughan, lead; Ken Reddick, baritone; Tom Bullough, bass) and the Blendsonders (Ray Williams, tenor; Jim McCowan, lead; Ron Cropper, baritone; Ted Ott, bass) regaled plenty of vocal meanderings in masterful stylings. The two Belleville Quartets, the Keynotes (Ken Squire, tenor; Alec Burns, lead; Bob Hall, baritone; Barrie Wood, bass) and the Bell-Vil-ains (Dalt Kaye, tenor; Ray Williams, [illegible] Keith Chambers, baritone; Ross Schryver, bass) retained their soloists in their various voicings.

Non-scheduled acts were hurriedly conjured up with "Dangerous Dan McGrew" fame by the Scarborough Chapter and the Alfred and the Lion recitation blokingly bellowed by Tom Bullough. The "Mitch Along with Hugh" fitth, in which both male and female members of the local chapter harmonized under the direction of goldeed Phil Squires with audience participation invited, fell flat owing to the fact that about half of those in the assigned choirs either didn't know the words of the songs chosen or were just failed to sing, thus making for a ragged performance.

ONE QUARTETT LATE

It was too bad that one of the visiting quartets was held up owing to a misstep along the road as this seemed to throw things off, although they did arrive for a later appearance in the second half of the show. Also, owing to microphone difficulties, the humorisms of Master of Ceremonies Phil Flagler were not clearly heard until the post intermission session. Jim Cornell, as usual, captivated with his piano stylings.

Rounding up: The program was too long, and could have been shortened by about an hour, leaving out the unnecessary long speech about the Scrboccuds Barber Shop convention. If that was needed a space between the Dangerous Dan number could have been spliced in at that point. Also appeared to be a feeling of discorganization that has not been present in previous years and we hope will be ironed out by next year's annual meeting of the Barber Shoppers. Less talking by the singers and more singing would be appreciated. However, it was an enjoyable event and as it always has been. Keep America singing, boys.

The post performance, "After the Glow," was held at the Knights of Columbus Hall, following the conclusion of the Harmony Night for its eleventh consecutive year.

OCEAN DEPTHS

The Arctic Ocean has an average depth of about 4,000 feet but reaches 17, 30 feet at its deepest part.

Mr. Robert D. Mitchell, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. Orville Mitchell, 34 Parker St., Belleville, Ont., will receive a certificate of one year Bible study from the London College of Bible and Missions tonight. Mr. Mitchell has completed a special one year course of Bible study. He is also a graduate of the Tweed High School.

BAKERIES IDLE

BUFFALO (AP) — Four major bakeries here were idle today after a strike by 300 bakery workers but no serious shortage of bread was expected. The workers walked out Saturday night after a breakdown in contract negotiations. The union said the issues were job security and working conditions.

Careless Enumerators

Nobody should be really surprised about the fuss with respect to the enumeration in the Toronto riding of Rosedale, nor about the fact that Chief Electoral Officer Nelson Castonguay has had to issue a warning that enumerators are deserving to prepare their lists by using the telephone will be fired.

In Rosedale, enumerators are alleged to have listed the names of persons who are not Canadian citizens.

Why didn't take time to ask questions—we just took names of the people in the houses," said one Rosedale enumerator.

Well, Rosedale isn't the only riding where enumerators are not being over-curious.

The enumerators who called at the writer's house did not ask any questions about citizenship, either. It is possible that they knew, or thought they knew, that the writer was a Canadian citizen. But presumption of knowledge like this cannot help but result in errors.

Another Rosedale enumerator, said he and his partner enrolled 244 names in one night. They were greedy.

Enumerators receive a basic allowance of $25 for the six-day period of enumeration, plus 10 cents for each name properly registered, so the two people made $24.40 for an evening's work. Not all enumerators will be that lucky. But they will try to get the job done as fast as they can. Nobody should blame them for that, providing they do the job right. But the temptation must be strong to cheat a little—to take a neighbor's word as to who lives in the house next door, so as to avoid calls back. And, in ridings where the number of recent immigrants is extremely high, careful enumerators could make many calls without earning a cent, because the people they contact would not be eligible for listing as voters. Enumerators thus have a vested interest in avoiding too many questions concerning eligibility.

The remedy? Rather obviously the establishment of a permanent voters' list which Prime Minister Diefenbaker has advocated for another reason — that it would make possible a reduction in the length of election campaigns.

Is This Necessary?

The Federal Department of Transport has many weighty problems—most of which it deals with efficiently and capably.

The same cannot be said for its latest attempt to regulate water traffic. Admittedly, this is a thankless task. Admittedly, too, the Department's record to date has been excellent, in having succeeded in assuring that most boats carry life preservers and in having achieved some measure of control over high-powered boats which provide the biggest threats to safe enjoyment of our waterways by swimmers, fishermen and other devotees of water sports.

The best that can be said of the Department's latest ukase, however, is that its intentions are the highest.

The Department has ruled that, effective July 1, all boats 16 feet or shorter must carry plates stating their recommended safe maximum engine power and weight capacity limits. Owners must fill out forms, giving the dimensions and weight of their craft, and from these statistics the department officials will calculate the safety limits of each boat and inscribe the plates with these recommended limits.

This hardly seems advisable.

In the first place, there are so many variables—the wind and weather, of the skill of the operator and the docility of his passengers, that these safety limits can only be approximations.

In the second place, any experienced person can judge these approximate safety limits fairly accurately, probably, if he knows his waters, much more accurately than a man working a slide rule at a desk.

In the third place, there appears to be no thought of imposing penalties for non-observance of these limits. The regulation seems only to require that these plates be affixed to the boat, not that engine power and load be kept within these limits.

In the fourth place, one would need weigh scales at every launching place to be certain weight limits were observed.

And in the fifth place, abiding by such a regulation would put most owners of small boats to a lot of trouble, measuring and weighing their craft.

A reasonable compromise would be to require all persons in the business of renting boats for hire to have these plates affixed to their boats. This would serve to safeguard most of the inexperienced. The man who owns his own boat either knows its engine and weight capacities or soon learns them from experience.

If you think you know a lot about other people's lives, getting a new ailment will quickly disabuse you of that false notion. Like my sinus infection, the other day.

For the first time, I woke up with an infected sinus, I mentioned it to a couple of people at the office and it turns out that half the population is similarly afflicted. Until I got it myself, it had never "known" anyone with the complaint.

Doubtless if I woke up with a sore throat or blood disease, the first half-dozen persons I mentioned it to would have relatives who suffered from the same ailment, at one time or another.

The same is true of almost every human infirmity — kind sanity or retardation, alcoholism or drug addiction or muscular dystrophy. It is impossible to realize the gravity of these ailments until we become a member of the suffering group.

Now we commonly aware of the great mass of miserable marriages, of the bleak failures in parent-child relationships, until we ourselves voluntarily admit to similar troubles — and then, suddenly, a wall swings open and we are admitted to the legions of fellow-sufferers.

And, until that wall swings open, we see only the carefully stories, the polished surfaces, the decor of personalities. This is life as we know it, not the crudely clear and falsely simplistic outlines of a coloring book.

This is why children often seem so cruel to their parents and us: they do not yet belong to the human race, but to the afflicted or the burdened. They are indifferent toward the unfortunate, because they have escaped, mock the mentally disturbed, because they have not yet that takes a long time to grow, and it can flourish only in the soil of one's own suffering.

For a long time, I was puzzled about why a couple I knew slightly. They are attractive, charming, decent people. They have humor, intelligence, good manners, and are superior in almost all respects. But they unconsciously annoyed me; I didn't relish their company for very long.

Suddenly the reason came to me: They are childless by choice. Nothing bad had ever happened to them; they were the golden couple, the invulnerable good fortune made them. In some ways they were inhuman. They were like enamel figurines, whom pain or reality could not touch.

Life will change for them, of course; pain will touch them, sooner than they think. And only then will they pass from childhood to adulthood; only then will they join some segment of the human race as fully fledged members of the Refugees from Eden.

AGE OF WONDER

It is interesting to note the eras through which humanity has passed.

There were times when painters and sculptors spoke in such profusion and produced such marvelous work that humanity ever after looked back upon that age as one of great creativeness. There have been ages characterized by great musical composition. There have been literary ages such as the period from 1580 to 1620 among the English speaking people.

Today we are in the midst of the most astounding era humanity has known in its history. It seems as we can do almost anything. To be sure, our artists and our musicians appear to be fewer. No writer today can be compared with Shakespeare and his Elizabethan contemporaries. But we have changed the face of the earth with our scientific and engineering skills. We have discovered the mystery of atomic structure. We have orbited the earth. And now we are casting designing glances toward the moon and some of the nearby planets. "Just wait," we are saying to them, "you're next."

This great scientific era will normally produce a genius in other eras have. Then what next? Will it be the opening up of a spiritual era? May be. Indeed, establish contacts with other planets or perhaps land upon them and a whole interplanetary or interstellar era begin? Our grandchildren — think of what they may see! Or think of what they, perhaps a middle aged person, may live to see!

Wonderful, wonderful, wonderful. What will the wells this be an age of wonder.

Who Forges Bach, Donne?

Baltimore Evening Sun

A young French painter has been arrested and charged with counterfeiting more than 1,000 works, all signed with the names of Picasso, Braque, Léger, Dufy, Modigliani and others. Their style, colors and drawings, water colors and gouaches have been copied and these forgeries fetched some $50,000. Apparently he was a good as well as a fast worker. Such impostures have plagued the history of art. They crop up in music far less frequently.

Is it any longer to the purpose of forged paintings and sculptures, since many of them go straight into private collections without expert or even public scrutiny? Or, is it easier to imitate a graphic style, than a literary or musical one? Whatever the explanation, the fact remains that nobody seems to have forged anything out new fragments by Marlowe and Shelley or undiscovered compositions by Bach and Dervak as they have Vermeers and Braques. THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Somebody must surely have written a book on it. If you have, you haven't seen it. If you took the run out of the word contemporary you would have the proper word to define the art, the painting, architecture, sculpture, poetry and music that is being produced at the present time. Temporary rather than contemporary is the word that deals with it adequately. Unlike any of the above-mentioned arts as practised in the past, not much of it is being produced, it is cheap say, today to last. To survive the skilled promotors who stage, as a commercial proposition of style, have picked on art for a racket.

The plaid of the fat ladies, they give us paintings for the frame. For three-headed calves, they present us sculptures; just a grotesque. The calliope is passed off as symphonies and their best to make up for it is the Twist and the Limbo. Designers? Take a look at those buildings.

The tongue came and went. So will cop art.

Too Valuable To Live With

Baltimore Sun

The discovery of $2,000,000 worth of stolen Cezanne canvases in a parked car (false stolen) on a Marseilles street points up the dilemma of Bonnard bequeathed to the world, living a little farther east on the Riviera with almost $1.5 million worth of paintings collected during a lifetime of devotion to the art of art.

For Mr. Maugham the paintings had become too valuable to live with. Every house he went on a trip the Picasso and Renoirs, the Matisse and the Gauguin had to be taken out of their frames and locked in a vault, and when he returned they had to be hung and restituated. The vexation of this kind of interior decorating and going in order to outwit the Riviera thieves is no way to enjoy Toulouse-Lautrec.

In London recently the novelist's art collection was sold at auction. The 18 pieces fetched $1,666,640, acknowledged by the author as "rather a lot of money for a single gentleman to get". The Mediterranean thieves and snatchers also have been known to haul away cash, but Mr. Maugham has proved that the value of money will be turned over to a literary society for aid to aged and struggling writers. Even in his best days Maugham could not have ended this endearing sort romance in pleasanter fashion.

Reason Coins Are Scarce

Cornwall, Standard-Freeholder

Money is scarce — as if you didn't know. But the shortage of coinage is severe enough in some places to cause coins to carry a premium over paper money, even though in they are no greater in monetary value.

The reason for the shortage are rather interesting. Many of the coins are used in vending machines. And the machines don't work with paper money. Furthermore, vending machines keep coins out of circulation in the hands of people at the back, which are emptied only at intervals.

Parking meters take an immense number of coins. Again the total amount of coinage in the meters amounts to tons at any given time. These, too, are impossible to get at directly.

But a greater use of small coins is found by the ever common practice of pricing goods at 99 cents, $1.99 and so on. On top of the purchase is added which takes more pennies.

The man who does a job at the mint seem like a good bet for a permanent occupation. Stamping dies and the like for the public is going to demand for a long time even though some argue that a cent will hardly buy anything anymore — and we don't.

But we need them just the same and we are now considering them, along with nickels, dimes, quarters and half dollars. Only the silver dollar among our coinage is uncommon, at oshgreebus prices only and can be spend, if you have any, since between the three arts, or perhaps something different about their collectors, connoisseurs and critics?

Simple Tips on What To Do About Poison Ivy

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Poison Ivy, poison oak and a dozen of several kinds of harmful vines, shrubs and plants. Poison ivy and poison oak have only three leaflets and can be easily distinguished from more poisonous Virginia creeper, which has five.

For the sake of clarity, I will refer to poison ivy only.

Poisoning is an allergic reaction to the oil in ivy.

Walking through a patch of it can bruise the leaves and stems enough to release the substance. You can come in contact less directly: clothing, whether yours or someone else's; an animal's hair or fur; smoke from a fire in which ivy is burning, etc. Pollen, blossoms and roots of the plant all carry the poison.

Roughly about half of all young adults are sensitive to this stuff. After 60 the sensitivity poison sumac are the common usually disappears, but not always.

I have found that a mixture of "amonium sulfide" on the plant kills it. Doubtless there are other effective chemicals, too.

Aside from avoiding the plant, there are numerous methods of prevention or treatment:

Immediate — after contact, wash thoroughly with laundry or kitchen soap. This often prevents or greatly lessens poisoning troubles.

Calamine lotion, or antihistamine drugs ease itching.

Skin preparations containing zirconium metals tend to make the poison inactive.

Skin blocking solutions, applied early, also may inactivate the poison.

If blistering occurs, compresses of boric acid, potassium permanganate, Burow's solution, or cold salt solution will be soothing. But remember that the blisters must not be stab.

In very severe cases, steroid drugs are given by mouth to ease or shorten the discomfort, but this is a job for your doctor's care.

While patent preparations may help, their over-enthusiastic use may actually aggravate some sensitive skins.

For prevention, various degrees of success have been reported by injection of weak solutions of poison ivy extract, in the process by which desensitization is performed.

The poison is present in both the leaves. And more modern methods have resulted in a 30 school extract taken in small doses six or eight weeks before the poison ivy season. Any of these preventive measures should, of course, be done under a doctor's supervision — and remember, also, that if you've been in the woods for a long time before you've broken out with an ivy rash. It's too late then.

This sort of preventive procedure may be tried only for extremely sensitive people.

For the rest of us, be careful; wash with strong soap if we have come in contact with the poisons; use one of another of the soothing applications if the rash becomes too itchy.

Obsession With Speed

Minneapolis Star

Speed, speed and more speed, Mankind has an obsession with it. In today's world men and records are set almost before the ink is dry on the last ones.

And now three air force pilots have flown from west coast to east coast in Canada in only about twice the time it takes a Metropolis motorist to travel round-trip to work on a blizzardy day.

Short decades ago the four-minute mile was held impossible, an automobile that did more than 60 m.p.h. was considered a peril to humanity and space rockets were found only in the "Sunday."

But the four-minute mile has been run and rerun, race cars have reached 400 m.p.h. speedsters have topped 1,000, the X-15, over 4,000 and Col. Glenn's spacecraft 17,500. (And the intrepid test pilots have pedalled a bicycle 109 m.p.h.)

Tomorrow's supersonic airline passengers will be whizzing routinely from Los Angeles to New York in less than an hour. The engineers say 2,500 m.p.h. is a good possibility.

Toughest problem probably has been the ability of the airport to their hotels in something like the same time.

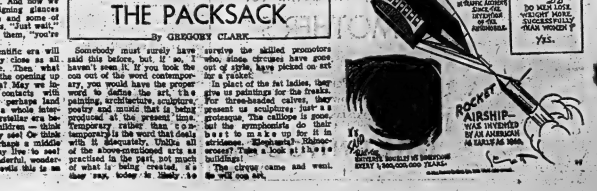
TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

BACK TALK

It takes a deal of courage to single one's self out as the victim of unfair and unintelligent back talk.

The natural born ego in us all and the desire to defend what has been attacked in us are uppermost. But the back talker knows this and plays on it. He has proved by his back talk that he cannot meet you upon your own level.



It takes the courage of character to keep your own in silence when every physical element of your nature tells you to do just the opposite. But it always pays in the end.

Silence, in the bitterness is aroused, are so silly, anyway. No one ever grew happy with an atmosphere of bitterness about one.

So you leave the back talk to the other fellow, he will have to take it away with him!

companying Brigadier Bailey on his tour of inspection were Col. Duffy, Col. Black, Brigadier M. S. Clarke, commander 13 Militia Group, and the various company commanders.

Following the inspection the regiment "marched past" led by Col. Black. The crowd rushed from the seats and other vantage points to the edge of the parade area to get a closer look. Brigadier Bailey took the salute.

Then came the traditional "review order and general salute".

REVIEWED HISTORY

In his address to the regiment, Brigadier Bailey said "it should give every red-blooded Canadian here a thrill to see this magnificent regiment on parade, it is amazing to see what has been accomplished by these men".

He paid tribute to the Hasty Pees reviewing its history. He said the militia unit was "practical and efficient".

The brigadier also paid tribute to the new commanding officer Col. Black. He marched his service record and stated he was well qualified to take over the command of the regiment.

"It is very fitting that such a magnificent parade and thousands of people honor a famous soldier in his farewell in the service. Col. Duffy gave 33 years of his life serving his country. He has served in every rank in the army".

"Col Duffy is an ideal military man who did everything for his regiment's good. Every regiment in the country is proud of his record and his efforts. I speak to him in the official thanks of the Canadian Army. Mary and Mrs. Duffy live a long, happy life".

Col. Black in an address to his regiment said that 33 years ago he did not dream he would some day command an infantry regiment. It is both an honor and a responsibility. He said the regiment is a national "insurance in peace and in war. "We of the Hasty Pees are proud to have the responsibility".

Col. Black paid tribute to Col. Duffy and his fellow officers saying he had been proud to serve under such an efficient officer, and with such fine men". I know if we Salute, Col. Duffy will be always willing to give us the advice and his knowledge gained over many years of faithful service".

Col. Duffy then delivered his farewell address to the regiment he loves and has served so well. It appears in another column.

Following Col. Duffy's address Brigadier Bailey presented Major John Pierce of Picton with the Canadian Decoration for many years' service with the army.

ENLISTED AS BOY

Col. Duffy enlisted as a boy in his home town of Trenton 33 years ago. He rose rapidly in the ranks and prior to World War Two was promoted to regimental sergeant major.

He served in this capacity with the Hasty Pees throughout the war in which he had a brilliant record.

After returning to Canada he was commissioned in the regiment and helped mold it into one of the country's finest militia units. Again the rise was meteoric. He was appointed commanding officer with the rank of Lieut.-Colonel two years ago.

He built the regiment to its present strength of some 500, said to be the largest militia regiment in Canada today.

A year ago a person or persons unknown removed the regiment's famous battle color from the armories here. Col. Duffy deeply hurt, removed his cap badge saying he would not replace it until the color was returned. He kept his word. The color is still missing.

Lieut.-Col. Black served with the artillery here and with the Essex Scottish overseas. Back in Canada he joined the 8th Anti-Tank Regiment, continuing service with the Hasty Pees. He was appointed second-in-command in 1952. He is a popular successor to Col. Duffy.

RECEPTIONS IN ARMORIES

Following the parade receptions were held in the officers' mess and the sergeants' mess in the armories.

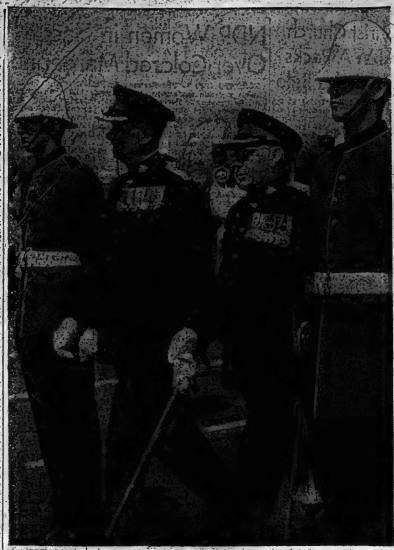
Receiving in the officers' mess were Col. and Mrs. J. B. Black, Brigadier and Mrs. Bailey, Lieut.-General and Mrs. Howard Graham, Brigadier and Mrs. M. S. Clarke and Lieut.-Col. and Mrs Angus Duffy.

RECEIVES MANY GIFTS

Many high-ranking military officials, past and present, attended the reception. Former commanding officers of the regiment include Lieut.-Col. Everett Patterson, Lieut.-Colonel B. G. Donnes, Lieut.-Colonel G. McGregor of Napanee, Brigadier Don Cameron, now Commandant of the Staff Colleges, Kingston; Lieut.-Col. W. R. Davern, Wellington, and Lieut.-Col. Mac Merritt.

Out-of-town officers included Lieut.-Col. W. Watson, Brockville; Captain Bill Greydon, Hamilton; Major F. Bozie of St. Catharines, as well as all Cars and Mrs. Carr of Port Hope and others.

Mayor A. McLean Haig and Mrs. Haig attended the parade but did not go to the reception. Mayor and Mrs. James MacDonald of Trenton were present. Mayor and Mrs. H. J. McFarland, of Picton, were unable to attend.

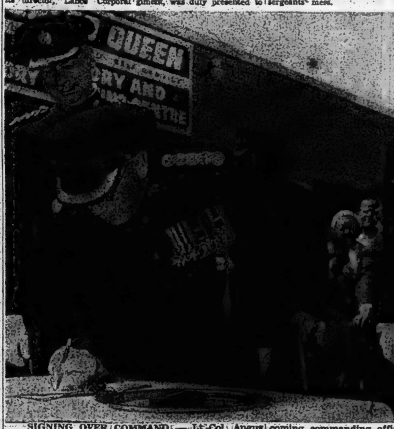


Col. Duffy received a number of "farewell" gifts prior to his departure from the regiment.

At a regimental dinner last Friday night, the officers presented him with a handsome wooden "Grandmother's Clock," the personal handiwork of regimental padre Harold Vaughan. The clock bears the engraved service record of Col. Duffy from his first enlistment. Prominent at the top of the engraved plaque is the cap badge he removed after the regimental color was found missing.

The regimental band through its director, Lance Corporal Crawford, presented Col. Duffy with a wooden plaque on which the name of each member of the band is engraved.

The traditional, pewter mug always given to commanding officers upon leaving the regiment, was duly presented to Col. Duffy during the reception. Accepting the gift the colonel said, amid laughter, "As one mug to another".



Many former non-commissioned officers of the wartime Hasty Pees were guests in the sergeants' mess.

INSPECTS TROOPS — Brigadier A. J. B. Bailey, DSO, OBE, CD, ED, Eastern Area Commander, is shown aboard as he inspects the regiment prior to the changing over of command ceremonies yesterday.

SIGNING OVER COMMAND — Lt.-Col. Angus B. Duffy is shown above as he signs over his command of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. Looking on are: Lt.-Col. Joseph Black (right) incoming commanding officer, and the honorary colonel of the Hasty Pees, Lt.-Gen. Howard D. Graham, CBE, DSO (left).

48th Highlanders, Wives Pay Visit to ANAF Club

FAREWELL

It is worthy of any effort or sacrifice you may be called on to make.

"I know the regiment is in good hands. That you will not let the proud traditions of the unit down.

"Being your commanding officer has been a wonderfully rewarding experience. I am truly grateful for your loyal support and hard work. I wish also to thank your families. Your duties as a soldier call for sacrifice on their part. I know that without the loyal encouragement of the two Mrs. Duffys in my life, my duties would have been most difficult if not impossible.

"I ask that you give Col. Black your every support. Remember, that the regiment only succeed if every member pulls his full weight. As you depend on the commanding officer, he depends on you.

"In a very few minutes I will officially leave the regiment, but, so long as I live, my heart and thoughts will be with our regiment and the men who serve it.

"May the star of your badge always shine brightly. Good soldiering, good fortune, to each and every one of you".

"God bless you."

Says Equal Opportunity Is a Myth

TORONTO (CP)—Equality of opportunity for children in Canada is a myth, Marjorie Mann of Ottawa said today at the women's federal committee of the NDP's democratic Party, said Saturday.

"In this wealthy country of Canada 1 out of every 100 children who start elementary school drop out before completing the secondary course," she told the first Ontario women's conference of the NDP.

Mrs. Mann said rural students are under the biggest handicaps.

"Wretched conditions exist in some of these schools. I can put my finger on two schools where teachers have to wait for pay cheques and students have to clean up filth before they can use their communal latrines."

Mrs. Mann did not identify the schools except to say they are both within 30 miles of Ottawa where she is a high school teacher.

Christ Church ABWA Packs Manitoba Bale

Mrs. H. Pitt presided at the regular monthly meeting of the Anglican Church Women, Christ Church, held recently. The meeting opened with a hymn followed by a period of prayer.

A brief business period followed and a sum of money was voted towards buying kindergarten chairs in the Church Kitchen.

An attractive display was arranged of articles for the bale to McKay School, at Deepdale, Manitoba. A great deal of credit is to be given to Miss Florence Ayling, Dorcas secretary for the bale, who reported the amount to date as gratifying. Contributions are made by members or from other Church women, in gratitude to Almighty God for many individual blessings. The entire amount is presented at the Diocesan W.A. annual at Kingston on May 8.

Mrs. P. Fisher, Christ Church representative to the W.O.M. Board spoke to members about the "W.O.M. Tea" to be held soon. It was decided and approved to make a donation of money to this worthwhile event.

COLORED BLINDS

Beautiful colored slides of interesting and historic parts of England were described by Mrs. H. Golden and thoroughly enjoyed by all.

Mrs. G. G. Wright closed the meeting.

The unique "Birthday Party" which followed was a delightful part of the afternoon. President Mrs. H. Pitt, extended greetings to each member present and included absent ones, for birthdays in the interval time and birthdays to come in the next 13 months.

As a token of gift, a beautifully decorated cake with each month tastefully marked was later cut and was most delicious.

Everyone appreciated the kindness of such an unusual and thoughtful gesture by the president.

NDP Women in Hassle Over Colored Margarine

TORONTO (CP) — The first Ontario women's conference of the New Democratic Party was held Sunday that farmers in this province can compete with colored margarine by selling butter to the public for cash at the farm and still make a profit.

Mrs. M. A. Corcoran, delegate from Port Arthur, said farmers "have all the chance in the world" to make money on butter and "don't even need to be subsidized."

"Farmers by my area have told me so," she said.

Mrs. Corcoran's voice was interrupted by delegates shouting: "What about the farmers' vote?"

Peggy Brevin of Toronto, conference chairman, told Mrs. Corcoran colored margarine is a provincial issue and has nothing to do with the federal election campaign.

TIPS FOR CAMPAIGNERS

The 250 delegates to the two-day conference were given tips on how to conduct themselves in the campaign by Eileen Coutts of Hampton, NDP candidate in Durham riding.

"Don't speak to farmers in their barns.

"A farmer's wife once lashed me with her tongue for speaking to her husband in the barn. Always contact the wife first.

"It's also a big asset to have a large family—you can put them out to work for you and you don't have to hire much outside help."

Mrs. Coutts has nine children, seven of them live at home; two are married.

She said she has trained her family to look after themselves while she is out campaigning.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

William H. — Among friends, I have a right to a notebook. Notebook, please.

Elsie N. — Our friends are on the spot. They have a right to a notebook, too.

William H. — I'm a painting contractor," commonly known as a Boss Painter, and all day long my attention is directed at bricks. I get them from landlords, tenants and the painters by Mrs. So when I get home I turn to the one thing that relaxes me — writing jingles and limericks in a big notebook. I write them about the events of the day. Even though some of my friends think they're good enough to be published, that's not why I write them. I do so as a hobby.

I want my wife to stop ridiculing me for this. When I pull the notebook out to show somebody, she looks at me as if I'm some kind of nut. She calls it a waste of time and says me is about using my spare time for what she calls better things, like painting our own house.

But I enjoy saying things in rhyme. It relaxes me. And I know my friends like to look through my notebook.

Elsie N. — What can our friends do? They have to be polite even if they're bored. We invite them for dinner and then comes the notebook. Bill forces them to listen. Then he makes them read it for themselves, too. I might as well be the hired girl for all the chance I get to talk to our guests. I cook and serve, and then he calls it the pleasure. Just because no one walks out he thinks his stuff is good!

If he'd only spend more time fixing things around the house, or coming with me on a few visits instead of working on that blasted thing. He'd be living in better use. It seems a shame that he keeps writing things that aren't good enough to be published, and then inflicts them on anybody he can buttonhole. There must be better ways to relax.

The Council: Bill de-prompted by Mr. Innocent: quotes that impels other men to pass around snapshots. He wants to read his clever little verses. He gets pleasures that are his. As with the snapshot-circulator, he may misinterpret politeness for enthusiasm.

Neither Bill nor Elsie, however, show any interest in distinguishing between the two on the part of their friends. He keeps right on declaiming, defiantly and self-satisfied, and she keeps right on assuming all present enjoyed Bill, are writhing in agony. So the problem here is for him to choose his audience more selectively, picking one or two guests who really enjoy word-building and who may themselves be secret poets (millions are!). And for her, to persuade that some of the company may honestly relish Bill's literary method of recording his experiences.

As for those who don't, a deliberately dull, flat, matter-of-fact stunt and it suggests ways to wriggle out from under, such as the need to make a phone call, help with the dishes or fill the bucket.

While we hesitate to pour cold water on Bill's literary efforts, we must remind him that they can't possibly be as chuckley or titillating to others as they are to him. So restraint in unloading them on good-natured visitors is suggested. Also, he'd better not be so carried away with his own pooh-pooh knack that he begs Elsie's share of attention from their mutual friends. That deprivation may be eating her more-than she'll admit. She's fed up with having her dinner parties turn out to be mere rises for enticing an audience to one of Bill's readings.

One idea might be for a gathering at which Bill recites poems about each one present. That would hold interest. Another suggestion is for Bill to round up his own coterie, with each reciting to his heart's content, while Elsie skips off to the movies.

Bill's hobby is innocent enough. His flair would be highly appreciated by fraternal organizations preparing luncheon programs, and by other would-be hymnsters. He must guard against inflicting it on unsuspecting, unselected pals.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

KNOW YOUR OWN DRINKING LIMITS

"Social drinker" can sometimes be a social booster when he forgets his social obligations. In fact, he can be a bore and a menace to the party.

Whether a person wishes to drink or not is purely a matter of personal taste. The trouble is that here and there a drinker likes the taste so much he doesn't know when to stop.

That's when the wise and wary hostess steps in and plays as a red light. But if her timing is off, her overstructured guest might go straight through it.

The real responsibility for drinking within the limits of one's capacity is with the drinker himself. Unfortunately, at times a person is so impressed with his gay conversation and sudden wit that he doesn't realize he's really not amusing.

It's up to each guest to recognize the danger signals. When they flash, it's time to stop and switch to straight ginger ale.

Here are some of the signposts at which you should stop and consider if you've had enough:

You relate the story of your life, first you go way back to the age of two.

You tell the stories you heard at lunch during the week, forgetting the group includes women with their feminine slant on humor.

You slap people on the back because you have suddenly developed a deep affection for them.

You "brilliantly" refute points made by someone for whom you have suddenly developed a deep hatred.

You tell your hostess she ought to go on a diet.

You back people into corners so they can give undivided attention to what you have to say.

All your ups and downs are twisted.

You help yourself to another drink, rather than wait for patiently for the host to wander up and make another round.

You begin to feel that the fellow next to you has a low opinion of your intelligence which, of course, is higher than his.

You discover that sitting on the floor is more comfortable than sitting on something high.

You suddenly develop a strong attachment for your hostess — or someone gives you a strong attachment for your hostess — outside.

Give her the good old bear hug around the shoulders.

You lean on people.

Remember, you're really not drunk, but the above examples will show you that you're getting there fast.

So, be polite and slow down before someone gives you a strong attachment for your hostess — outside.

Trout Season

by Mary Moore

On the bank of the Ottawa river on Good Friday hundreds of men and boys were fishing for Mad Push — or is it Pike? To me they are little pushes. But to fussy eaters fishermen they mean many a luscious plateful of crisp delicate fillets — preferably for dinner.

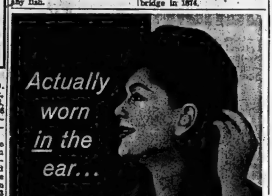
When I returned home Bruce was looking forward to the trout season and the papers were full of trout talk.

Let the men catch and clean the fish. Let the women cook them.

MONDAY

Dinner Menu

Pork Chop Baked in Celery Soup-Sauce; Green Beans with Brown Butter; Glazed Parsnips; Cabbage Salad; Shredded Fresh Pineapple with Cookies; Coffee.



TROUT — THREE WAYS.

Number One: (Skemiere). 6 or 8 averaged-sized trout, ½ cup flour, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 4 to 6 tablespoons butter or margarine, 2 tablespoons minced parsley, juice of 1 lemon.

Have your husband clean the fish. Dry them with a clean cloth. Add the salt and pepper to the flour in a bag and shake the fruit in this. Saute in hot butter or margarine in heavy frying pan for about 3 heavy frying pan for about 5 minutes. When brown, turn and saute on other side for about 3 minutes more. Transfer to warm serving dish. Sprinkle with parsley. Add a sprinkling of salt and pepper if desired. Add lemon juice to the brown butter in the pan and when foamy, pour over the trout.

Number Two: (Skirmay). Remove the back bones from 6 cleaned trout without breaking fish. Arrange on buttered shallow baking dish. Dissolve 1 chicken bouillon cube in ¾ cup hot water. To this liquid add 1 tablespoon lemon juice. Pour over fish and bake at 350 degrees Fahr. for 25 minutes, basting occasionally. Remove from oven and pour over Mornay Sauce. Melt 2 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 cup milk, 2 tablespoons fish cream, ¼ teaspoon salt, shake of white pepper, ¾ cup grated Cheddar or Swiss cheese—½ cup grated Parmesan cheese, 1 egg yolk. Melt butter, blend in flour, then stir in milk until thick. Add next 3 ingredients; stir until cheese melts. Beat egg yolk, then stir in some of the hot mixture and return to pan; cook 2 or 3 minutes longer, stirring. Pour Mornay Sauce over baked fish. Place under the broiler 3 inches from the heat and broil until the surface is nicely glazed and goldflecked.

Number Three: (with Cucumber Sauce). Saute or bake trout as in either of above recipes. Do not add the baking sauces as above but serve the following trout with Cucumber Sauce: One-half cup dairy sour cream, 1 tablespoon vinegar, ¼ teaspoon salt, dash cayenne pepper, 1 medium-sized cucumber, pared, chopped and drained. Whip sour cream, add vinegar, beating. Fold in seasonings and well-drained cucumber. Delicious with almost any fish.

Historical Sites in Prince Ed. County Need Historical Plaques

PICTON — There are a number of historical sites in Prince Edward County which qualify for erection of historical plaques by the Ontario Archaeological and Historic Sites Board," stated Dr. G. F. Stanley, Eastern representative on the Board, following a weekend inspection. However, Dr. Stanley stressed that all claims for recognition as historic sites must be fully substantiated with proof that leaves no doubt as to claim made. Such sites should not just have a local interest, but provincial or national association.

Dr. Stanley expressed himself as greatly impressed as a result of the visit arranged by Capt. Jack Rogers, president of Prince Edward Historical Society and the interest shown by representatives of many organizations which attended a meeting at the Royal Hotel, Saturday night, and an afternoon tea on Sunday.

ROAD NAMES

A suggestion advanced by County Warden John Fox brought forth endorsement by Dr. Stanley and others that county roads have been numbered, the Warden felt that they might carry names as well. Many are picturesque, such as Ferrida and Christian Street each having some historical significance. Names suggest so much more than just numbers, Dr. Stanley commented.

GROUPS REPRESENTED

Great interest was evidenced in the meeting attended by Jack Rogers, president; Willis McCabe, vice-president; Gordon T. Walmsley, treasurer and historian; Lindley Calnan, secretary; Dr. J. Howard Walmsley executive member of the County Historical Society; Jay Hepburn representing P.E. Chamber of Commerce; Basil Freeman, Rotary Club; Bob Norval, Kiwanis Club; Laverne Hegadorn, Kiwanis Club; Bill Smith, Quinte Isle Tourist Association; Fred Hem West, Quinte Regional Tourist Council; Phil Dodds, Horticultural and Agricultural Societies; Mrs. Ann Elson, University Women's Club; Mrs. Thera Falconer, Business and Professional Women's Club; Warden J. Fox, County Council; Mayor H. J. McFarland, Town Council, Mrs. H. J. McFarland, Mrs. George McCaw, Women's Institutes; Mr. and Mrs. Dave Taylor; Dr. and Mrs. Stanley.

According to Dr. Stanley all efforts in this field should be made through the Historical Society.

INTEREST INCREASING

Capt. Rogers, who presided, said that interest in historical matters is not lacking but it is not easy to find people to translate this interest into action and hoped, the meeting would lead to necessary steps being taken to have historical sites marked and to see that the history and traditions of "The County" are preserved.

Interest locally has been increased by articles by Patricia. (Calnan) Taylor and Phil Dodds in The Gazette, and it has also been influenced by increased interest in historical matters in the district, Capt. Rogers mentioned.

He instanced the historic plaque in Hallowell to Sir Peter Henry, the active society, museum and McPherson house restoration in Napanee, the Hastings society and museum in Belleville, the U.E.L. park, Memorial cemetery and museum at Adolphustown, the old Methodist church and the Sir John A. Macdonald cairn at Hay Bay, as evidence of growing interest in things historical, of their value, and need of preservation.

A large map of the county on display showed 34 historic spots marked, with a dozen or more which might be authenticated as historic sites.

Mr. Rogers felt a brochure, giving details of historic sites would fill a real need. He quoted Yacht Club Commodore J. M. Hardwick as noting 70 historic points close to the water between Kingston and Trenton.

MAYOR OFFERS SUPPORT

Mayor H. J. McFarland offered his full support in any way to the society. "I feel that history of the past should be preserved for the children of today and for future generations," he said.

CHURCH HISTORY

Dr. J. H. Walmsley spoke of the old church of St. Mary Magdalene as worthy of being marked as an historic site.

The Rev. William Macauley established a day school near the church site in 1819 (little of it remains), while the old church was established in 1823 and erected in 1825. A service is held there once a year, Mr. Macauley, the first rector, and a leader in local affairs, suggested the name Picton for Niven after his friend, Sir Thomas Picton.

HISTORICAL SITE

Gordon T. Walmsley spoke of historical spots in Prince Edward but a number cannot be documented sufficiently to qualify as official historic sites. Included were an Indian mission near Waupoos, the first white settlers (at East Lake, Col. Henry Young, 1783), and in Ameliasburg, John Wesley, also 1783; the first mill—Coogers—established in 1789 near the White Chapel (built 1809) and now marked as an historic site; second oldest mill, 1795, built by Joseph Allen and owned by the late Judith Robinson at Waupoos; third oldest mill, built 1796 by Col. Vanalstine at Glenora.

Mr. Walmsley referred to the county seat as still the same today as when built in 1838; the building, corner of Main and Bridge Street, where Sir John A. Macdonald had his office (the archives contain details of his appearing in the county seat on a charge of assault, being acquitted, also of his first law case there.

Homes with histories included the Manor House at Wellington (also known as Heydonholds homestead), built in 1792. Three other old homes, of stone, built by Archibald Alexander Mackenzie, are those occupied by Dr. Walmsley, Alex. Lemon and R. L. Perrin.

Other historical points include the site of Hovington House, built, 1790, but all trace disappeared. Mr. Walmsley's talk illustrated that the county is rich in historical traditions.

Mayor McFarland presented a cheque to Dr. Stanley and in turn was thanked by Captain Rogers for providing facilities for the weekend gatherings.

Though the best part of two days were spent in Prince Edward, Dr. Stanley was unable to make a complete inspection or to visit various collections in which he is interested. However, his visit acquainted him at first hand with many facts that will be helpful when claims for marking of historic sites is requested.

OFFER SUGGESTIONS

Suggestions offered during the meeting included preservation not only of larger relics of pioneer days, but all types of records and photographs—it being advisable to have photos taken currently to show changing trends in architecture, and to record history which, might be eliminated by fire or passing time.

Capt. Rogers stated a meeting of the County Society will be held in June to put into action some of the things needed in connection with the preservation of Prince Edward's history, past and present.

Pegging Dollar Costly Blunder Says Douglas

TORONTO (CP)—T. C. Douglas, leader of the New Democratic Party, said Sunday the government's decision to peg the dollar at 92 cents is "the latest of a long series of blunders in the whole field of monetary policy."

He said Finance Minister Fleming's "attempts to maintain the dollar" have already cost the country $400,000,000.

"Since 1960 the government has virtually imposed an additional tariff of about 12 per cent on everything that enters Canada—this applies even to items that are supposed to be tariff free," he said.

Mr. Douglas said that in 1960 Canada's dollar stood at 97.05 in relation to U.S. currency. Today it stands at 92.5 cents—a difference of 13.5 per cent.

"The fancy position that light money brought about the situation where they had to push the panic button."

The government should have kept the dollar "find its own level in the early stages."

Mr. Douglas said he plans to expand on this at a meeting he was expected to address in Cornwall Monday night.

CURTAIL CONFERENCE

But doubt was cast over his possible appearance when party leaders hustled him off from his press conference to shake off what he termed "a stomach bug."

The NDP leader told reporters he had got rid of the cold he had last week but had "a touch of stomach flu. I hope to shake it off in a couple of days," he said.

His campaign staff cancelled appearances at the first women's conference of the NDP in Ontario and at a "Sunday school" for Ontario NDP candidates.

Before cutting off the press conference after a half hour, Mr. Douglas reiterated that the NDP stands for "no nuclear arms for Canada" and "no nuclear arms for Canadian troops anywhere."

"I find it intolerable that Canadians are being asked to vote for parties which have no clear policy on this life-and-death issue.

The attitude of the Liberals and Conservatives appeared to be one of "vote now, nuclear weapons later."

LISTS POLICY AIMS

Mr. Douglas said other points in the NDP's foreign policy platform are:

1. Work to strengthen the United Nations and its agencies;

2. Give dynamic leadership in the promotion of universal disarmament;

3. Support the forces of freedom against all forms of totalitarianism;

4. Steadily enlarge Canada's program of economic aid, loan and technical assistance to underdeveloped countries to two per cent of the national income.

Canada must be prepared to "undertake a vast program of economic aid and technical assistance" to new countries, he said.

Mr. Douglas scoffed at suggestions that the NDP is losing support in Quebec and Ontario. A reporter had told him results of a public opinion poll showing this trend.

"West of the Great Lakes the Liberals haven't got off the ground," Mr. Douglas said.

He had just completed a campaign swing through the Prairies.

"The main battle in this area will be fought between the Conservatives and the New Party," he said.

Socreds Plan To Restore National Unity

— Thompson

By JOHN YORSTON

QUEBEC (CP) — Robert N. Thompson listed Social Credit's plans to "restore a national unity" Sunday as he officially opened the party's election campaign to a damp, chilly hall on the Quebec exhibition grounds.

The party's national leader said a Social Credit government would "bring the constitution back" from Britain, give Canada a national anthem and ensure respect for the two main cultures by giving them "adequate representation" in the administration of the country.

He also proposed creation of a department of federal-provincial affairs which would co-ordinate and study developments and federal policies affecting the provinces.

Mr. Thompson spoke mainly in English to a crowd—most in quite a chill and damp of the ball—estimated by party officials at 4,000. He opened his remarks in French.

He was accompanied on the speaker's stand by 68 of the 75 candidates named by the party to contest seats in Quebec.

CONTESTING ALL SEATS

They included Deputy National Leader Real Caouette, who sat as a Social Credit member of Parliament from 1946 to 1958, and who said the party will contest all 75 of Quebec's seats and that it will win 50 of them.

Today Mr. Thompson was in Montreal while Mr. Caouette was headed for British Columbia.

Mr. Thompson said he didn't want to make a political question out of a flag and an anthem —"symbols of national unity." The matter would be confided to "a non-political representative commission" by a Social Credit government.

Social Credit, he said, supports provincial autonomy as defined in the British North America Act. Any changes should be agreed to by the provinces affected.

Canada "stands in need of unity, not uniformity."

"Social Credit says Canada is a federation of peoples of two great nations, supported by millions from other nations, now joined to form a great nation of their own which is Canada."

Mr. Thompson said a department of federal-provincial affairs could study re-allocation of tax fields between the federal and provincial governments.

It would be "a natural follow-through" to the provincial premiers' meetings or gatherings such as the Resources for Tomorrow conference held in Montreal last September.

Pearson Heads Into Own Riding Of Algoma East

By ARCH MacKENZIE

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP)—Liberal Leader Pearson heads tonight into his Northern Ontario riding of Algoma East for a two-day tour.

Meanwhile, Liberal party strategists will be reviewing the June 18 election campaign so far.

It will be an appraisal of what has been and what has not been said, of crown reactions to certain program points, of the general enthusiasm region-ally and the way the party structure has been bearing the strain of a jet-age campaign tour.

Since the first formal campaign speech at Charlottetown April 25, Mr. Pearson has travelled from Prince Edward Island to Newfoundland, thence to Washington, Toronto and the four Western provinces.

He now stands poised on the edge of the 52 Ontario seats regarded as vital to any party hoping to form the government after June 18.

He has laid down party dogma on trade, defence, some social welfare, agriculture and certain regional matters such as the Columbia River question. More is expected to be heard about education and the federal plan for national health care.

FIRST CROWD WAS BEST

His largest crowd was his first—about 1,200 at Charlottetown. His liveliest perhaps was at the Toronto nomination of Leonard (Red) Kelly of Toronto Maple Leafs as candidate in York West—Although some had been cold.

He has demonstrated an ability to react to crowd enthusiasm, which is regarded as one of the biggest changes between the Pearson of 1962 and the Pearson of 1963.

Even when visibly tired, as during some of the long days in Western Canada, he still was strong-voiced and able to bear down on program points or criticisms of government that he considered important.

No part of the remaining campaign is expected to be any more demanding physically than last week in Western Canada—where some days lasted 18 hours.

But the campaign is really just starting. The flag has been shown in areas where no second visit will be made. The issues have been outlined.

The real showing of strength among the parties will come later when the major cities become stages for well-planned rallies like the London inaugural of Prime Minister Diefenbaker.

Mantle, Maris Stage Power Blasts

Four Homers Doubles, 6 Runs

By BOB GREZEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

Mickey Mantle and Roger Maris, "New York Yankees" famed M and M boys, put on their mood swooning power display of the season Sunday as the American League leaders split a doubleheader with Washington Senators.

They hit back-to-back home runs in the first inning of the second game—the first time this season they have accomplished the feat—and finished the long afternoon with a total of seven hits, six runs, two doubles, four home runs, seven runs batted in and 21 total bases.

Maris also chipped in with a fantastic leaping catch that robbed the Senators' Ken Aspromonte of a homer in the game.

It wasn't enough to make it a sweep, however, as the Senators came up with a three-run burst in the eighth inning of the opener and won it 4-3. New York won 12-6 in the nightcap.

The split cut the Yankees lead to 1½ games over Baltimore Indians and Minnesota Twins, both clubs winning single games. The Indians beat Kansas City Athletics 5-1 and Bernie Allen's ninth-inning homer brought Minnesota a 10-7 victory over Detroit Tigers. Chicago White Sox and Boston Red Sox split, the Red Sox winning the first 3-2, the White Sox the second 5-3. Los Angeles Angels bombed Baltimore Orioles 15-7.

TOSSES NO-HITTER

In Saturday action, Bo Belinsky of Los Angeles tossed the first American League no-hitter since 1956, defeating Baltimore Orioles 2-0. It was the first time in the Orioles' nine season in the league they had been hitless.

Belinsky, 25, was in trouble in the fourth inning when two walks and an error loaded the bases but he settled down to strike out Dave Nicholson and force Don Hansen to fly out, ending the inning.

In other Saturday play, the Yankees defeated Washington 7-6; Boston beat Chicago 8-3; Minnesota knocked off the Tigers 7-2; and Cleveland and Kansas City split a doubleheader, Kansas winning the first 15-5 and the Indians the night cap 5-2.

Mantle had a 409 homer in the first game against the Senators, and added two more in the nightcap, boosting his total to six. Maris hit his fifth in the second game.

A three-run rally in the eighth, featuring Gene Woodling's pinch-hit homer, Jimmy Piersall's double, an error and two sacrifices, allowed Washington's Dave Stenhouse to win the first big league start in the opener. New York Jim Bouton got the Senators on seven hits in the second.

BLANKS KANSAS CITY

Jim (Mudcat) Grant, on a weekend pass from the army, shutout Kansas City on three hits for six innings, before giving way to Sam McDowell and Don Allen, at Detroit, where by Willie Kirkland was the key blow as the Indians handed Norm Siebern his fourth straight loss.

Also, a Minnesota rookie bonus boy from Purdue slammed a three-run homer into the rightfield bleachers with one out in the bottom of the ninth as Detroit lost its fifth straight. It was the seventh victory in eight games for the Twins, who also got a three-run homer from Zoilo Versalles, Bill Bryton homered for the losers.

Chicago veteran Turk Lown struck out three men in a row, chopped off a three-run Boston rally in the ninth and preserved the White Sox's nightcap victory.

Gary Geiger's first hit of the season off a left-hander drove in the Red Sox winning run in the first game and planed the loss on Juan Pizzaro.

Los Angeles banged out 19 hits off six Baltimore pitchers in their fourth straight victory. Lee Thomas had four singles, a double for the Angels, Brooks Robinson hit a grandslam homer for the losers.

'Decidely' Wins Derby Classic

Rodriguez Stops Bahama

NEW YORK (AP)—Luis Rodrigues, welterweight contender from Cuba, took his sixth straight victory by stopping middleweight Yama Bahama of the Bahamas in three rounds Saturday.

Dr. Harry Kleiman ordered the scheduled 10-rounder halted after the third round ended because of deep cuts over both of Bahama's eyes.

The favored Cuban opened an early wound on Bahama's forehead, about an inch over his right eye, early in the first round of the televised fight. It bled freely.

In the third, Rodriguez's two-fisted combinations ripped the skin over Yama's left eye. Then Dr. Kleiman intervened.

It was the second time Bahama had been stopped in 29 pro fights. The first was eight years ago.

Rodriguez, the No. 2 welter, outpointed Bahama Nov. 16, 1960.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Decidedly, surprise winner of the Kentucky Derby in record time Saturday, led the way from Churchill Downs today amid controversy, almost blotter at times, over the hardness of the track.

Decidedly skimmed over the 1¼-mile racing strip in 2:00.4, clipping a full second off Whirlaway's standard of 2:01.4 which had stood since 1941. Decidedly finished 2¼ lengths in front of another surprise, Roman Line, who beat Ridan by a neck in a photo finish.

Leroy Jolley, trainer of the beaten favorite, Ridan, and his father, Moody Jolley, were the most outspoken.

"It was like running over a concrete highway," said Moody who also is a trainer. "At least five horses broke the record. And you can't tell me there were five horses in that race better than Whirlaway".

"I can't see any excuse for having a track that hard," said Leroy. "But it is all over, and now we'll start worrying about the year later."

WORRIES ABOUT ANKLE

Chuck Parke, trainer of stablemate Admiral's Voyage, said the hard track didn't help his horse's bad ankle.

"It may have been a little too hard" said Buddy Hirsch, trainer of Royal Attack, who finished 10th.", but there was nothing you could do about it."

Tom Kelly, although appearently none too pleased by the ride given Sunrise County by Willie Shoemaker, said: "The track was O.K. for me. We came to run on a fast track and we got it." Sunrise County wound up fifth after getting a burning pace of 1:10.2 through the first six furlongs.

Without putting it in so many words, Kelly made it plain that he thought Shoemaker should have held Sunrise County back off the fast early pace.

Wathen Knebelkamp, president of Churchill Downs, said no special effort was made for the hard track. Rain came early in the week and another light one Friday had resulted in the hard footing, he said.

TRAINER HAPPY

There was no grips from trainer Horatio Luro, the dashing Argentine who had Decidedly at his peak for the big race for owner George Pope, Jr., who bred the gay son of Determine, 1954 Derby winner at his El Peco Ranch at Madera, Calif.

"Bill (Hartack) followed my instructions to a letter," said Luro. "I showed him pictures of how Carry Back came from far back last year and told him that over the last 20 years the last quarter-mile of the Derby had been run in around 25 seconds."

Luro said he figured Decidedly could run the last quarter in around 24 seconds. He caught his colt in 24.2 seconds as Decidedly moved up from fifth place at the mile, took over third one-eighth of a mile from the finish and then pulled away in the final 16th.

"I don't think this horse has reached his peak," said Luro. "As a two-year-old he was puny and rather thin and I doubted whether he would be able to go 1¼ miles.

AGUA CALIENTE, Mexico (AP) — A California mother of five won $66,659 at the Caliente horse races Sunday.

Mrs. Virginia Blackwell of Redlands, assisted by her husband, picked all six winners in the fifth through 10th races to win first money in the pool.

Defeat Edmonton 3-0

Wings Game Off Cup

QUELPH (CP) — The sharpshooting Hamilton Red Wings are one game away from their first Memorial Cup.

They whitewashed Edmonton Oil Kings 3-0 Saturday night on goals by their top marksmen to take a commanding 3-1 lodge in the best-of-seven final. The fifth game is at Kitchener Tuesday night.

Lowell MacDonald, scoring champion in the regular Ontario Hockey Association Junior A season, and Pit Martin, who ranked second, picked up the Hamilton goals. MacDonald scored twice.

Edmonton had an edge in the see-saw play of the scoreless first period. In the second, MacDonald, who had already missed on a couple of big chances, rapped in Martin's rebound after a goal - mouth scramble.

MacDonald repeated almost midway through the third frame when he rifled a 30 - foot screened shot past the Kings' Harricoe Gray.

Just 36 seconds later Martin put the contest on ice, breaking in off left wing and beating Gray on the short side.

Kings coach Bus Brayshaw attributed his squad's loss to failure to shoot.

"We're right back where we were in the first and second games," he said despairingly.

Hamilton coach Eddie Bush coined confidence. His post-game comment: "We're just getting back in form."

The Wings dropped the third game 4-3 after trimming the Kings in the first two encounters.

Buddy Blom, erratic in the Hamilton nets in the first three contests, settled down to rack up the first shutout of the series. Gray continued to come up with fine saves in a losing cause.

Moss on 'Better' Road

LONDON (AP)—Britiay racing ace Stirling Moss, in hospital two weeks with severe injuries, is well on the road to recovery.

He was out of bed for more than an hour Sunday—his first time up since he was taken to hospital after crashing at 115 miles an hour in a race. Moss, 32, was chatting and joking with friends in his old style.

"It was his best day so far," said Peter Walker, Moss' friend and racing boss.

Moss has a broken left leg, ankle and shoulder and injuries to his head and ribs.

He shot rounds of 68, 69, 72 and 68 for a total of 275 and finished four strokes ahead of Eric Brown of Britain.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

Spring brings the tulips, robins, pussy willows, moon-eyed maidens, self-eyed swains, pool cataloguers, fielding rods and baseball predictions.

Each year three or four of this department's Prophets' Division come up with their predictions of how the National and American Leagues will wind up with a disdain for the world series champions.

Not one of them has hit the jackpot. Not one has come even close, but they try every year in the belief that while there is life and baseball league, there is hope.

An American sportswriting seer tiring of pulling the wrong rabbits out of the prognostication hat, has reversed his system. Instead of calling the winners he predicts what WON'T happen.

On May 8th, he says, George Weiss of the Mets, will announce he has purchased Whitey Ford from the Yankees for $350,000. "They did it because they like me," he says.

On May 9 Weiss buys Warren Spahn from the Braves for $287,000. "They did it because they like me," Weiss says.

On May 11 Weiss buys Vernon Law from the Pirates for $200,000. "Law wanted to play at a quiet place," Weiss says. "Besides they like me in Pittsburgh."

May 15th—Playing in Chaves Ravine the Dodgers take a 19-game lead. President Walter O'Malley explains that he'd built the new park around personnel he had. "I believe in posterity," he said, "but only up to a point".

May 16—George Weiss trades Ekio Chacon to San Francisco for Orlando Cepeda. "I'm afraid we gave up too much for what we got," Weiss says.

June 14—Mets drop to tenth place and Casey Stengel says: "What's the use of telling your men to execute if they don't execute?" George Weiss is fired and replaced by Frank Lane.

June 14th—Just before midnight Frank Lane announces he has made nine trades—one with each of the clubs in the National League. Nobody can tell the players any more, even with a scoreboard.

June 17th—Mickey Mantle hits his 44th home run but declares this is his last year in baseball. His services are urgently needed in the haberdashery business that was taken over for him when it couldn't meet the terms of his endorsement contract.

July 4th—Yankees clinch pennant on Roger Maris' home run in the ninth, his fourth of the season. "I think I know what I've been doing wrong," says Maris.

July 13th—Mets' winning streak of 21 puts them three games behind the Dodgers. "I can't take credit for this team," says Lane. "It's a team that George Weiss, bless him, built. But that's baseball."

July 20th—Dodgers drop to second place behind the Mets and Bennie Bavasi, the general manager, says: "The Mets are a freak. They can't hold up. But I'm fixing every player on the team $150 just to let them know I'm underpaid. We need to win the pennant to pay off some of the mortgages on this ball park. By the way notice the way the concrete is cracking?"

August 15th—Nothing happens this day just as nothing happens the whole month of August. Everybody is on vacation anyway.

September 13th—Mets clinch the National League pennant. "I couldn't have done it without my players", says Casey Stengel. Lee Angeles Dodgers go into receivership. Gene Autry arrives to help by backing Champion, but O'Malley says "Thanks a lot. My trouble is deeper than that." A move gets under way in Brooklyn to set up a fund to save Walter O'Malley.

October 4th—Mets sweep Yankees four straight in world series. "I could done it in three if I didn't have to nurse my lousy pitchers," says Stengel.

Musial Hits3-Run Blast

Willie Mays Hot, Has 10 Homers

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer

Willie Mays, the bubbling "any boy kid" of yesteryear, is leading the major leagues with 10 home runs.

Mays, 31, celebrated his Monday Sunday in Chicago with three hits including a two-run homer, in the San Francisco Giants 7-5 victory over Chicago Cubs.

Until Willie got hot, critics were comparing him unfavorably with Mays, Orlando Cepeda, On the night of April 27, Mays was hitting a sick .211.

In a 10-game streak, Willie has hammered out 17 hits in 37 trips, hit six homers and driven in 16 runs while traveling at a .459 pace. As a result his average is .306.

In other National League action Sunday, Stan Musial, 41, hit a three-run homer that gave the St. Louis Cardinals a 5-4 win over Cincinnati Reds after the Reds had beaten St. Louis in the opener 5-4.

LOST TOTAL

Warren Spahn, who has posted his winning total to 313 games by pitching Milwaukee Braves to a 5-3 victory over Houston Colts in the first game, Dick Farrell, relief man turned starter, evened matters for Houston by going the route for a 9-2 decision in the nightcap.

Gil Hodges, 38, came through with a single with the bases loaded in the 12th inning for a 7-6 New York Mets' victory against Philadelphia Phillies. A scheduled second game was the winner.

Mets Make Two Deals

Cards Get Bobby Shantz

NEW YORK (AP)—Another chapter is beginning to be checkered baseball career of Bobby Shantz.

The diminutive lefthander was shipped to St. Louis Cardinals by Houston on Sunday as major league rosters were shrunk a bit of shuffling. Shantz went to the Cards for outfielder Carl Warwick and right-handed pitcher Jack Lamabe.

The busiest team was New York Mets. They made two deals including the purchase from Zimmer, first-baseman Jim Marshall and southpaw Vinegar Bend Mizell. The Mets sent Marshall to Pittsburgh Pirates for lefthanded Hitter Dick Stuart to Cincinnati Reds for third-baseman Cliff Cook and left-handed pitcher Bob Miller.

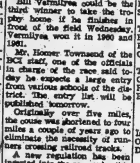
Shantz, 36, and in his 14th big league season, was voted the most valuable player in the American League in 1952 when he had a 24-7 won-lost record with Philadelphia Athletics.

The Mets picked seven 150-pounder went from the Athletics, the New York Yankees, three each from both the Houston expansion draft, Washington, Senators took men from the Yanks in the 1960 American League draft, traded them to Pittsburgh two days later and Houston chose him from the Pirate roster in the National League draft last year.

WON SEASON OPENER

Shantz was the Colts' opening-day winner, 11-2 over the Chicago Cubs, and is 1-1 for the 1962 season.

Warwick is a 27-year-old former Los Angeles Dodger used as an extra outfielder and pinch hitter by the Cards. Anderson, 29, had no record with St. Louis in five relief appearances.



Mizell was a frontliner for the Cardinals before going to the Pirates in mid-season in 1960. He helped Pittsburgh to the pennant that year, finishing with a 14-5 mark. The 31-year-old lefty was 7-10 last season and 1-1 this year.

He was the most valuable player in the American Association last season, when he batted .311 with 23 homers and 119 runs batted in for Indianapolis.

Miller—the second Bob Miller among Met pitchers—relieved in six games for Cincinnati this year with no decisions.

Zimmer was a starting light for the Mets in pre-season work but has been in a slump, showing only a .077 average. The 35-year - old third baseman formerly played for the Dodgers and Chicago Cubs.

Marshall, 30, served the Mets as a first baseman, outfielder and left-handed pinch hitter and goes to the Pirates with a

Ken Colling Memorial Race Wed.

The annual Quinte District Secondary School Cross Country Memorial Race on Wednesday starting 4.30. from the Belleville Collegiate Institute grounds.

The race was inaugurated last year as a tribute to the memory of the late Kar A. Colling, former sports editor of The Belleville Intelligencer.

Other post-race presentations Mr. Colling will present the trophy, other awards and cups to participants.

The trophy becomes the permanent possession of a runner who wins it three years in a row. This has occurred twice, Harold Bowen of Picton and each winning the race in each of the first three years.

Bill Varmilyea could be the third winner to take the trophy home if he finishes first in the field Wednesday. Varmilyea won it in 1960 and 1961.

Mr. Hooper Townsend of the C.I. staff, one of the officials in charge of the race said today he expects a large entry from various schools of the district. The entry list will be published tomorrow.

Beats Casper In Duel

Palmer Wins 'Champions'

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—Arnold Palmer holed a 25-foot putt for a birdie on the final hole Sunday to win the $16,000 Tournament of Champions golf show and defeat Billy Casper in a sparkling duel.

The two former U.S. Open champions came in on the final hole all even. But Palmer, putting from the edge of the green while a gallery of more than 9,000 watched, sank his last putt to win the $11,000 jackpot. He got a birdie three for a four-under-par 68 and a 72-hole total of 276.

Casper got a par four on the hole, also a 68 for the day, and a total of 277 for second-place money of $6,000.

Earl Stewart Jr., a teaching pro from Dallas, and Doug Sanders waged their own little war for third place. Stewart, 40, shot a 70 for 278, Sanders had a 72 for a 280.

George Knudson of Toronto, the only Canadian in the tournament, fired a 75 for a 294 total and a $1,000 prize.

"Who Cares For the (Hic) Hooks"

STIRLING, Scotland (AP) — The fish of the River Endrick started drinking like men. They are so cloyed they just gave themselves up.

It happened Friday night when a nearby distillery accidentally leaked thousands of its whisky into the river. Astonished anglers saw salmon and trout wavering drunkenly through the water, and began scrambling at hooks and reeling the haul to shore with no more than a drowsy flick of the line.

Most of the surrendering fish were put back to sleep it off.

Titov Avoided Answering Direct Questions in Show

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Cosmonaut Gherman Titov, during Sunday night's NBC program in which he appeared with astronaut John Glenn, jocularly mentioned his task of training for public appearances.

This came just as many of us were feeling that although the Russian is a nice fellow and talked a lot, he carefully was not saying much — certainly nothing we had not heard or read often before. Usually, in fact, he avoided answering direct questions and just talked around them.

His big moment came when he found a chance to launch into a long denial of stories about failure of Soviet space experiments. But generally he proved an expert in evasive answers.

NBC had a wonderful idea in bringing under the two space men. Glenn tried to turn the hour into a useful discussion of space problems, but it seemed to this member of the home audience that Titov wanted it to be a series of pleasantries and generalities.

One can only hope Friday evening's Andy Williams Show (CBC, 10:30 (EDT)—Ed) die Albert and Conrad Nagel of his next season's variety pro- gram. Despite the presence of such performers as Williams, Dick Van Dyke, Andy Griffith and Ann-Margaret, it was an unpurposed hour's outing.

The songs were not very tuneful, the comedy sequences were limp. The performers did their best—they just didn't have any material, it's a pity.

Recommended tonight: Ben Casey, ABC, 10:01 (EDT)—Eddie Albert and Conrad Nagel of the grand stars.

For Third Time

Ron Saylor 'Mr. Bowling'

Ron Saylor, the original winner of the 'Mr. Bowling' title in 1952, climbed back into the winners' circle here Saturday when he topped a field of 36 classic keglers to capture the 1962 crown.

Saylor, well-known Belleville bowler, rolled 2,676 in the five-game contest to chalk up a 75-point margin over runner-up Leo Labelle, also of Belleville.

This was the third 'Mr. Bowling' title for Saylor, who also won it in 1953 with a .279 average. He averaged .266 in 1952 and .267.6 in this year's conquest. Included among his scores Saturday were singles of 356, 328 and 302.

Labelle's 2,901 total including singles of 314 and 303, Gervais Roy of Kingston took third-place money with a 2,578 total, including 305 and 306 games.

Included among those competing were bowlers from Picton, Brighton, Frankford, Trenton, Cobourg, Kingston and Belleville.

Walter Bailey finished fourth Saturday with a 2,469 (320) while Jim Begley was fifth with a 2,444. Begley hit the 300 mark on three occasions, 300, 300 and 300. Al Rogers of Frankford was sixth with 2,425 (308), Roy Thompson of Trenton was seventh with 2,438, and Jack McKenzie took eighth spot with 2,422 (315) and Ken Peacock, Trenton was ninth with 2,413 (340).

Charlie Baker, who finished out of the top list, had a big single for the day, a terrific 405.

Previous winners, with their victory years in brackets were: Ron Saylor (1952, 1953), Art Lockwood (1954), Jim McKenzie (1955), Ken Peacock (1956) Leo Lucciola (1957), Horace Ormshaw (1958, 1960), Bill Godby (1959) and Leo St. Louis (1961).

Saylor received the "Mr. Bowling" trophy and first-place prize money of $100, presented by Bill Bateman of the Bowl-O-Drome and a beautiful wrist watch, presented by Mr. Gerry O'Connor.

The 25-year-old Gulf Hills, Miss., professional collected $2,800 of the total $20,000 purse tournament. His 276 total was 16-under par for the tournament.

Mason Rudolph finished second, six strokes back at 282, shooting a 69 Sunday and winning $1,900.

Reds Win Tennis Round

LONDON (AP)—Soviet Russia, making its debut in Davis Cup competition, swept to a first-round victory in the European zone, but probably has reached the end of its rope.

The hopeful Russians must encounter the powerful Italians, defending zone champions, in the second round in Italy May 18 to 20.

The Italians, who drew a bye in first-round play this year, upset the United States in semi-finals last year and reached the final against Australia.

Russia, Germany, Denmark, and Finland clinched first-round victories Sunday. France, Britain and Sweden, along with Italy, drew first-round byes.

Russia took the first two singles matches against Holland Saturday, then advanced to an unbeatable 3-0 lead with a doubles decision. Tomas Lejus and Sergei Likhachev trounced Willem Maris and Evert Schneider 6-1, 7-5, 6-2.

Germany defeated Spain 3-2 at Madrid, Denmark eliminated New Zealand 4-1 at Copenhagen and Finland beat Lebanon 4-1 at Beirut.

In matches decided earlier, Brazil trounced Monaco 5-0 at Monte Carlo, Hungary defeated Luxembourg 5-0 at Budapest, Romania defeated Israel 4-1 at Bucharest, South Africa defeated Switzerland 4-1 at Lausanne, Belgium defeated Chile 4-1 at Brussels, Austria defeated Ireland 4-1 at Dublin and Czechoslovakia defeated the United Arab Republic 4-1 at Prague.

Swimmer Breaks Own Record

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mary Stewart shaved two-tenths of a second off her Canadian record for the 200-metre women's free-style Sunday at the Pacific Northwest swim championships.

The 18 - year - old Vancouver native, who holds the world record in the 100-metre butterfly, swam the freestyle in 2:02.2 seconds to reach her 1:02.4 Canadian mark.

World record for the distance is 1:00.2, set by Australia's Dawn Fraser in 1960 in a 50-metre pool, required for world recognition. The Pacific Northwest meet was staged in a 25-metre pool.

At the Belle

"Two Women," a Powerful Compelling Movie

"Two Women," now screen presentation continuing today, Tuesday and Wednesday at the Belle Theatre, is a powerful motion picture, gripping and compelling and taking its place with the year's best films.

Starring in the Embassy picture here is Sophia Loren, whose performance in this production won for her an Academy Award as "The Best Actress of the Year," "Two Women". Mike Lunday reaches the dramatic pinnacle of her career.

Superbly directed by Vittorio De Sica, whose many triumphs have made him one of the world's most sought after directors, "Two Women" is based on the widely-selling novel by Alberto Moravia. The handsome cast includes Jean Paul Belmondo, who qualifies as a new matinee idol. Eleanora Brown, a young American girl who portrays Miss Loren's daughter and Marilu Vallone. All deserve the plaudits already raised upon the fine characterizations that are sharply defined and expertly performed. Miss Loren's portrayal of the sheer brilliance in the film, scenes that will remain with the viewer for a long time to come. The climax is an unforgettable one, providing an unparalled theatre-going experience.

In Color

"FLAME IN THE STREETS"

There is no doubt that John Mills is one of the deadly serious actors of the British screen today, equally at home playing the colonel of a leading regiment or a humble cooking stoker sergeant. There is a quality of sincerity, an accurate observation of human nature in his acting, which makes each performance convincing.

In "Flame in the Streets" he uses his ability in the play-brayal of a simple man, a trade union leader, of humble working class origin, thrown into the maelstrom of vice and hatred and violence. Emerges as himself completely into this background, makes us believe that his character of John Parker, in his strongly held convictions about the evil of the "color bar", which brings him into conflict with his fellow workmen—is real.

As his daughter, who falls in love with a Trinidadian, there adding a new dimension to Jacky's problems, Sylvia Syms has all the simplicity of a girl to whom love, not the color of a man's skin, is all that matters.

Brenda de Banzie, who plays Jacko's wife, has a remarkable talent for playing the part of the wife who, while possessing warmth, has a streak of cold-heartedness, and who, contempt for those she despises — in this case the "spade" whom her daughter wishes to marry.

Johnny Sekka, as the young Jamaican in question and Earl Cameron, as the victimized colored factory worker, both play their parts with a dignity which silently rises above the race prejudice which surrounds them.

Particularly good, also is Ann Lynn, as the woman who has married and bears the child of a colored man, who shows a good mixture of contempt for prejudice and weary acceptance of its inevitable disadvantages.

There is a racy quality in the dialogue, an authenticity in the background of the working-class suburb, which add greatly to the powerful impact of this fine film.

In "Flame in the Streets" Roy Baker again shows his great virtuosity as one director who has produced, directed, and which we have recently seen in many successful films including "The Singer Not The Song".

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Like Aries, there is apt to be opposition from one who feels you are pushing too fast. Take time to listen. Take extra care in connection with legal matters.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Diplomacy wins the race, not force. This is day when family, home come first. Stick close to those who really care about you.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): Self-confidence brings excitement of creative accomplishment. No time to be "Doubting Thomas" about abilities. Be willing to make changes. Break out of rut.

Science Now Shrinks Piles Without Pain Or Discomfort

Finds Healing Substance That Relieves Pain And Itching As It Shrinks Hemorrhoids

Toronto, Ont. (Special)—For the first time science has found a new healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids and to relieve pain and itching. Thousands have been relieved with this inexpensive substance right in the privacy of their own home without any discomfort or inconvenience.

In one hemorrhoid case after another, "very striking improvement" was reported and verified by doctors' observations.

Pain was promptly relieved. And while gently relieving pain, actual reduction or shrinkage (shrinking) took place.

And most amazing of all—this improvement was maintained in cases where doctors' observations were continued over a period of many months!

In fact, results were so thorough that sufferers were able to make such statements as "Piles have ceased to be a problem!" And sufferers themselves were a very wide variety of hemorrhoid conditions, some of even 10 to 20 years' standing.

All this, without the use of narcotics, anesthetics or astringents of any kind. The secret is a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne)—the discovery of a famous scientific institute. Already, Bio-Dyne is in wide use for healing injured tissue on all parts of the body.

This new healing substance is offered in suppository or ointment form as Preparation H. Ask for individually sealed convenient Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H ointment with special applicator. Preparation H is sold at all drug stores. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

Reviews Record

5,000 Hear PM Outline Program For Canada's Economic Growth

By RICHARD JACKSON

LONDON (Special) — Prime Minister Diefenbaker outlined "Hometown Ontario" here, reviewing accomplishments in this own mutual administration society. The people of "Hometown" gave him a big welcome and best crowd so far of this campaign 5,000 of them packed to the roof of the London arena. Here he gave them his bright new vision of the greater Canada to come.

He called it "This fine Canada of your dreams and mine".

And while on paper it might look just a little on the corny side, the people of "Hometown Ontario" showed clearly that it is anything but corn.

The new Canada of the Diefenbaker dream had many components. Among them . . . a revised, more realistic tax code, based on a royal commission investigation; new methods to eliminate taxation anomalies and inequalities; increased government credits for exports.

A longer line of federal credit for the development of industrial plants.

Stepped-up assistance for industrial and pure research; expanded production and distribution facilities; more electric power.

Larger and more widely dispersed works projects.

A fuller measure of "social justice"; contingency planning over and above old age assistance. These and other things, promised the Prime Minister, would make for "more jobs, more wealth, happier times".

The look was forward. The drive was to "build, expand, develop".

PROMISES KEPT

This was the future. But what of the past? "I have kept my promises," said the Prime Minister simply. "I have kept faith with you." And in a quick cheer, the crowd let him know that "Hometown Ontario" agreed he had. He spoke for 90 minutes. It was a long, hard, and tiring visit for him. Spring has been bursting out all over from Brantford, through London to Windsor, and the thermometer, under the blazing afternoon sun, soared to 83, stroking the London area like a furnace. It must have been 100 or more in the highest rows just under the arena roof, where the 5,000 squeezed in, sifting every chair and jamming the standing room in the aisles.

The candidates from the 39 ridings "all-out campaigned Ontario" had come to London with busloads of their constituents, and some were left standing outside when the fire regulations said that the arena was filled beyond capacity, ordered the doors closed.

Communist Paper, Pravda, Observes 50th Anniversary

By PETER GROSVER

MOSCOW (AP)—The Russian word p r a v d a means truth. From the Communist point of view, truth comes in the newspaper named Pravda, which is celebrating its 50th anniversary today.

Nonetheless, what Pravda called truth in 1962 is no longer what the newspaper says truth is now. In 1950, it insisted that the truth won't be the same that Pravda now proclaims, so there are new and challenging voices in the land.

Pravda, spokesman of the party, is one of the world's biggest newspapers. It publishes 10,000,000 copies, and can quickly increase its circulation merely by printing more.

Pravda, spokesman of the city and town in this sprawling land, can be found in millions of copies on the stands for all the 11 time zones. Every copy may circulate through a dozen hands, so Pravda has perhaps the greatest readership of any paper in the world.

INFLUENCE WIDE

Not everyone reads it from cover to cover, but millions do. They line up, for example, at bus depots and editors are the elect of the land. They read press releases for them entry into almost every office and factory.

Pravda correspondents write from friendly socialist countries with friendly press, but dispatches from Western countries often have to be smuggled out. Pravda is not always accepted or disliked in world.

Pravda's prominent once was some dispatches written for Pravda from a four-power conference. They were first-class reports by Western newspaper standards. They emphasized the Soviet side of the debate, but not excessively. When these dispatches appeared in Pravda, the change was striking. They had remained hotly controversial along the route from typewriter that will mean more jobs."

REVIEW OF TAX

sical training for the men's department and Beryl Bond and Jean Wilson were retired before their usefully productive years were over.

But the program already made by Liberal Leader Pearson, cost less than it does in income taxes. Since the Conservatives took office, income taxes have been reduced for 85 per cent of the people, by income.

RAPS LIBERALS

While he boasted, they confed; while we planned, they condemned; while we held out hope, they whined and whimpered. Oh, how they ravelled their hands, those weeping sweaty towels!"

Liberals have criticized the federal deficit, but it resulted from increased federal governments spending on capital. Canadian dollar at 92½ cents in U.S. funds was a "real exercise" step designed to enhance employment opportunities for Canadians. But, he observed, Mr. Pearson called it "a demonstration of failure."

"He can use such words if he wishes to destroy confidence," he said.

MELROSE

Leslie McLaren Heads Tyendinaga Liberal Assoc.

MELROSE — Leslie McLaren, ex-warden of the county, was re-elected president of the Tyendinaga Liberal Association at a meeting held here Thursday evening. Almost 40 were present to witness what an astute political observer declared to be one of the liveliest contests for the association's executive vacancies in many years.

Although the proceedings appeared silky smooth on the surface a definite, deep undercurrent of vibrant enthusiasm for the coming election was to be noted from the welcoming speech of Reeve Chas. Long through to the brief address on vertical integration and Liberal farm policy by Robert Temple, the Liberal candidate.

Mr. Temple spoke on the farm committee which he had formed to both acquaint him with farmers' problems and to keep him consistently in touch with the farm situation in every section of the riding.

He insisted that it was vital to protect and retain the family farm if Canada was to remain free. He advised that Canada had been built by farm families and that this unit still remained the backbone of the country's greatness and was a most valuable segment of Canadian society.

Mr. Temple explained that the Liberal farm policy had been designed to maintain the independence of the farmer through accelerated depreciation on farm equipment and through increased loans for new equipment.

An answer to the problem of vertical integration, where large corporations were crowding the individual farmers from staple cash crop markets, was to be found in the Liberals' preparedness to establish a fund whereby farmers' co-operatives to handle the processing and packaging of commodities affected by vertical integration would be eligible for long-term, low cost loans in order to establish themselves, he said.

In conclusion Mr. Temple pointed out that the present government had failed to keep pace with the country's natural growth by failing to stimulate Canada's productive capacity and provide employment for her natural population growth. He stated that during the last year of the Conservative government the country's productive capacity increased but 2.5 per cent as compared with 13.7 per cent during the last year of the Liberal government.

Also elected to the Tyendinaga Liberal Association executive were Charles Bates, as vice-president, and Leonard Walsh as secretary. Poll chairmen elected included Jim Lazier, Mike Whalen, Arthur Shannon, Thomas Phillips, Joe Hanley and Jack Puters.

Roy Sills, president of the South Hastings Liberal Association, also spoke. He suggested that surely the government could find a better way of making money than by selling grain to Red China with the Canadian people having to put up the cash to finance the deal. He also suggested that all was not too well on the other side of the political fence when the other parties were taking so long to hold their candidate nomination meetings.

Prior to the close of the meeting Mr. Sid Fitzgerald expressed his delight at the presence of new faces for the meeting and welcomed the newcomers on the eve of their initiation into the Liberal party.

The meeting concluded with the National Anthem.

College Students Haven't A Clue

DEAR DORIS:—I am appalled at how little my niece and nephew know about what is going on in the world. They couldn't even tell me who Vander was.

They are both college students and act as if they know everything. But they don't even read the paper. What's your solution?—OLD-TIMER.

DEAR OLD-TIMER:— Better ask what's their solution. Pretty soon they are going to need to know.

One mother told her five boys she expected them to keep up on world events. That she was go busy with them her news reading was sketchy.

So, every dinnertime was a reporting session, with talk wandering from Siberia to Toronto Maple Leafs, the Calgary Stampede and outer space.

She produced one ambassador, a writer, a medical specialist, one engineer and the president of a large company. Accidental? No! These outstanding citizens got a world viewpoint early.

DEAR DORIS:—I am 19 years old and I have been going with this boy (same age) for almost a year. A couple of weeks ago he told me that he thought he was too young to settle down and that he wanted to go out and have some fun with his boy friends.

Now I see him with a girl who is four years younger than he is. When I see them in his car she is always sitting close to him.

He told my girl friend that he didn't like the idea of my being so jealous. I know I am jealous and I try not to show it, but sometimes it gets the better of me. Do you think I will ever get him back?—MIXED UP.

DEAR MIXED UP:—Be glad he knows his own mind well enough to know he doesn't know his own mind.

Better he looks around now than after marriage. Whether he comes back depends on what he finds he wants in a girl.

This goes for you, too. Give Cupid a chance by going out with others yourself.

TO WORRIED SISTER:—Within the Christian religion aunts and nephews are not allowed to marry. Whether or not your sister can draw a family allowance in the name of her nephew who is living with her can be found out by getting in touch with the Regional Welfare Officer in her area.

(You, too, may have help with choosing a career. Write for Doris' leaflet on the subject, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope and ten cents.)

Thomasburg

THOMASBURG — An enthusiastic crowd gathered in the I.O.O.F. Hall on Wednesday when the C.G.I.T. group presented two one-act plays entitled, "Coming Round the Mountain" and "Merry Molly Melone". Much credit is due the leaders and those responsible for training the girls who each splendidly portrayed the characters represented. A pie social followed the program.

Miss Donna Morton spent the Easter holidays with her aunt Miss Verna Morton in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Potter who spent the most of April here have returned home to Toronto.

Miss Karen Morton of Queen's University, Kingston, and Miss June Morton of Toronto University are holidaying at the home of their parents Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Morton. Karen has accepted a position in one of the public schools of Belleville but June will continue her studies at Toronto for another year.

Mr. Harry Carleton, seamstress for Thomasburg polling sub-division is making his calls this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Clapp of Stirling; Mr. and Mrs. Stan Williams of Brighton, and Miss Isobel Beatty of Belleville attended the funeral of Mrs. Stella Orr in Tweed and spent the tea hour at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Wilcot.

The funeral of Mrs. Martha Jane Vance of the Montgomery neighborhood took place from the home of her son Roy to the Roslin United Church on May 3 with the Rev. Robert Nichols in charge of the service in the church and at the graveside in Thomasburg cemetery.

Living Costs At Record High During April

Six-Tenths of Point Rise to 130,3 Set

OTTAWA (CP)—Living costs rose to a record high in April as the consumer price index advanced to 130.3 on April 1 from 129.7 on March 1.

The rise of six-tenths of a point in Canada's yardstick of prices, reported today by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, was the sharpest monthly increase since the fall of 1950.

The April 1 index level of 130.3 based on 1949 prices equalling 100—compares with 129.1 a year earlier. The month's increase followed four months of relative price stability during which the previous record high of 129.8 was set in December and February.

Higher food and health-care costs were the main factors behind the March increase, that five of the seven component parts in the general price increase were higher — food, housing, transportation, health and personal care, and tobacco and alcohol.

HOUSING COSTS SAME

There was no change in the index of housing costs, which represents 30 per cent of the household budget covered by the consumer price index.

Food prices rose a bit more sharply, with the index jumping to 132.1 from 131.4, with price tags higher on most fruits and vegetables, but some pork items, chicken and bread. Prices were lower for eggs, fresh vegetables, fresh tomatoes, chocolate bars and fats including butter.

The rise in the over-all price index followed a strong increase in industrial wage during February. The index of average industrial wages and salaries at March — the latest date available—was 126.6 compared with 126.3 a month earlier and 187.1 a year earlier.

The March rise was one point in the index of health and personal care costs, to 158.1 from 157.1. Prices were higher mainly for doctors, dentists and optical care, and higher prices for toilet soap and men's haircuts.

The clothing index rose to 113.5 from 113.2 on the basis higher prices for men's and children's footwear shoes and piece goods.

TRAVEL MORE COSTLY

Price increases for auto repairs, higher air travel fares boosted the transportation index to 140.2 from 139.9.

Higher prices in Quebec and Ontario caused the rise in the 1.2 point 117.5 in the index of tobacco and alcohol costs.

Housing costs remained unchanged.

STAFF SERGEANT DISMISSED FROM ARMED SERVICES

Pleads Guilty in Smuggling Case

OTTAWA (CP)—S. Sgt. Wilham John Harry Hockman 38, today was dismissed from teh armed services for his part in smuggling opium while on duty in Indochina last year with the International Truce Supervisory Commission.

The same sentence—heaviest imposed so far on any of the soldiers involved—was read to the accused by Brig. N. H. Rose, of Fredericton, after he and four others pleaded guilty at a liberated two hours.

Earlier two corporals were demoted to privates and given jail terms and three soldiers were fined $100 each and given severe reprimands by their commanding officer in Indochina.

S. Sgt. Hockman showed no emotion as he was marched out of court.

The punishment was less, in the military code of penalties, than dismissal with disgrace.

Before the court martial retired to consider sentence Hockman's defending officer contended that the accused has "already paid a heavy price" for his part in the smuggling.

Hockman changed his plea from not guilty to guilty on the charge Monday before sentement he gave to provost personnel could be entered as evidence.

The army said that Hockman was paid 25,000 South Vietnam ese piastres—about $300—for taking 11 pounds of opium in packages he believed to contain opium across the border between east and South West Nam.

Hockman, also was charged with neglect for failing to report to his superiors when told by Cpl. H. J. Noel—one of two corporals earlier demoted to private and given jail terms—that smuggling by army personnel was going on.

The smuggling involved both military and civilian personnel attached to the Canadian delegation to the International truce supervisory commission in Indochina, Laos and Poland also are commission members.

OTHERS INVOLVED

Two unidentified external affairs department men have been suspended pending disciplinal. Three other soldiers were severely reprimanded and fined $100 each by a military court in Indochina.

Remained to be tried here are Maj. William A. Platt and Bdr. Francis O. Johnson. The army so far has declined to identify them further or reveal

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: A storm centered over western Illinois will move eastward south of the Great Lakes today. Rain this already spread over Michigan and southwestern Ontario, while over the upper Great Lakes the precipitation is in the form of snow or snow and rain mixed.

This precipitation combined with cool easterly winds will give rather unpleasant weather to all regions today, followed by partial clearing tonight. Wednesday will be partly cloudy and cool with clearing skies in the evening.

Prime Minister John Diefenbaker and Premier John Robarts of Ontario are seen marching to the platform in the London Arena. The Prime Minister addressed a capacity audience and many were turned away as he fired the opening gun at the official opening of his campaign for re-election in the Conservative party.

Concludes Deal For Soviet Arms

MOSCOW (AP) — Foreign Minister Subandrio of Indonesia concluded negotiations for new Soviet arms today by conferring with Premier Khrushchev. The interview was described as satisfactory and friendly.

Further weapons promised will be more than enough to face any grow ing and open arms threat from the Dutch in New Guinea," said Ganis Harzono, spokesman for Indonesian delegation.

Asked if it included rockets, he replied:

"No, we already have rockets. Of course, we do not have atomic weapons."

He said rockets were delivered in an earlier shipment of arms from the Soviet Union. He declined to go into details as to the type of equipment already delivered or to be delivered.

During the talks with Khrushchev Subandrio received assurances of continued sympathy for the Indonesian claim for transfer of West New Guinea to Indonesian control, the spokesman said.

Two Political Leaders For Provincial Rights

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

At least two of Canada's political leaders are seeking to project an electoral image of themselves as the champions of provincial rights.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker, on his first campaign swing through Quebec, declared in Granby Monday night that the Progressive Conservative government had restored the provinces' constitutional tax rights —with the benefits spread across the country.

Premier Frank Credit Leader Robert Thompson said in Montreal his party stands for "the preservation of provincial autonomy." He spoke at Brantford Monday night.

For Liberal Leader Lester Pearson it was, so to speak, a day at home. He travelled by car along the north shore of Lake Huron, stopping along the way for speeches and chats with his own constituents in Algoma East riding.

Only leader not on the hustings Monday was T. C. Douglas of the New Democratic Party. He was in bed in Toronto trying to shake off a stomach ailment and had to cancel a meeting in Cornwall.

The Conservative and Liberal chieftains planned to continue today on the same trails as Monday. Mr. Diefenbaker was to conclude his initial Quebec circuit with calls along the shore of the St. Lawrence River at Montiuil, Riviere-de-Loup, Trois - Pistoles and Rimouski. Mr. Pearson was to tour Manitoulin Island and spend the night in Toronto.

Mr. Thompson was to wing westwards for his first campaign visit to Vancouver and Victoria. Mr. Douglas, fi sell, was to speak tonight at Welland.

Monday's campaign scene saw Mr. Diefenbaker fly from Quebec after a mornings visit to a veterans hospital at Ste. Anne de Bellevue. This was followed by a series of appearances at town halls, addresses to councillors and school children in Dorlon, and the Eastern Townships communities of Farnham and Cowansville.

In his main speech at Granby, which he opened and closed by reading from a prepared French text, the prime minister said every Canadian province has benefited from the Conservatives' policy of restoring taxation rights assumed by the former Liberal government in wartime.

"The former government was the many respects making the provinces wards of the Federal government," he said.

In 1957 and 1958 the Conservatives' main promise had been to restore provincial constitutional rights. This now had been done, making it possible for the provinces to "carry out their responsibilities" and had also helped the municipalities.

He also told the rally, attended by some 1,100, that the government was forcesing ever decreasing unemployment

Old Drivers Second Only to Young As Accident-Prone Group, Report

REGINA (CP) — The old driver has moved only to the young driver as a major group problem, A. H. Rowan, director of the driver control branch of the Ontario department of transport, declared here.

Mr. Rowan was moderator of a panel discussion on older drivers, held during the Canadian Highway Safety Conference.

E. M. Hall, city of Montreal, counsel for the Alt Canada Insurance Federation, said the problem is not the old but the term can not necessarily be determined by chronology.

"It is much more a matter of physical inability and the aim of this group will grow because people are living longer."

There is a need for the examination of the older driver, particularly in determining loss of flexibility and co-ordination and to enable the drivers to recognize his loss and voluntarily give up his car.

Dr. Wallace Troup of Montreal, medical director for Metropolitan Life Insurance Company of Canada, said more research is needed.

Older drivers must prepare themselves for the day when they can't or won't be permitted to drive vehicles, he said.

They should arrange their lives so they will not finally be the road as a menace."

dependent upon the motor car for transportation."

George Lindsay of Victoria, superintendent of the British Columbia motor vehicle branch, said his province has no problem with the young driver because of a re-examination system in effect for many years.

Older drivers constituted 2.86 per cent of all drivers in B.C. he said, but were involved in only 1.9 per cent of all accidents and 2.39 per cent of fatal accidents.

Magistrate A. S. Mitchell of Guelph, was moderator of a panel on traffic laws. Summing up the views of the panelists, he said 80 per cent of the public is behind law enforcement but there should be courses and traffic courts are fundamentally sound. Although he prefer to meet the increasing demands on them.

One of the panelists, Police Chief M. E. F. Anthony of Edmonton, suggested special traffic courts to be set up across Canada to separate traffic offenders from criminals.

Chief Anthony also called for more driver education courses, clarification of traffic laws and stiffer minimum penalties for driving offences.

"A violator should be educated," he said, "or ruled off the road as a menace."

Last Laotian Govt. Centre In North Now Endangered

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP) — ness Communist troops were in the fighting at Nam Tha, 20 miles south of the Chinese border. They said the Pathet Lao troops included Chinese-speaking Communists.

Slouk told of the new advance in a strategy conference with Malcolm Macdonald, British co-chairman of the 14-nation Laos peace conference. He whose visit here coincided by chance with the fall of Nam Tha.

Slouk said he gave Macdonald a strong protest against the Nam Tha attack, which violated both a 1961 cease-fire order and peace pledges of the rebel leader Souvanouvong. Prince Souvanna Phouma and Prince Souphanouvong of the Pathet Lao, heads of the coalition government.

Both the British and U.S. governments denounced the capture of Nam Tha as a flagrant violation of the cease-fire. The United States sought to have it investigated by the international armistice control commission, made up of Canada, India and Poland.

GAMBLING MEN SCORE A WIN OVER INQUIRY

Gain Right to Full Legal Examination

TORONTO (CP) — Gambling bosses Joe Bickerdike, McDermott and Vincent Feeley scored a win today over Ontario's royal commission on crime, gaining along with an unidentified "Mr. X"—the right to full legal representation at the commission's inquiry.

The Ontario Court of Appeal overruled a previous rejection by the commissioner, Police Magistrate W. D. Roach, of an application by their lawyer that he be allowed to cross-examine witnesses on their behalf and cross-examine commission witnesses.

The decision freed the commission to resume hearings, which had been suspended when Toronto lawyer Walton C. Ross appealed to the high court April 7 against the commissioner's ruling.

Mr. Ross gained a two-way victory in the high court. He sides winning the right to examine witnesses, re-examine witnesses, he was given access to the record of testimony of Mr. X during a secret session of the commission in early April, and to the exhibits, described by the commissioner.

Mr. X is another client of Mr. Ross. A witness who fought not involved in Monday's court action—is Rodney Adams, former provincial police anti-gambling squad constable who, with his gambling career ended, is out later—its action appeared to have opened the way for other witnesses to give testimony—and there have been reports of a seek similar representation.

Up to now, only the commission's own counsel has had the right to call witnesses. Lawyers for the Liberal and New Democratic parties have been able to cross - examine these witnesses on Mr. Roach's own questions only through commission counsel.

The party lawyers opposed Mr. Ross's application before the court. Commission counsel Roland F. Wilson said he endorsed Mr. Ross's right to deliver an argument of his own.

Secret Army Starts Killing Moslem Women

European Is Lynched By Mob From Casbah

By The Associated Press

ALGIERS—Angered over the wave of terror killings since the March 18 cease-fire, the Algerian rebel government will broadcast orders to Moslems Wednesday that may call for wiping out the European Secret Army.

The scheduled broadcast from Tunis by rebel President Ben Youssef Ben Khedda reflects the mounting fury of Algerian leaders over the daily slaughter of Moslems in Algiers and Oran by European terrorists of the Secret Army.

A rebel spokesman said Ben Khedda would announce "directives" to put into effect the cease-fire agreement signed by France and the Algerian nationalists. He said they might deal with "liquidation" of the Secret Army.

The European terrorists resumed their attacks today, killing 16 Moslems in Algiers and wounding 11 others within a few hours. One European also was wounded.

The terrorist Secret Army Organization Monday night for the first time singled out Moslem women for attack.

Of the 30 persons killed throughout Algeria during the day, four of them were white-robed Moslem women. Their deaths stretched already - taut Moslem nerves to the breaking point.

Previously any male Moslem who was lynched by a European neighborhood was taking his life in his hands. Moslem women had been relatively safe.

The Secret Army, is seeking to provoke Moslems into breaking the cease - fire agreement signed with France last month, forestall Algerian independence.

LYNCH EUROPEAN

About 300 Moslems surged out of the Casbah Monday and attempted to lynch a European before being driven back by French riot police. At least two Europeans were kidnapped, apparently by Moslems.

In central Oran, western Algeria, a powerful explosive charge badly damaged the treasury building Monday night. A Secret Army sniper killed a police officer and wounded another while guarding a new police station and there was much fire from automatic weapons and rifle grenades.

Security forces also searched houses in Oran's European Mirabeau section following two explosions. Heavy machine-guns mounted in a girls' school were used against European snipers.

Gherman Titov Tells of Life As Space Hero

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—The Soviet Union does not yet have the capability of landing a man on the moon but may have "in the very near future," Russian cosmonaut Gherman Titov said Monday.

Titov was asked at a press conference to comment on a claim by James E. Webb, U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration chief, that the United States had a chance to beat the Soviet Union in landing a man on the moon.

"Let's not argue who will be first," Titov said. "Whoever is first, science will gain.

The cosmonaut, who told a Seattle press conference Sunday he does not believe in God, recalled Monday that his grandmother had believed in a deity but his grandmother did not. She was always throwing his icons out of the house and he always put them back.

Titov said his grandfather had died a long time ago but his grandmother was present to greet him when he returned from his 17 orbits around the earth.

"Life as a space hero, he said, brings him home so late that his children may say his wife doesn't want to admit me to the house."

Yani said the Dutch were exaggerating the situation to impress NATO and the ANZUS Pact powers — Britain, Canada among Australia, New Zealand and the United States.

NATO foreign ministers concluded a meeting in Athens Sunday.

Study Method of Predicting How Newlyweds Settle Spats

TORONTO (CP)—Two United States researchers say they believe study they are conducting may produce a method of predicting a newlywed couple's ability to pace and overcome difficulties.

The two researchers at the National Institute of Mental Health in Bethesda, Md., went to speak today to the American Psychological Association annual meeting.

Dr. Nelda Goodrich of the institute's child research branch and research psychologist Donald Jackson described in a release to the press prior to delivery, their study, which they said involves a study of the first stages of forming family life.

The study involved a technique for studying the behavior of a husband and wife as they attempt to resolve a controlled disagreement.

The researchers discovers patterns in future research for predictions of marital adjustment from the time of marriage to the first neonatal stage (after the birth of the first child).

Rotary Member Gives Outline of Stonemasonry

Local Rotarians were given an interesting insight into both the history and the modern state of the ancient craft of stonemasonry when Rotarian Clark Campbell, a member of the Campbell Monument Company, addressed the weekly afternoon meeting of the club.

Speaking on "Stonemasonry is one of the oldest trades in the world," Rotarian Campbell, the speaker mentioned a number of instances, where his predecessors had sacrificed much to the recording of history and the marking of significant events in the past.

Records found carved on the stones of ancient tombs, temples and monuments have served to provide historians with much of his knowledge about past civilizations, Mr. Campbell said. He also emphasized the fact that many of the great works of architecture built by stonemasons were done without the use of the modern tools available to the members of this craft today.

Mr. Campbell cited as an example of the fine craftsmanship of the ancient practitioner of his craft a temple and adjacent buildings which were carved out of a chain of living rock in Asia Minor. This project extended over several generations with the surplus rock being quarried out of the site and from around these buildings in accordance with plans drawn up years in advance by people who never saw the completion of their project, he advised.

Mr. Campbell also spoke of the various aspects of handling stones for monuments and memorials today from the quarrying process through the cutting and polishing stages to the final engraving stage. He said that the major areas supplying stones consisted of Sweden, Finland, Norway, Brazil, Germany and some parts of both Canada and the United States.

Of special interest, he suggested, was the fact that Hitler had acquired large quantities of granite from Finland with which to erect a triumphal arch to commemorate his winning the Second World War. Much of this granite served as material for monuments and memorials erected for many of the Allied soldiers who had defeated him.

Mr. Campbell also mentioned that an interesting sidelight to his industry consisted of the epitaphs, which graced some memorial stones.

He quoted a number of these to show how they could describe the deceased either in terms of personal character or in relationship with those who held his memory dear.

The speaker was introduced and thanked by Rotarians J. C. Anderson and Harold Mott respectively.

Klass Tuinman, former scout master of the Quinte Secondary School's Air Cadet Squadron, was the special guest of the club.

It was announced that the Easter Seal campaign had collected $4,700 to date, which is a bit ahead of last year's campaign, the campaign chairman Bill McCormick.

The meeting was conducted by president Virgil James.

Leaves Are Red On New Ensign, Why Not Known

The maple leaves on the coat-of-arms of the Canadian Ensign flying on the Bridge Street armouries lawn staff are red.

This, a discerning resident claims, is incorrect. A former regimental seaman, he says the leaves should be green.

A fine-looking duplication of the ensign this morning revealed leaves are not only red but a different shade. The lions rampant is another place on the coat-of-arms have also been changed shape-wise.

Major Alex Cunningham, commanding the current national survival course, was at a loss to explain the difference in leaves and lions.

"The ensign," he said, "is one of a dozen flags we received from National Defence Headquarters, Ottawa, a few days ago."

He agreed that on former ensigns flown at the armouries and other places the maple leaves were green.

"I do not know the reason for the change," he said, "but I noticed the difference when the ensigns arrived. I suggest National Defence Headquarters might supply the answers."

Dog Ordered Exiled From City

R. Jamieson of 182 Albert Street, was ordered by the magistrate this morning to get rid of the dog after being charged under the vicious dog act.

Evidence was that the dog, owned by Mr. Jamieson, had bitten 10-year-old Mary Jane James, who was spending the day with Barbara Ann Stock. Mrs. A. Geen who resides on the same street as Mr. Jamieson.

Mrs. C. W. Rohr testified that although she did not see the dog actually bite the little girl as she reached the window after her daughter drew attention to the incident the dog was running around the window Mary-Jane was standing bent over on the sidewalk.

Mrs. Rohr said her own daughter had been bitten by the same dog about one year ago.

Dr. John S. Stock, a physician here, told the court he examined the child and found her to have a very severe laceration involving the upper lip and a laceration extending from the nose to the mouth and a smaller laceration on her chin. Dr. Stock said the lacerations required stitches and that they certainly could have been caused by the bite of a dog.

The magistrate told Mr. Jamieson he did not necessarily have to kill the dog, but that it must be kept out of the city by next Monday.

Council Considers Position With Respect to Employing Two Additional Constables

TRENTON — Trenton council considered last night whether its members were guilty of default in reference to the Police Act, on official of the Attorney General's Department had written to council pointing out that the collective bargaining agreement, between the council and the police association, called for the hiring of two additional constables for the force at the first of the year, when a 40-hour week (as opposed to a 44-hour week) came into force. Council had thus far refused to sanction the hiring of these men. The Trenton Police Commission claims that the men must be hired to implement the 40-hour week.

"Council's wrist has been slapped, very gently", observed the mayor.

"I don't think so", said Controller Burtt, "they only have one side of the picture up there. They should send a man down to find out how much we pay per capita for police protection".

"We've accepted the terms of the agreement", said Controller Worrall, "only we've asked to have the men spread between the police commission and the chief haven't adhered to the conditions we suggested".

"What power have we got as elected representatives?" asked Councillor Burtt.

"None", said the mayor.

"We might just as well resign and let them run it", said Councillor Burtt. Council then voted before we start. Trenton and Belleville have more per capita for police protection than any other places in Ontario".

"The police are getting overtime now to put the 40 hours in force", said Councillor Graham, "it's costing us as much to pay overtime as it would to hire the two men".

The general government committee will dictate the situation at a special meeting this week.

CAR ALLOWANCE

Also discussed will be a car allowance for the police chief. Council has said that it will not pay the allowance. But the account is presented from month to month with the other town bills. Last night the passing of the monthly accounts, a motion, excluding the car allowance account, was added to the resolution to approve the accounts.

Still on the subject of the police department, council indicated its approval of the addition of angel sione to the outside of the police station.

"Looks like a tomb", said Councillor Burtt.

Councillor Burtt asked that pavement along the front of the police station be installed to accommodate the market people. Town engineer Eric Alderway said that he would have this attended to this week, but that the installation of a sidewalk along the north side of the station might be delayed.

Councillor Burtt reported that town dog catcher T. Weedle had bandied 17 dogs in April. Two of these still in the pound, were sold; seven were returned to their owners; six were destroyed.

M. W. Anderson, 82 First Ave. will be acquainted with the fact that he has not lived up to the terms of his building permit—that he has contravened the building by-law and the zoning by-law. Mr. Anderson is reported to have taken out a permit to add a foot shed onto his car port. The shed has now turned into a bedroom, according to the building inspector, and by-law now does not have the required skirgard allowance. Mr. Anderson will be given 10 days in which to remove the offending parts. Otherwise he will be liable to fines totalling $350.

On the subject of annexation, Controller Worrall reported that he had met with Murray Fowlie (city representative) and that they seemed agreeable to talking annexation plans over with the town. He suggested that an amicable agreement might be reached with the township, thus saving litigation costs to both parties.

QUESTIONS ASSESSMENT

Councillor Worrall served notice that he would call for a discussion of Toronto's present assessment methods at next council meeting. He said that the present system of taxation, poor dwellings and penalises good improvements. He also suggested that the town might benefit by adopting a system of site assessment such as is used in several European countries and four provinces of Canada.

Councillor Worrall will also ask council for a by-law insisting re-development in certain areas of the town. He will discuss a plan by which the Division Street railway tracks would be moved to the north slightly, thus enabling the town to widen the area to the vicinity of the market square. Townscouncil in Quest Country (Up Week of July 14 to May 19), seriously. Meter posts have been installed and meters will be being painted. A survey will be made of the boundaries of property, which admittedly is "in a mess," to see what can be done about cleaning it up.

A letter will be sent to the Commanding Officer of RCAF Station Trenton, asking that a replacement be appointed for Mr. Tanner Bourdon, who has received and assembled a brochure on Trenton. The booklet is being distributed by the Trenton Chamber of Commerce.

WANT MORE TIME

A resolution, by the city of Chatham, asking that the government be asked to extend by one year, at least, the deadline of March 31, 1964, for municipalities to secure loans for the construction of sewage treatment system, was approved. Council agreed with the Chatham body that the present deadline does bring about haste in the installation of facilities, especially economic loss to municipalities.

Clerk-comptroller O. W. Lacey told council that the three managers of the Trenton system, including Mr. Bourdon, had left 42ft. which was slightly under the estimate set by consulting engineers. The cost of the progress of the program has been estimated at $1,400,000.

Jim Duncan, Trenton Country Club president, demonstrates that a combination of golf and billiards can be fun to other club members during Idiot Day at the Trenton club last Saturday.

Council Turns Down Two-Way Radio Outfits

TRENTON — The Trenton fire department came in for a considerable amount of discussion at last night's meeting of town council.

The first item on the agenda was a petition, signed by 40 East Marmora Street residents, and addressed to Fire Chief Cecil Ellis, requesting that the Canada Cementing Company be asked to move their piles of "cured" logs to a point at least 50 feet west of the Marmora Street boundary fence and that some sort of watch tower, from which a watchman could detect the first signs of fire in the company's property, be erected. Residents said that they had gone through two major fires in the past year (in the Creosote stockyard) and that "little kids" menaced the lives and property of those living on the street.

Council approved a suggestion that the petition be sent to Canada Creosoting heads in Montreal.

REQUEST TURNED DOWN

Council turned down, five to one, a request from the fire chief that two-way radio equipment be bought for the department, in a letter to council, the chief said that the department had fought 32 fires in April and that radio equipment, joining truck to truck and trucks to the base station on the roof of the town hall, would have been used in each case. The cost of the radio system has been estimated at around $2,000.

Council expressed regret, but felt it could not afford the equipment this year.

Controller Burtt, chairman of protection to persons and property, said council the department's Bendell - Seagrave truck had been sent to Waterloo for an overhaul and that the aerial ladder ruck was being stationed in the west side hall temporarily. Ordinarily, it is kept in the town sheds on the east side of the town.

Councillor Lloyd Worrall served a notice of motion that he would introduce a by-law to allocate the present fire hall, as soon as new hall council. Councillor Worrall said that the plan called for the installation of a public access on the front of the present hall. He said that the lack of downstairs parking could lead to the construction of shopping areas outside the town, thereby causing business away from the town's merchants.

HALL ZONING BY-LAW

Council voted to amend a by-law pertaining to the hiring and retention of firemen. Members of the department are hired, "if they are physically fit, residents of the town in good standing and between the ages of 18 and 40". The amendment calls for each applicant to have a medical examination prior to joining the force and an examination every three years thereafter and states that a man may not be retained on the force after he reaches the age of 50.

The councillors also approved of a suggestion advanced by Mayor Gist that a letter of thanks and commendation be sent to Harold Bassett. Recently, said the chief, Mr. Bassett had a fire, "saved" Harris Park in west Trenton, when he bulldozed around an area west of the park, "saving a woods' fire was raging out of control. Mr. Bassett did not charge for this service.

Rescind By-law To Construct Maisonettes

TRENTON — Well, the die has been cast. Trenton won't have a maisonette development. At least, not in the vicinity of Coulter Crescent.

Trenton council last night rescinded a by-law which would have permitted the erection of the multiple housing units. By-law No. 1 was passed by council last month, three to one. However, no sooner was the by-law passed than objections arose. Councillor Lloyd Worrall had been absent from the April meeting in its entirety. Councillor Ed Burtt had left for work prior to the third reading of the by-law. Councillor Duncan McDonald had voted against the by-law. Councillors Ross Burtt, Clarke Graham and James Duncan voted in favor of the area lying west of Dufferin Ave. and south of Coulter Crescent to permit the erection of multiple housing units. In the morning following the passing of the by-law, Councillor Duncan, who had arrived late at the council meeting, said that he had voted for the "third reading of the by-law," thinking that it was the second reading.

The upshot of the confusion was that a second proposal was made to rescind the original by-law, and last night council voted four to two to bring this about. Voting to rescind the by-law were councillors Duncan, Worrall, McDonald and Todd. Upholding the first by-law were Councillors Burtt and Graham.

Councillor Burtt charged that there had been "skullduggering" in connection with the by-laws and Councillor Graham said he considered it quite that there wasn't another town in Eastern Ontario with a "wonderful" offer like this would be turned down.

Councillor Worrall suggested that the developer look around for another location for this type of development. Mayor MacDonald said that council had considered this and that certain residents in the area "had enough teeth of their property (in east Trenton).

"It's a sick town," said the mayor.

gerian sources said a new Franco - Algerian conference may be needed to decide on how to combat the Secret Army, but the sources said there was no question of unilateral action by the Algerians.

For the moment, they said, the Algerian provisional government believes that the means provided by the Evian ceasefire agreements—if they are applied — could be sufficient to liquidate Secret Army strongholds in Algiers and Oran.

Lt.-Col. Angus Duffy

Lieut.-Colonel Angus B. Duffy, a name synonymous with army life for over three decades, has retired from active military life.

He was not ready for retirement as age goes in the army. Last December he was stricken with a heart attack. This, with pressure of business, necessitating his withdrawal from duty with his Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

The military record of Angus B. Duffy reads like a saga from the pen of Kipling. He enlisted at the age of 14 in his native town of Trenton. Army life appealed to young Duffy. It was a challenge to his youthful vim and vitality. And the army liked Duffy.

It was something more than parade square drill. It meant a new comradeship, a mingling and living with men with a purpose. It opened a new strange vista to the youngster, a life perhaps of derring-do.

His rise through the ranks was more or less meteoric. A short time previous to World War Two he was promoted to the rank of regimental sergeant major, the highest non-commissioned rank in the army.

When war was declared in 1939 he went overseas with the First Battalion, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. In the holocaust of war he proved he was no "peace-time soldier." He helped his "Plowboys" hold their shirt golden years on the bloody fields of Sicily, Italy and other European theatres of war.

The war ended and R.S.M. Duffy returned to Canada. His roots were sunken deeply in his beloved Hasty Pees. His qualities of leadership and organization were recognized by army authorities. He was offered—and accepted—a commission in the militia unit of the regiment.

Again the sterling characteristics asserted themselves. Under various commanding officers he helped build the unit into one of the strongest and best militia regiments in the country. He left it that way.

Angus B. Duffy was and is a good soldier, one of Canada's most outstanding militia officers.

The Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment was not a unit to him. It was an institution. He lived for it, and for the officers and men that form it. He was forceful in his military endeavors but none of his subordinates ever called him a martinet. He was a soldier in the strict sense of the word and he expected his men to live up to his requirements. The most of them did, and liked him for it.

He did not, as is sometimes the case with regimental commanding officers, leave the brunt of the sub unit work to his staff officers. He took a personal pride in the duties of the regiment and travelled extensively to see they were carried out to the letter.

Pride in the regiment and those who belonged to it has been one of Col. Duffy's chief characteristics. What affected the regiment affected his commanding officer. When anyone or persons unknown removed the regimental color from the armouries he took it as a personal affront. He took off his cap badge and vowed he would not replace it until the color had been returned. He has kept his word.

Brigadier A. J. B. Bailey, eastern area commander, at the change-of-command parade on Sunday conveyed the thanks of the Canadian army "to a famous soldier." Indicative of the popularity of Col. Duffy was the presence of thousands of city and district residents; high ranking army and civic officials, and perhaps above all the one hundred or more of his wartime comrades, who paid special tribute to him in a march-past.

Col. Duffy has left the army, but not the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, his first and only military love. He will keep a watchful eye on it. He will help a popular successore, Lieut.-Col. J. H. Black—if the necessity arises—from the sidelines.

Meanwhile a grateful country, district and regiment join in wishing Lieut.-Col. Angus B. Duffy the long and healthy life he so richly deserves.

To live content with small means; to seek elegance rather than luxury, and refinement rather than fashion; to be worthy, not respectable, and wealthy, not rich; to study hard, think quietly, talk gently, act frankly; to listen to stars and birds, to babes and sages, with open heart; to bear all cheerfully, do all bravely, await occasions, hurry never. In a word, to let the spiritual, unbidden and unconscious, grow up through the common. This is to be my symphony.—William Henry Channing.

The P.M. Side-Steps TV Booby-Trap Set by Opponents

BY RICHARD JACKSON
(From The Ontario Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau)

OTTAWA — You never saw such manoeuvring in a general election as has been going on since Parliament met after this busiest of what the hucksters choose to call a "Television Confrontation" between the leaders of the two major parties.

It is difficult to know where to begin to unravel the tangled skein of this up-to-the-minute, with Prime Minister Diefenbaker, Mr. Ben Harney, Leader Pearson stumping the country from one end to the other, that the proposition of a TV-face-to-face was presented.

The Americans had done it . . . so why shouldn't the Canadians?

This, essentially, was the pitch of the television industry.

And the pitch held . . . just think what it would do for those sagging springtime audience ratings!

The Liberals, with nothing to lose — at least on the digital and prestige of a Prime Ministership — and everything to gain, went for the face-to-face book, line and picture tube.

The Conservatives were less receptive.

But the Prime Minister in competition with Mr. Ben Harney, The Untouchables and Mr. Clean?

A BIT DIFFERENT

Then, there would happen to be the thing they know as the "mystique" that surrounds a Prime Minister . . . as a President . . . in fact, any head of state or government . . . if he were to be boxed in by a plug for a detergent at one end of the time-slot and a puff for a deodorize at the other?

This "mystique" is an essential of any national office as high as a Prime Minister's.

It is an important part of the "image," commanding national respect, co-operation and leadership, not so much of the man himself, but of the exalted position he holds.

But what about the American case? If it were good enough for Washington, suggested both the TV hucksters and the anxious Conservatives, then it should be acceptable for Ottawa.

Mr. Diefenbaker, that last shy Richard Nixon nor John Kennedy at the time of those mis-named "presidential debates," was president.

Makes a difference.

The Liberals, pushing, have argued that with the Prime Minister being a specialist in the art of the political attack that he is, he could make Mike Pearson into little pieces and spit him out onto everybody's living room floor.

Hadn't Diefenbaker up Mike so completely at one time that even the CCF had protested that the PM was converting the Commons into "a human abbatoir"?

Yes, that, indeed, had happened. But that was in Parliament . . . and Parliament was made for debate, no matter how much this jibe and crust might be its cut and thrust.

ANOTHER TACK

And while one politician might slaughter another politician on the floor of the Commons as a routine exercise in the practice of the Parliamentary art, up the butchery wouldn't do on the floor of the living, or even the rumpus room.

So the TV image-men and the Liberals, in the face of this opposition, tried a different approach.

The Prime Minister didn't think he could handle it, eh?

Recognized, did he, that Mike Pearson now was more than his match at debate?

Then why would show up at a disadvantage?

Was it that the politician might look well in Parliament, but the diplomat appear better in your home?

This one must have been tempting for the Prime Minister.

He almost certainly felt the urge to demonstrate that the Parliamentarian and the Politician were one and the same, and more than a match for the Civil Servant and the Diplomat.

But they'll keep after him . . . in this new form of electoral manoeuvre . . . hoping to booby-trap him into stepping down from the platform of Prime Minister to play political quiz games for television.

Love Is Not A Commodity

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

A reader in Florida, apparently bruised by some personal experience, writes in to ask me this: "If I steal a nickel's worth of merchandise, I am a thief and punished . . . if I steal the love of another's wife, I am free".

This is a prevalent misconception in many people's minds — that love is a commodity that can be stolen". Numerous states, in fact, have enacted laws against the so-called "alienation of affections".

But love is not a commodity; the real thing cannot be bought, sold, traded or stolen. It is an act, not a thing, a feeling of the emotions, a change in the climate of the personality.

When a husband or wife is "stolen" by another person, that husband or wife was already predisposed, inclined in new partner. The "love-bandit" was only taking what was willing to be taken, what wanted to be taken.

NOBODY BELONGS

We tend to treat persons like goods. We even speak of children "belonging" to their parents. But nobody "belongs" to anyone else. Each person belongs to himself and to God. Children are entrusted to their parents, but the parents do not treat them properly, the state has a right to remove them from the parents' trusteeship.

Most of us, when young, had the experience of a sweetheart being taken from us by some body more attractive and more appealing. At the time, we may have regarded this infidelity as a crime, but as we grew older, we recognized that the sweetheart had never been our love to begin with. It was not the intruder who destroyed the love, but the lack of a real relationship.

On the surface, many marriages break up because of the cause of a "third party". This is, however, a misleading illusion. The other women or the other men merely serves as a catalyst for bringing a marriage that had already lost its attraction to a climax.

Nothing is more futile and more self-defeating than the bitterness, the spurned love, the vengeful feeling that someone else has come between one's self and a beloved. This is always a distortion of reality, for people are not the victims of others — they are victims of their own inner weaknesses for good or for ill.

But the rejected lover or mate cannot afford to believe this, while brooding over the interloper. He calls him a hypnotist, or a thief, or a homebreaker. In this new form of electoral manoeuvre . . . hoping to booby-trap him into stepping down from the platform of Prime Minister to play political quiz games for television.

Says Douglas Is No Mouse

For once Tommy Douglas has let us down. This master of smiles and fables is picturing Canada as a mouse that is about to be devoured by terrible monsters. But the mouse-trap he classes himself with the mice. Now, in spite of his size, we can think of no better mousey than Mr. Douglas. If he humiliates, he wants to prove we are wrong we'll take him on.

But the simile does remind us of a certain political campaign in Saskatchewan which the then Liberal leader, Walter Tucker, who was an ample target for jibes, made a debate. At one point Mr. Tucker said his thunderous voice to announce that he could swallow Tommy Douglas in one gulp.

"Yes, indeed," Tommy replied. "But if that should happen, what a phenomenon we would have: a man with more brains in his stomach than in his head."

Insanity Is a Legal Term Rather Than a Medical Term

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Please explain the difference between "mental illness," "insanity" and "neurasthenia" (nervousness).—M.R.C.

It's all a matter of terms. In the case of physical health, how sick do you have to be to say you are ill? Does it mean sick in bed? Does it mean a cold? Does it mean having a wart, a corn on your toe or a sour stomach?

It's the same with mental illness. (I really prefer the term "emotional illness, however.) Many a person needs a bit of help from time to time in getting the emotions under control, learning how to submerge worry about things that can't be helped, or the like.

In more serious cases, however, a person may have to go to a psychiatrist or mental clinic for conditioning or therapy. Then we apply the term mental illness.

Insanity is a legal rather than a medical term, and lawyers, judges and doctors have been arguing for several hundred years over exactly what it means.

I doubt that we will ever find any precise dividing line between sane and insane, even though our courts on occasion have the difficult task of trying to find it.

It's like an argument over whether a man with a headache is sick enough to stay home or is well enough to go to work. It depends on how bad the headache is. A man with a mild hangover isn't completely well, but his headache isn't severe enough to warrant putting him on a sick leave. It becomes a matter of judgment and circumstances.

Crazy originally meant "cracked" or "having flaws," and subsequently took on the added meaning of having something wrong with the mind. Insanity, it has no precise meaning medically.

For example, you might say someone is "sick as a dog," but medically the term has no meaning. The person so described might have gastritis, gall stones, a coronary, acute rheumatoid arthritis, a heart hole in the septum or a terrible attack of neuralgia.

In any event, mental illness or emotional illness is the best term to use, and after that it's a matter of deciding how serious or how mild the case may be.

Dear Dr. Molnir: Three months ago I had a gall bladder operation. My problem is I've gained weight because of the rest and inactivity of recuperation. Can you suggest a few safe exercises for tummy and waistline? — Mrs. R.C.

No, because your doctor is the only one who should prescribe whatever exercises, (if any) may be safe in your case. People may gain considerable weight during convalescence. We don't use up our calories in exercise — but the habit of eating doesn't change unless we consciously pay attention to it. The answer: And in your case better late than never! is to eat small-er portions of everything.

Note to J.K.: The chances for cure which appears first in syphilis cases usually develope in two or three weeks and rarely, under ten days after infection. The Kahn or Wassermann test will show a positive result about 4 to 6 weeks after infection and usually after the chancre appears.

Candidates Speak All MacInnis

Windsor Star

Voters in Cape Breton South can be excused if they scratch their heads over the latest outbursts from Mr. Donald MacInnis, Conservative member in the federal Parliament, running again, Mr. Earl Macdonald, the Liberal candidate, and Mr. Malcolm MacInnis, that of the New Democratic Party.

The entry of an extra candidate with the same surname as that of a prime minister and an old political trick, especially in Quebec where the voter, if he's only a stooge, put in for the deliberate purpose of confusing voters with the idea some mistakenly will vote for him rather than the other.

In Cape Breton South this is unlikely. It is just that down there all the extra of family names starting with "Mac." Voters there are less likely to be confused by three candidates with the one family name than in most elsewhere. There is a long experience in Cape Breton in sorting out who is who.

ENJOYMENT IN ACTION

The happiest people are those who have something to do all the time, something interesting and useful.

I have never known a loafer who was happy. Loafers are always complaining of fate and begrudging the fortune of those who work and achieve. Even the big money makers do not strive for money alone. Not one big man in a hundred makes himself with the idea of getting rich. He does it because work itself gives him the keenest pleasure. It has always been so.

The more you do, the more you want to do. Action is contagious.

I have noticed that those who do the most seem to have the least in the judgment of those about them. They are themselves; they seem most to accomplish the least. That's why they keep right on with achievement.

But it is what work does to the mind that counts most. An idle mind and folded hands have no idea what to think about, or what to do. A busy mind action loses itself in the thing being done. Mind at work has clear identities and are modeled into the things produced.

All that is in work is works in harmony when he is progressing toward an end in which he is vitally interested.

I believe the people doing the things that give them pleasure. A man cannot become a good mechanic, doctor or lawyer in time thinking of what he might have been as a lawyer, a doctor, or a teacher.

To rise high and to be dominant, you must love the things you do.

It is good people doing the many things that you would rather not do, but it is poor judgment to keep at them.

Enjoy your work. No matter what you do, do it better than the job has ever been done before!

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

WHAT'S THE RUSH?

We are accustomed to the warning, "Stop, look and listen." At railroad crossings we give it some attention, but as a general admonition regarding our everyday activities we pay slight attention to it.

In other words, we are all too likely to make hasty decisions and to plunge precipitantly into courses of action. There are occasions when we have only a little time — perhaps a split second — to make a decision. But in most decisions we can take a reasonable amount of time to mull things over.

We speak of hasty marriages. Such relationships entered into hastily frequently lead to the divorce court. We can all remember times in our lives when we made a hasty business decision, or decided upon some course of action which we later regretted. There is such a thing, of course, as spending too much time in thinking about an issue, until we become confused and morbid. But more often we err on the side of too hasty a decision.

What's the rush anyway? Is it not true that in making most of our decisions we can afford to take a little time? If this is true, then let us not make the mistake of precipitant, or perhaps reckless, action. An extra hour, an extra day, an extra year given to reflection on some vital issue may someday pay big dividends.

A little reflection and self-restraint now may save a lot of trouble later on.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

It is now impossible to get lost. A jet can spot a small aircraft will come and spot your smoke signal. Or somebody with a transistor loud-talker will get up on a neighboring hill and call you down.

An old mining engineer and prospector who was a boyhood schoolmate of mine was denouncing the security that is building up around us, making us soft.

"On the one hand," he says, "we have all these things to make us comfortable and secure, while on the other hand the threat of megaton missiles. Not only can't we get lost any more, but it is impossible to starve. All mankind used to fear starving to death. A couple of generations ago. Now a vast social set-up forbids that to happen. Instead, they'll strap us down and feed us intravenously. We can't go to hell any more, because hell has been abolished. There is nothing left to be scared of now but the atomic bomb."

He is going to spend the summer prospecting islands and shoals in Hudson Bay, looking for fissionable materials, no doubt.

Official of Hydro Denies Office Here or at Ottawa Will Be Closed and Sold

Rumors to the effect that the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission might close out the Belleville headquarters of the East Central Region were denied today by Mr. W. J. Ransom, public relations officer for the local region.

"Any rumors being circulated in town are no foundation in fact and are far in advance of Hydro planning," Mr. Ransom said.

Mr. Ransom noted that any change which might result from the recent amalgamation of the East Central Region and the Eastern Region would take place over an extended period.

He added that there had been no change in the name of the regions and both were still operating as separate entities.

The rumor being heard about the city is that one of the two headquarters offices, either Belleville or Ottawa, would be sold with the combined headquarters of the amalgamated regions to be established in the remaining office.

The new regional hydro office on East Dundas Street was opened here about three years ago. The Ottawa office is a duplicate about a year or so previous.

U.S. Will Try Again to Test Big Rocket

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A sixth attempt to launch the Centaur high-energy space rocket on its maiden test flight was scheduled for today.

Five previous launching efforts dating back to April 8 were erased by weather and technical troubles. On April 27, the countdown reached zero and the engines fired, but a power failure failed to disconnect from the second stage and an electronic system ordered the engines to shut down.

Earlier troubles associated with the envisioned liquid hydrogen as a fuel had delayed the initial test flight nearly a year.

The second stage of the Centaur has the first rocket engines nourished by hydrogen, which provides 15 per cent greater thrust performance than conventional fuels. The first firing is to be a brief 15-minute ballistic test to check rocket systems and performance of hydrogen in the weightlessness of space.

and steadily mounting employment.

Mr. Pearson, personally canvassing support for re-election in the Ontario riding he has represented since 1948, took issue with Mr. Diefenbaker's election approach. He told an audience of about 300 in the pulp and paper town of Espanola that the prime minister should concentrate on solutions to Canadian problems rather than attack the Liberal party.

"At the moment, he (Mr. Diefenbaker) is the head of the government and instead of whacking us, he might have been more effective in saying what he was going to do," said the Liberal leader, referring to Mr. Diefenbaker's keynote address in London, Ont., last Saturday.

The prime minister's speech had seemed to miss the point that jobs were more important than "personal criticism," personal attack."

Mr. Pearson accused the Conservatives of not fulfilling previous election pledges to cut unemployment, reduce expenditures, slice taxes and balance budgets.

ATTACKS OLD PARTIES

The Social Credit leader, speaking before a crowd of some 300 in the industrial city of Brantford, said Canadians are half enslaved by the governmental system of the old traditional parties. Approximately 46.5 cents of every dollar earned went to support a debt-laden economy.

Canada's major problem was that it could not distribute its wealth to the consumer through the existing economic system.

He told reporters in Montreal it is "not necessary to sell your freedom to have security."

Touching on foreign policy, he said it is not necessary for Canada to have nuclear weapons. Canada should go on a peace offensive to help emerging nations achieve a democratic path.

At Cornwall, NDP National President Michael Oliver filled in for Mr. Douglas. Speaking mainly in French, he outlined Saskatchewan's medical health plan.

Agrologists Elect 1962-3 Officers

Quinte Branch of the Ontario Institute of Agrologists, part of the Agricultural Institute of Canada, held its annual meeting at Maple Inn, Bloomfield, last Thursday evening under the chairmanship of retiring president Hank Heerema.

An excellent dinner was followed by a stimulating discussion and all the slate of business the new slate of officers was installed.

The discussion was to explore what is being done and what can be done for the betterment of "Education in Agriculture."

This was the continuation of a subject taken up during the March meeting which was too broad to be concluded in one session.

Source leaders were Roy Class of the Kemptville Agricultural School, and agricultural representatives and extension men and high school teachers of agriculture and the whole group took active part.

Mr. Heeney thanked his officers and executive for able work and generous support in a successful season with a brief, but well presented, address. Mr. Robbitt, president-elect, William Babbitt, will fill the office of trustee.

Other officers elect are: 1st vice-president, Morley Webber; 2nd vice-president, Dr. Howard House; secretary - treasurer, J. E. Armand; bulletin editor, Ralph Banbury; executive committee: Waller Rutherford, Ivan Bell and Keith Senior.

All members heartily endorsed Mr. Babbitt's tribute to Mr. Heeney for his distinguished leadership.

SEARCH FOR FOOD

RECIFE, Brazil (AP) — Thousands of hungry field hands and their families are abandoning the drought-stricken northeast plains and swarming into towns to beg for work and food. Paulo Guerra, acting governor of Pernambuco state, has declared a state of emergency and ordered the food supplies taken over for distribution in drought areas.

Evidence Given for Court Declaration by J.M. Parrott To Unseat Ald. D. Whalen

Argument by counsel in the application of local subdivider John M. Parrott for a court declaration to unseat Alderman Donald J. Whalen as member of city council was scheduled for this afternoon following hearing of evidence in the case this morning.

The case against Ald. Whalen was heard before Hastings County Judge J. C. Anderson who adjourned proceedings for argument this afternoon. Robert A. Pringle, Q.C., is appearing for Mr. Parrott, while Ben Hurley is acting as counsel for Alderman Whalen.

The application by Mr. Parrott to have Alderman Whalen unseated, claimed as grounds that the alderman had tendered through Willis E. Brewster for the purchase of city owned lands, and that he deceived council into believing the lands were being sold for more than they were sold.

Other grounds claimed in the application was that Alderman Whalen as owner of property part of a one foot reserve held by Stanley Park Ltd., used his office without disclosing his interest and persuaded council from taking over the one foot reserve.

NO EVIDENCE TAKEN

(The city has now moved to take over the one foot reserve however and is now considering the above grounds was taken at this morning's hearing).

At the conclusion of this morning's hearing, Mr. Hurley as counsel for Ald. Whalen, admitted his client had approached Mr. Brewster last November and had asked him to submit tenders for the purchase of city owned park property. This Mr. Brewster had agreed to do.

Evidence earlier in the hearing showed however that while Mr. Brewster had submitted tenders for the park property, the lots in question had not actually been sold.

The two lots on Bradgate Road and Elizabeth Crescent were five per cent park land property and as such approval from the Department of Municipal Affairs was necessary before they could be sold.

Council approved of the tenders submitted by the Brewster but appraisals raised by the department were higher than the tenders received and department approval for their sale was not given.

HIGHEST RECEIVED

Mr. Brewster's tenders of $3,000 and $2,000 for the two lots were the highest received.

Giving evidence at this morning's hearing were City Clerk Adam Dalziel, Arthur L. Jobey, city purchasing agent, and City Manager J. R. Reynolds.

Mr. Parrott was also called to the stand and told the court he had learned about the tenders early in March following a council meeting.

He said he had learned of the matter while talking with Mr. William Argue and local realtor Gerald Joyce.

changed, with the index staying at 134.0. Rents showed no change and home - ownership costs edged higher, but there was a fractional decline in household operation costs resulting mainly from lower electricity rates in Vancouver and Victoria.

Meanwhile, there were mixed trends in wholesale prices.

The price index of 30 industrial raw materials declined to 249.6 from 249.9 between March 30 and April 19, in the same period the index of Canadian farm products at terminal markets rose to 220.3 from 218.9. Both indexes are based on 1935-39 prices equalling 100.

Cannot Sell Fireworks To Minor

It's the law!!!

The sale of fireworks to minors in the city of Belleville is illegal.

With May 24th "fire cracker day" drawing near, Fire Chief Gerald Vance yesterday reminded local merchants of the existence of the local by-law which says no person at any time of the year may sell fireworks to minors under 16 years of age.

Object of the by-law, of course, is an effort to keep fireworks out of the hands of youngsters unless they are supervised by adults, and then cut down on the number of fires which annually result from the indiscriminate use of firecrackers.

The chief warned that conviction on a breach of the by-law can result in a fine of up to $200 for each offence.

Fine Journalist

PRETORIA (Reuters)—A Johannesburg journalist convicted of sending false information about South African affairs to a London newspaper had his $1,400 (£500) fine by an appeal court Monday.

A Supreme Court judge described the conduct of Journalist Dennis Kiley, as "appalling," but reduced a fine of 800 rand ($1,120) to 400 rand ($560).

Kiley was appealing against his conviction in December, 1960, of attempting to contravene the Prisons Act by sending stories to the now defunct London News - Chronicle about prisons and prisoners that contained false information.

Win Trips To United Nations

The winners of the 20th Annual Odd Fellows' and Rebekahs' United Nations Pilgrimage for Youth for District 27 have been announced following examinations held on Saturday, April 21, 1962.

Chosen as representatives and winners was Miss Marie Sarginson, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Sarginson of North Park Drive, Belleville. Marie is a student at the Quinte Secondary School whose interest in history, in international affairs and current events will make her an ideal representative of this district.

The purpose of the tour is to give representatives an opportunity to see the United Nations in action, to learn about behind the scene functions and to understand the relationship of one's home community with the affairs of the world.

Through the chosen representative the community may benefit from the knowledge and experience by having her tell the story of her journey as often as possible in as many possible during the coming year.

TO SERVE

To win the contest is not therefore to receive a prize in the usual sense, rather one has to receive an opportunity to serve one's schoolmates and fellow citizens in an unusual and self-exacting way.

The committee is thankful it is gratifying to the district officials to find so many young people came forward to participate in the competition and suitable recognition will be given all of them.

Mr. Neil Miles was chosen as official alternate. Neil, ranked next to Miss Sarginson in the competition, will be her companion dates were Mr. George Hogle, of the Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School, Miss Mary Walker, also of B.C.I.V.S., and Miss Margaret Walker and Miss Suzanne Hogle, students of Moira Secondary School.

He settled in Belleville and has been with her by chance and has not regretted doing so. He operates a painting and interior decorating business in partnership with Mr. John Gibson. He has two three daughters, and one son. Mrs. Sarginson is a charming hostess. Her home reflects her good taste and care. Besides her family she loves good books and good coffee.

W.I. Holds Grandmothers' Meeting

RYLSTONE — The May meeting of Rylstone Women's Institute was held in the Sunday School room of Zion United Church, Frederick's Corners, on Wednesday afternoon, May 2nd, with the president, Mrs. Stanley Kerr, as hostess, and an attendance of eight members and one visitor and one school-age child.

Mrs. Kerr, the new president, was in charge of business.

The new secretary - treasurer, Mrs. Allan Stewart, gave the minutes of the previous meeting and the treasurer's report. Discussion followed on joining the Hastings County Home Assembly, but it was decided not to join as some of the members already find it difficult at times to attend the local Institute meetings. The president, Mrs. Kerr, was chosen to be the delegate to the North Hastings District Institute annual meeting, to be held at Ivanhoe on May 17. She will give a two-minute talk entitled "I Am Not Afraid of Tomorrow, For I Have Seen Yesterday and I Love Today." Mrs. Ernest Irwin will attend the officers' conference, to be held at Gooding Lake.

A motion was presented and carried to pay the $25 carried over's fee for the use of the Sunday School room for the past year.

As there are not enough girls available in the community to keep the Girls' Club going at present, their money has been temporarily taken over by the Institute until such time as another girls' club is organized. There will be no June meeting and the July meeting will be held at Crow River Hall for historic grounds, on July 4th.

Mrs. Don Rose was convener for the program of this grandmothers' meeting. Readings were given by the following: "The Cost of High Living," by Mrs. Percy Reid; "A Little Parable for Mothers," by Mrs. Carl Reid; "How Old Are You?" by Mrs. Chester McMeekin, and "Behind the Scenery," by Mrs. Don Kerr.

WEDDINGS

BARTMAN — JEFFERY

PICTON — Easter lilies decorated the altar of South Bay United Church when Carolyn Joy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Jeffery, R.R. 1, Milford, became the bride of Raymond Henry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thaddeus Bartman, R.R. 1, Milford. A former minister officiated at the ceremony, the Rev. Ian Fleming, of Georgetown, was assisted by the Rev. R. Cole of Milford in performing the ceremony.

Traditional music was played by the organist, Robert Jeffery, and Picton cousin of the bride. Mrs. Gordon L. Bell of Cherry Valley sang "O Perfect Love" and "A Wedding Prayer."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore the same gown which was worn by her elder sister at her wedding, of white satin with lace top and the sacts of lace on the skirt, worn over white satin, it featured a long fitted bodice, full bouffant skirt and sequin trim at the neckline. A waist-length veil of embroidered nylon was held by a sequin-trimmed crown. She carried red roses with white heart and lily-of-the-valley and fern.

Miss Barbara Moore, Milford, eldest sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Misses Nancy and Frances Bolen, cousins of the bride, were bridesmaids. They wore floor-length dresses of light blue lace and net over satin, shoulder-length veils held by matching crown deaders and carried colonial bouquets of white and blue pons, lily-of-the-valley and fern.

The flower girl was the bride-groom's niece, Miss Janet Bartman, of Belleville. Her short length dress of blue lace embroidered in silver and she wore a wreath of small white flowers in her hair. She carried a basket of white pons centred with blue forget-me-nots.

The ringbearer was the bride's youngest brother, little Gordon Jeffery. He dressed in long pant trousers and dark jacket. He carried his white, heart-shaped satin pillow.

Mr. Donald Bartman, Belleville, was groomsman for his brother and the ushers were Mr. Harold Bartman and Mr. Milton Jeffery.

About 95 guests attended the reception in the South Bay Church Hall. The bride's mother chose a dress of beige double-knit cotton, beige hat, green accessories and corsage of pink carnations. The bridegroom's mother wore light blue nylon over taffeta, white accessories and with corsage of white carnations.

The bride's table, with a white linen cloth, was centred with the three-tiered cake which was topped by a miniature bride and bridegroom, the base surrounded by blue net sprinkled with silv-of-the-valley. White lupins in a silver basket and low bowls of blue and white pons completed the arrangement.

MALCOLM—LAMBERT

Tall white standards of pink gladioli and white pons adorned the chancel in Holloway Street United Church, and white satin bows the guest pews, on Saturday, April 14, at 2.00 p.m., for a lovely double-ring wedding when Lorne Rene Lambert of Belleville, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Mieske of Deseronto, Ontario, was united in marriage by the Rev. C. W. Colemen, pastor of the church, to James Gerald Malcolm, of Belleville, son of Mrs. Harry McTaskie of Belleville, and the late Samuel Malcolm.

The wedding music was rendered by the organist, Mr. Clifford Templar, who accompanied the soloist, Mrs. Pat Downs, in her rendition of "The Wedding Prayer," and "O Promise Me."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was radiantly lovely in her white silk organza sheath design bridal gown featuring a fitted bodice having a scoop neckline topped by a beautiful lace back-buttoned bolero with sheath-like sleeves, and threaded through with turquoise velvet ribbon suggesting an empire waistline. She wore a tiara of iridescent crystal and seed pearls with circular veil of turquoise net, and carried a cascade of white mingled with white feathered carnations and trailing ivy.

She was attended by Mrs. Jane Cannon of Belleville, as matron of honor who was gowned in turquoise blue silk organza with scooped neckline, and tiny cap sleeves. Self-colored bands across the deep hem of the skirt lent a graceful broadness with a matching headdress and wide gloves.

The bridesmaids, Mrs. Stella DeVries, and Mrs. Marilyn Fields, of Belleville, were gowned similarly to that of the matron of honor, in silk organza in Fields pink and canary yellow, respectively, fashioned with fitted bolero bodices having scoop necklines and pouffed shirred skirts. They wore white gloves and white-pink headdresses with short circular veils, and carried Colonial bouquets of pons in shades matching their gowns.

Mr. Fred Vrooman of Belleville attended the bridegroom, while Messrs. Joseph Malcolm and John Malcolm, both of Belleville, brothers of the bridegroom, ushered the guests.

Following the ceremony, the reception was held at the Sheine Club, "Belleville, with one hundred guests present. The bride's table was daintily appointed with white damask and centred with the traditional three-tier wedding cake topped with miniature bride and bridegroom and surrounded by the bridal bouquets. After the reception, dancing continued till midnight.

The bride's mother, wearing a navy sheath with matching jacket; white pedal hat, white gloves navy bag and shoes, and corsage of pink and white carnations, received. She was assisted in the receiving line by the bridegroom's mother, who wore navy sheer crepe with three-quarter sleeves, and neckline edged in white; white hat and gloves, navy shoes and bag, with corsage of pink carnations.

For the Niagara Falls, London, Toronto honeymoon the bride donned a turquoise two-piece knit ensemble with bodice of printed pastel shades of pink, turquoise and white; white pedal organza hat, black patent accessories, and pink coral, and white gloves, with corsage of pink garnet rose.

Guests from out-of-town were from Moscow, B.C., Ottawa; Toronto; Detroit; Hemmer, Wellington; Tweed, and Slate Falls.

Previous to her marriage, the bride was honored by the girls of the Northern Electric Company at a surprise linen shower, Mrs. Douglas Cranmiss, of Holloway, entertained the bride-to-be at a shower with Mrs. Dean Graham as co-hostess. The Northern Electric Company also presented her with a gift.

Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm are residing at 66 Murney Street, Belleville.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

BARBARA LEIGH

SURMOUNTING COURTESY

The flowers are blooming, the lawns green in every yard, and the pride of the house need of mowing. Time to mow that neighbor has all the tools.

In other words, summer is fast approaching and with it the seasonal onslaught on the bad neighbor policy.

I've heard people say, I'm sure you've said it yourself, "I'll never lend my lawn mower to that person. Do you remember how he kept it for months."

But genial Joe can turn him an offer when the paint brush is spattered, weeds are growing between chunks of the cement slabs of path you used to paint the guest room.

The situation worsens if Joe has a paint job of his own to do and has to leave touching up your door to get back his own property.

Late Spring and Summer may be the season of poetry, I'm sure, and the barbecue pit, but it's also the time of the year when diplomatic relations with your good neighbor can suffer because of an unwise lapse in lend-lease.

There's no excuse for borrowing equipment and not returning it after a reasonable time and in at least as good condition as when you borrowed it. In fact, my husband makes it his business to brush a lawn mower and sharpen a saw before actually look better than when he got them.

Some of my friends believe in the adage, "Never a lender nor a borrower be." I don't completely agree. You're sure to get out of trouble if you don't borrow, but there's nothing wrong with the practice if you complete your obligations and follow a few sensible rules. Such as:

If the tool breaks or if you bend the lawn-mower blade, fix or replace it at your own expense.

Try to be as careful about equipment as if you owned it. Don't make it do a job it isn't designed to do, especially if it's something with a motor.

Check the machine in front of the owner so both of you can verify the kind of shape it was in when you borrowed it.

Don't ever lend borrowed tools to a third party. The great owner may not be communicated as you thought you are.

Don't comment about the "inferiority" of the equipment, either before or after using it.

Let the neighbor know your kind of tools and machines you own so he can join your share-the-wealth program.

Don't borrow too often. If it gets to be a habit, it's time to go shopping at the local hardware store.

THE FASHION COUNCIL

Monroe M. — He's quite a holding his counsel for a ridiculous reason.

Mr. N. R. — They would be married by

Monroe M. — I've been wanting to marry Diane for a year now, and she's under age for her first and only consent.

And what do you think his reason is? That Diane and I refuse to grow up and have a normal wedding. Mr. R. is such a strait-laced guy. Even when he's relaxing at home, he wears a necktie. As for us kids, our friends and wouldn't be caught dead in striped pants, fancy silks and satins. We'd like to have our pals present at our wedding and we don't want to inflict all the pomp and circumstance on them, even if we were willing to embarrass ourselves.

If he continues to be so stubborn about this, we'll just have to elope another five months. Diane will be 21 then and we can plan the kind of wedding we want.

• • •

Mr. N. R. — It's not just the fact that they'd like to have a modern bride and groom. I object to it, it's their complete disdain for all the amenities of life.

Monroe used to be a neat, ambitious young fellow. We've known him and his family for over ten years. Up to a few months ago we encouraged and approved of the romance between him and Diane. Then he jumped on the wrong bandwagon and fell for Digby Dime there, too. They pal around with the boogie-drum long hairs now and haven't been out of their sneakers for weeks!

True, it may be a passing phase. But marriage isn't. I won't be a party to making a farce of a sacred ceremony. I'll give consent and I'll foot the bill. But I insist upon "conformity" here.

The Council: We can't blame Mr. R. for wanting his daughter's wedding to look like one, rather than like a revival meeting or a poetry reading. But, more important than how the bride and groom are dressed is the understanding on the part of the principals, of the ceremony, step by step, and the reason for each one, whether trot in sneakers or light tone dressed.

Monroe and Diane will be pleasing to be responsible people and responsible for themselves, each other and their future children. In that spirit, it would add to the dignity of their vows to look responsible. Sneakers are the garb of the child, the

Fashion Week Is Opened By Countess

LONDON (CP) — Canadian buyers are among 2,000 persons from the International fashion scene who watched the opening of London's fashion week at the Savoy.

This brick-pretty event, sponsored by the fashion house group of London to present the best of British ready-to-wear clothes to overseas buyers and journalists, got under way with three shows by 25 of the group's member firms.

In just over an hour some 300 models of autumn clothes were displayed, ranging from simple wool suits and tweed dresses to elaborate ball gowns in the grand manner.

Each manufacturer concentrated on one or two basic colors for his collection and one built up a display on the theme of the perennial "little black dress."

Brocade was a popular choice for cocktail and evening dresses, in dazzling combinations of copper and gold, lime and gold or claret and gold.

The shows will continue throughout the week, laced with receptions for the overseas visitors.

Roast Turkey Talk and Potato Pointers

by Mary Moore

It is a quiet morning and I have a few quiet ideas on diverse but not sensational topics. If you are a first-time roaster you may want to fill its some three and one-half pounds on your turkey roasting recipe card.

On Easter Sunday before church in Ottawa at Marianne's house, I stuffed (with the help of Gary and Davey) a ten-lb. fresh never frozen turkey. (It cost Herbie M.M.) I buttered the skin all over and sprinkled it lightly with salt. I put it in a open roaster on a trivet and roasted it at 350 deg. Fahr. for 5¾ hours. During the middle three hours of this roasting time I covered with a "tent" of heavy-duty wide foil. During the last one hour it was uncovered to brown. In the bottom of the roasting pan was 1 cup of liquid which I added to the cooked giblets and their liquid to make gravy.

TUESDAY

baby Beef Liver with Mushroom Gravy; Oven Hash Brown Potatoes; Cauliflower with Grated Cheese; Tossed Greens with Dill Dressing; Deep Apple Pie with Cheddar Cheese; Tea.

The turkey was tock-tender, moist and a joy to the carver to slice.

The next topic is potatoes. When Carny was here she emphasized the importance of help to working wives. Her husband is adoctor and since their family is grown and married and away she is his office nurse. In the office evenings they arrive home together tired and hungry.

CARNEY'S STUFFED POTATOES:

She has devised some time and temper-saving foods. On her day off sometimes she will bake 4 large potatoes at 450 deg. Fahr. until very tender. She then cuts them in halves, scoops out centres, mixes this with beaten egg and milk and butter and salt and pepper and fills shells again. Then she wraps these carefully in foil which has a well-oiled oven-to-table and freezer liner. When she and Joe return home at night she switches on the oven to 400 deg., puts two of these frozen stuffed potatoes in the oven, in the foil, and by the time she has her salad and the meat and dessert fruit ready, the potatoes have thawed and are heated through and delicious and a great favorite with Joe.

This is a good tip for many of you girls who like to stock your freezers in advance, for last service when emergencies arise.

We had some Best Stroganoff leftover from Saturday night's dinner. I was out of rice and cooked noodles around quickly for something to
